M'ADOO MAINTAINS LEAD THROUGH FIFTEEN BALLOTS

Democratic National Convention Adjourns at Midnight With No Presidential Nomination in Sight—Twelve Hours of Balloting Serve Merely to Advance McAdoo and Smith—Neither One Within Striking Distance of a Nomination—Fifteen Ballots Gave McAdoo 479 and Smith 305—Latter Made Most Gain During Balloting—John W. Davis, Gaining 33 is in Third Place.

Madison Square Garden, New York, June 30.—As midnight approached the democratic national convention had completed its fifteenth ballot and a nominee still was being sought.

Twelve hours of balloting had served merely to advance McAdoo and Smith in a steady gradual movement and to bring neither one within striking distance of a nomination. If it established anything it established that each of them has a one-third vote on the other. Smith, although he ran second, made the most gain during the balloting. Although he started with 240 in the first ballot he had gone to 305.5 at the close of the fifteenth, McAdoo starting at 431 on the first ballot had climbed to 479.

John W. Davis, of West Virginia starting at 31 on the first ballot had advanced to 64.5 and was in third ace at the finish with 61.

At the conclusion of the announcement of the fifteenth ballot Chairman Krenker of the Montana delegation, a McAdoo floor leader, moved an adjournment until 10.30 tomorrow morning. The convention didn't wait for the motion to be put and carried. It merely piled our while it was being done. The band struck up "Home Sweet Home," and the convention hall was emptied quicker than it would have been if a troupe of the elephants which often sojourn there had suddenly got loose. Some changes were predicted for tomorrow's balloting. Whether there would be a nomination or not was anybody's gues.

One politician remarked: "The ice is 12 inches thick; there isn't a crack in sight."

None the less all the rival candidate managers went out smiling and remarking that everything was as they expected, quite as they had predicted and that nothing about the whole day's balloting showed anything hostile or unfavorable to their causes.

At six minutes after eight, Chairman Walsh began gavelling and the delegates began to sit down.

Prayer was offered by Father Duffy, the doughty fighting chaplain of the fighting Sixty-ninth, a national figure on his own account, probably as well known as any politician in the convention, and a fighting man welcome in the company of soldiers irrespective of their religious persuasions.

The prayer over—and it was short and to the point—the calling of the roll of states was ordered and the story of the ballot is here taken up again with the beginning of the tenth ballot.

The big whoop came with Kansas, as forecast earlier. Under the unit rule the Sunflower state transferred her 20 from Governor Davis to McAdoo. It was the first slide of any proportions to anybody and the McAdoo managers probably had saved it up to start off the night session.

It produced the first parade of the standards to start during the balloting. It gathered force slowly because the band leader was slow taking his cue, but when he opened up and began blaring out a march, McAdoo delegates with state standards began filing out in the aisles bawling, whoop-las and wah-hoos. The demonstration probably would have been greater, noisier and rougher if more delegates had been in their seats. Chairman Walsh stood at his desk and calmly surveyed the first show of real enthusiasm developed during the balloting.

Despite a good many delegates in the aisles, shouting for McAdoo, whole blocks of them were in their seats. Five minutes or so was enough, Chairman Walsh thought, and he began gavelling again. It was time for business again.

Maryland still was with Governor Ritchie with her 16, and Massachusetts split among the field again but without a change from the division given on the ninth ballot.

There was no decision on the tenth ballot.

Once more the clerk went at it—for the eleventh time—and got the usual twenty-four from Alabama for Underwood; and found no change in Arizona, Arkansas, California, in Colorado, McAdoo lost a vote to Smith. It gave 3 1-2 to McAdoo, 3 to John W. Davis, 3 to Smith, 1 to Underwood, a half to Glass, and one for George L. Berry, of the Pressmen's union, a vice presidential candidate.

Connecticut's fourteen went to Smith 7 7-10; McAdoo 6 3-10.

Delaware was not ready yet to quit Saulsbury and her six remained as firm as did Florida's 12 for McAdoo, with Georgia's 28. Idaho's still remained in the McAdoo pile. Illinois, however, divided again, once more Brennan was not ready but there were evidences that he was getting ready. This time the vote from Illinois ran: Smith 18, Cox 10, Governor Davis 9, Walsh 1, Governor Bryan 3, John W. Davis 2, Robinson 1, McAdoo 13, Governor Brown 1. Indiana once more announced her 30 for Ralston by a fair Hoosier maid.

There was no nomination on the 11th and the clerk was ordered back at the job of calling the roll for the 12th time.

The 12th ballott having produced no results the clerk went into the 13th.

A fresh reading clerk tackled the 13th ballot.

HINTS COURT PROCEEDINGS AGAINST "CERTAIN CANDIDATE"

Kansas City, June 30.—From his sick bed here today, Senator Jahes A. Reed, issued a statement in which he asserted that if "certain candidate" whose name is now before the democratic convention is nominated for the presidency, the democratic party will likely be compelled to conduct its campaign in a federal court room defending its candidate against serious charges for violation of federal statutes. He did not name the candidate referred to.

Senator Reed dictated this statement:

"Of course, I do not know what the convention will do, but I should be greatly surprised if it should nominate as a candidte for president a man whom the republican leaders in all probability are eagerly waiting the opportunity to indict for violating the federal statutes which forbid federal employes and officers appearing before deparments within two years after their employment to touch any matter or claim pending during the time of their employment.

"The facts do not seem to be in dispute and should we nominate such a man we are likely to be compelled to conduct our campaign in some federal court room. Defending our candidate against a serious criminal charge instead of being led by him in a great battle to be fought out in the public forum, where the democratic party would have the natural advantages, springing from the fact that bribery thus far uncovered has been confined to officials of the opposite party.

"But that kind of an issue would not get us very far if the republicans were able to truthfully charge that those who had corrupted Fall had employed our candidate, and that in addition to this employment he had appeared on behalf of the Republic Iron and Steel Works before a department of the government on a tax controversy within two years after his connection with the very department, in absolute violation of the federal statutes—well I do not think the democratic convention will make so serious a mistake as to undertake to force a man of that charcter before the American people. Should he be, he will be utterly routed at the polls."

"There can be no mistake as to whom you mean," senator," he was asked.

"I do not intend there should be," he answered.

Fall is Indicted by Grand Jury

Ex-Cabinet Member and Three Oil Operators Are Charged With Criminal Action in Connection With Leasing of Oil Reserves.

Washington, June 30.—Indictments charging Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, Harry F. Sinclair, Edward L. Doheny and E. L. Doheny, Jr., with criminal action in connection with the leasing of naval oil reserves in Wyoming and California, were returned today in the District of Columbia supreme court.

A special grand jury which has given two weeks to consideration of evidence levelled formal charges of felony against the four men, whose names have held the spotlight in the prolonged senate oil investigation and the civil litigation which followed.

Fall and the two Dohenys, the first indictment charge, entered into and maintained an unlawful conspiracy from July 1 to December 11, 1922, to enable the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport company, and its subsidiary, the Pan American Petroleum company, to obtain control of naval oil reserve number 1 in California.

Similarly, the second indictment said, Fall and Sinclair conspired unlawfully between December 31, 1921, and April 7, 1922, to give the Mammoth Oil company, a Sinclair corporation, control of the Teapot Dome reserve, in Wyoming. The third indictment charged Fall singly with accepting a bribe of $100,000 from the Dohenys to influence his action in the California lease, and accompanying negotiations concerning storage and exchange of naval oil, while the fourth, reserving the same charge, held the Dohenys up for prosecution for paying Fall the money in question.

Much of the evidence and many of the implications dragged to light during the long senate inquisition into the naval reserve leasing were repeated today in formal legal language, in which the court presentments of the grand jury were couched. There was also indication that other accusatory matter had gone before the grand jury, and the conspiracy indictments also recited that "persons unknown" had consorted with the four principals in the activities brought under ban.

Fall, in both the conspiracy charges, was accused of having sought to prevent the government from obtaining competitive bids for exploiting the naval reserves, and of having made false represenattions and statements to prevent the appearance of competitors against the Sinclair and Domeny companies. This resulted in great loss to the government, the indictments said, and unjust profits to the successful lessors.

COOLIDGE CALLS ON DEPT. HEADS TO CUT EXPENSES

Chief Executive Asks for Efficient Administration to Allow Further Reduction in Taxes—President Outlines His Policies for Future in Address Before Over 1,000 Executive Officers—Says Government Payrolls Must Be Reduced—Public Debt Reduced by More Than $2,720,000,000 During Past Three Years, A Saving in Interest of More Than $120,000,000 Annually.

Washington, June 30.—President Coolidge called upon the administrative heads of the government tonight to measure up to "the full teat of our national character," by giving efficient administration so that further reduction in taxes for all of the pepole may be accomplished.

Speaking before more than one thousand executive officers at the seventh semi-annual meeting of the business organization of the government at the close of the fiscal year, the chief executive outlined his policies for the future with the declaration that all of his subordinates must enter into them in spirit as well as in practice.

"I am for economy," the president said. "After that, I am for more economy. * * * We must give the people relief from the excessive burden or taxation."

Mr. Coolidge's program contemplates cutting expenditures to the bone. He wants to continue even more drastically the three year old economy program. To do so, he enjoined those responsible for spending the government's money that every administrative effort be carried on with the absolute minimum of expense. That means, he asserted, that the government payrolls must be reduced.

The president's broad outline of his views was expanded by Director Lord of the Budget Bureau, who warned that those who failed to function sympathetically, or who obey the chief executive's instructions in half-hearted fashion, may as well feel that they are not desired in the government machinery. He added that disloyal ones have no place in the organization. The director explained that the bureau's agents were cognizant of all activities in the government and said he would not fail to call short comings to the president's attention.

The speech was the first by Mr. Coolidge since the republican party selected him as its presidential candidate and he chose in this utterance to review the financial accomplishments of the administration for the past three years. In this period he said there was not reduction in the great public debt of more than $2,720,000,000 and a consequent saving to the people of more than $120,000,000 annually in interest alone.

"What progress we have made in ordering the national finances is easily shown," Mr. Coolidge said. "A comparison of our receipts and expenditures for the last four years illustrates conclusively what has been accomplished during the three years of the budget system.

"For the fiscal year ending June 30, 121, the last pre-budget year, our expenditures were $5,538,000,000 and our receipts $5,624,000,000. For the succeeding three years, which includes the year which ends today, our expenditures were $3,795,000,000, $3,897,000,000 and $3,497,000,000 respectively. Here we show a progressive and consistent reduction in expenditures. On the other side of the ledger our receipts for 1922 were $4,109,000,000, 1923, $4,007,000,000 and 1924, $3,995,000,000 An analysis of these figures shows that in the face of progressive reduction in receipts we have still achieved a substantial surplus at the end of each of the fiscal years—$314,000,000 for 1922, $310,000,000 for 1923 and $498,000,000 for 1924.

"The amounts which I have stated as being the expenditures, receipts and surplus for the fiscal year, 1924, which ends today, are only approximate. We will not hae the actual figures until the books are nfially balanced. The surplus accumulated at the end of each of the last three fiscal years has been applied to the reduction of the public debt in addition to the reduction required by law under the sinking fund and other acts. Without the aid of this recurring surplus the public debt woul dbe $1,100,000,000 more than it now stands, and the interest charges would be some $45,000,000 greater next year than we shall now have to pay.

"Along with this reduction in expenditures has gone a progressive reduction of the public debt with its attendant relief from the burden of interest. On June 30 1921 the public debt was $23,976,000,000. In 1922 it had been reduced more than $1,000,000,000 to $22,964,000,000. In 1924 it has been reduced again by more than $1,000,000,000 and stands at an estimated amount of $21,245,000,000 which is a reduction in 3 years of $2,722,000,00 and means in saving of interest of more than $120,000,000 each year.

The president announced that he would submit estimates of not more than $3,000,000,000 for ependitures in the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1925. He fixed that figures as maximum and instructed the officers under him to find a way to cut $83,000,000 from the present estimates which are of a preliminary character and call for appropriations of $3,83,000,000.

If this cut is made Mr. Coolidge sai dthe surplus for the year covered by those estimates would approximate $108,000,000. He added that he had faith in the ability of the administrative heads to accomplish the purpose.

"Tomorrow we commence a new fiscal year. We will have a smaller revenue by reason of the lessening of the burden of the taxpayer under the new tax law. On the other hand we will have an increase in our fixed charges. The World war adjusted compensation act alone adds approximately $132,000,000 to our fixed charges for 1925. A real battle faces us but we are organized for the fight. The best estimate today indicates a surplus of approximately $25,000,000 for the next fiscal year. * * *

You are now preparing your preliminary estimates for the fiscal year 1926. For that fiscal year it will be my purpose to transmit, to congress estimates of appropriations which, excluding the interest on and reduction in the public debt, and the postal service, will not exceed a total of $3,800,000,000. This tentative limitation is in furtherance of my program for a progressive reduction in the cost of government. * * *

"Let me say here that under the budget and accounting act the only lawful estimates are those which the chief executive transmits to the congress. It is these estimates that call for your loyal support. Unless such support be given, you are fulfilling your obligations to your office. I trust that neither the chief executive nor the appropriations committees of congress again will have occasion to call your attention to the provisions of the budget accounting act. This law must be observed not only in its letter but in its spirit. I herewith serve notice again as chief executive that I propose to protect the integrity of my budgets.

"We must have no carelessness in our dealing with public property or the expenditure of public money. Such a condition is characteristic either of an undeveloped people or of a decadent civilization. America is neither. It stands out strong and vigorous and mature. We must have an administration which is marked, not by the inexperience of youth, or the futility of age, but by the character and ability of maturity. We have had the self-control to put into effect the budget system, to live under it and in accordance with it. It is an accomplishment in the art of self-government of the very highest importance. It means that the American government is not a spendthrift, and that it is not lacking in the force of disposition to organize and administer its finances in a scientific way.

"Ready, in state vs Crispino," said Prosecuting Attorney George R. McKenna in Stonington town court Monday morning. Crispino, whose barber shop at 74 Liberty street was raided Saturday night and contraband wet goods taken to Pawcatuck lockup was put to plea. Attorney John F. Gallagher who appeared for the defendant demurred to the plea which was overruled by Judge William A. Wilcox, and Gallagher waived reading of the complaint.

Charles W. Connors, Pawcatuck man and police officer of the town of Stonington was called as a witness. Attorney Gallagher stated to the court that it seemed hardly necessary for the state to proceed with this witness as he would admit probable cause for guilt. Solicitor McKenna asked that the accused be found probably guilty. In his statement to the court he said that this was an action brought on three counts, actual sale, keeping for sale and reputation. All these are a second offense it is alleged. The defendant had been befpre the court three times, once before committed and at present with a suspended sentence against him. Attorney Gallagher objected to some of the statements made by the state's attorney, especially did he deny that Crispino was under suspended sentence, as the term of probation, he said was ended.

Town Solicitor McKenna said that the defendant had a bad name in Pawcatuck and considering this to be a bind-over case, he thought the presetn bond should be increased to not less than $4,000. Judge Wilcox found probable cause and bound the defendant over in the sum of $3,000 for which defendant's wife, Angelina Crispino, became security, for his appearance in the superior court.

A number of witnesses were under summons for this trial, but they were not called to testify. Spectators were more numerous than average and the court session was held in Borough hall with Patroiman Christopher Ledwith as court officer. It is understood that the maximum penalty on this complaint is $1,000 fine and six months imprisonment on each count, or a total of $3,000 fines, eighteen months imprisonment.

He stated that he belonged to the Marist order, and that he was subject to transfer at any time, without any personal choice in the matter. His orders transferring him to Wheeling were received during the past week and he plans to leave Westerly Wednesday.

Since coming to Westerly, Father Larkin has worked zealously for the advancement of the parish and the church has prospered during his pastorate. Among numerous accomplishments, he has raised a considerable amount of money for the erection of a parochial school.

He came to Westerly in April, 1921, from the Church of the Holy Name of Mary at Algiers, La. He was ordained at Algiers, and had been pastor there for 19 years before coming to Westerly.

The parish at Wheeling, W. Va., is reputed to be the best in that diocese and in addition to the fine church there is a parochial school.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BROADWAY THEATRE

Ladies Notice! For Wednesday matinee the management of the Broadway theatre offers the special price of ten cents for all ladies and in addition all children will be admitted free if accompanied by a lady. If you have no children of your own bring your neighbor's children along.

Herbert Brenon's, The Breaking Point, is another splendid action-romance by the man who made The Spanish Dancer. Nita Naldi, Patsy Ruth Miller, George Fawcett and Matt Moore are featured in the production, which opened at the Broadway theatre Sunday and will continue through Wednesday.

It's an entertaining combination of society love drama and murder mystery, with a dash of the scientific angle that made Black Oxen.

Nita Naldi plays the same kind of a vampirish role she had in The Ten Commandments. Matt Moore is the hero. Miss Miller is cast as Elizabeth Wheeler, Moore's sweetheart, and George Fawcett is a kindly old doctor. Some cast!

The Breaking Point was extremely popular as both a book and play by Mary Roberts Rinehart, but if its reception last night at the Broadway is to be taken as an example, the picture is in for an unusually successful run. There never was a better piece of screen material written, and Julie Herne and Edfrid Bingham have done wonders with the adaption. There are scenes the author never even thought of that go a long way to make The Breaking Point not only one of the most gripping, but also one of the most entertaining productions we have seen in many months.

Naturally, it's a Paramount.

A mermaid comedy and News Kinograms completed a very fine program.

Coming Thursday Why Men Leave Home.

Alma Bennett, who interprets the "vamp" role in John M. Stahl's Why Men Leave Home, the First National picture coming Thursday to the Palace theatre, is one of the very few successful picture players who did not "arrive" via the extra route or because of success on the legitimate stage. She made her screen debut four years ago in an important role in support of Bessie Barriscale.

Among recent pictures in which she has appeared are The Ten Commandments, Manslaughter and Saturday Night.

The cast of Why Men Leave Home, includes: Lewis S. Stone, Helene Chadwick, William V. Mong, Mary Carr, Alma Bennett and Hedda Hopper.

OPPORTUNITIES ACCOUNTING

Public accounting is a comparatively new profession and ranks in dignity and opportunities with the older professions of medicine, law, and engineering.

Each of our states has a set of laws governing the registration of persons who are entitled to be known as Certified Public Accountants (C. P. A.). These laws provide for the appointment of a board of examiners whose duty it shall be to hold examinations in Theory and Practical Accounting, Auditing, and Business Law. Those who are successful in passing these examinations and are otherwise eligible for a certificate are registered and permitted to be known as Certified Public Accountants. About thirty per cent of those who take the examination are successful in passing them, and it is considered quite an honor and distinction to be known as a C. P. A.

The Bentley School of Accounting and Finance, 921 Boylston street, Boston, Mass., is the largest professional school of college grade in the world devoted exclusively to training men for the duties of office manager, cost accountant, auditor, comptroller, treasurer, and public accountant. Its growth during the past seven years from 29 to its present enrollment of 2292 day and evening students is an outstanding romance in the history of professional education. This school occupies one of the finest educational plants in the country devoted to specialized training for business. Excellent dormitory accomodations are provided for students. During the past year 304 positions have been filled through the placement bureau of this school. No charge is made to graduates for this important service. It requires two years to complete the day courses, and four or five years to complete the evening courses, depending upon whether one enters with advanced standing in accounting.

BREED

Closing a three day run at the Breed theatre tonight, the William Fox production of The Temple of Venus offers the beauties of nature, adorned and otherwise. Those of the island of Santa Cruz in the Pacific ocean are unadorned and remarkably effective. The cast of 1,000 west coast bathing girls wears bathing costumes. Phyllis Haver and Mary Philbin have the principal feminine parts, with David Butler in the leading male role, portraying the man who is loved by two girls.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Approximately 5,000 fingerling trout were released Monday—the last day of the trout fishing season of 1924—in brooks in towns in this section of Windham county. The fish came by truck to Danielson from the state fish hatcheries and were promptly taken over by members of the Danielson Rod and Gun club, put into their automobiles and hurried to the points of release. Some of the little fish, which arrived in excellent condition, were swimming in cold, clear brook water—their period of freedom at hand—within 20 minutes after being taken from the truck at the railroad station. Practically all of the fish were released within an hour after their arrival here.

Potentially, the release of these fingerlings represents some good trout fishing in the future. Every care was taken to put them into brooks and localities most favorable to their development. They were let go in small schools rather than released a can at a time, in order that they might not continue to congregate and thereby reduce their chance of getting sufficient food.

As indicating how well the little trout stood the trip from the hatcheries to the brooks it may be mentioned that out of one 6-can lot of approximately 1200 only one was dead when these fish were placed in the brook.

This is the second year in which the Danielson Rod and Gun club has figured in fingerling trout distribution in cooperation with the state. More of it will be done later in the year. The club also has in mind buying several hundred 6-inch trout next summer, from its own funds, and releasing them after the close of the 1925 trout fishing season.

And with the trout fishing season of 1924 now a matter of memory, it will delight the anglers and revive their interest in rod and reel to recall that the open season on bass has arrived this morning, July 1st.

It is not a pleasant prospect that the young people of East Brooklyn face this (Tuesday) morning in meeting the order for general vaccination that was issued Monday by E. C. Babson, health officer of the town of Brooklyn. Yet it is deemed an essential one and to be complied with forthwith."

The order sets forth that all persons to the age of 21, resident in the east section of the town of Brooklyn to a point as far west as South street shall be vaccinated. The vaccination order issued by authority given in Section 2432 of the general statutes of the state, also applies to all other "contacts" whether children or not, this provision, of course, applying to all who have been in immediate association with children who are ill. Mr. Babson's order stipulates that all who are liable to be vaccinated and who decline to do so must remain on their own premises for a period of three weeks, this provision practically constituting a quarantine in such cases.

The order referred to was issued after a visit here Monday of Dr. Lanphere and Dr. Knowlton, representing the state health commission.

Many will comply with the order today, facing with grim determination the possibility of having a sore arm during such a heated period as July.

Monday, at the town farm, near Dayville, occurred the death of Enoch Birch, 72. Mr. Birch had been an inmate at the institution about a week. Prior to that time he had lived in Attawaugan and had been employed in the mill in that village as a weaver. Aside from the fact that he was a native of England, little had been learned about his history up to late Monday afternoon, when an effort was being made to determine whether he has any relatives in this country.

How a democrat can be divided into 6-10th, 3-8th or any other such fractional figure proved a mighty problem Monday to average human beings who were listening to radio returns from the balloting in Madison Square Garden. It has been generally considered in this section of eastern Connecticut that a democrat sufficiently honored to sit in the national convention of his party, must be a complete entity, and not capable of being dissembled and separated into parts, like a Ford, for instance. But the radio man kept right on announing 1-2 vote for one and 1-2 vote for another and finally came through with on total vote of 446 6-10th. That was enough to draw from one man the expression or his desire to see 6-10th of a democrat in action and to find out where the other 4-tenths were and in what manner engaged.

And that sort of dizzy idea suggested a kind of algebraic formula that X multiplied by 3-8ths, divided by 1-16th plus 7-18ths equals one democrat.

The fact is that the functional votes are due to some states sending larger delegations than than they are entitled to have represent them in the convention. For instance, Texas is over-represented by district delegates in the present convention and its district delegaets have 1-6th of a vote each. The same is true of a number of other states, including Massachusetts.

Miss Nora Naylor, a supervisor for the New York Telephone company in the Harlem section of New York is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, recovering from painful injuries received Sunday morning when the small closed car in which she was riding crashed into a telephone pole beside the state highway at Wauregan just south of the John Baton farm. Miss Naylor was cut by flying glass, having her lips lacerated and her forehead injured. It is anticipated that she will be a patient at the hospital for some time. She was removed to the hospital in an ambulance from the institution. The young man who was driving the machine was not seriously hurt and planned to leave Putnam for New York Monday evening.

It is understood that the accident was due to the car striking a hole in the road, this throwing the forward wheels so that they "locked" making it impossible to control the machine.

Members of Moosup Girls' club will be guests this (Tuesday) evening of the members of the Danielson Girls' club at the rooms of the local organization. This will be a gathering of special interest in view of the fact that Mrs. L. S. Ingalls, Miss Corinne Paine and Miss Ruth Fiske, recent delegates from the Danielson club to the 13th biennial convention of the National League of Girls' clubs at Smith college, Northampton, will give a report of that affair, attended by more than 600 delegates.

For the last time until after the hot weather season, members of McGregor Woman's Relief corps, will hold a meeting Wednesday evening. There is to be initiation, discussion of plans for the picnic of the organization, consideration fo some other matters and refreshments are to be served.

Once again Norman Ross of Broad street, one of the most successful followers of the sport in the territory, though he is not yet out of his 'teens, has won the first prize, offered by the Danielson Rod and Gun club, for the largest trout caught by a member of the organization in a Windham county stream during the open season of 1924. He gets an anti-backlash reel valued at $12. To win this he brought in a trout that weighed 2 pounds and 5 ounces. Second prize, a Bristol rod, goes to County Game Warden Charles N. Letters of Putnam, for a trout that weighed 1 pound 6 1-2 ounces and James Kent of Elmville stands to get a creel for a trout he caught that weighed 1 pound 6 ounces.

PUTNAM

In the presence of relatives and friends from Putnam, Worcester, Springfield and Webster, with a niece of the bride, Miss Irene Meunier, from St. Paul, Alberta, Canada, here for the event, Miss Emma Remillard, daughter of Cyrill Remmillard, of Green street, was united in marriage at 7 o'clock, Monday morning at St. Mary's church, with Rene Parent of Webster.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Arthur Routhier, who also celebrated the nuptial mass. There was special music by the 9 o'clock choir.

As the wedding march was played the bridal party moved down the center aisle. Within the sanctuary the bride being a member of the Children of Mary, the ceremony was performed.

Miss Beatrice Maynard of Putnam was the bridesmaid and Joseph Parent of Webster, a brother of the bridesroom, was best man. The bride was gowned in powder blue taffeta with hat to match and carried a Colonial bouquet. The bridesmaid wore cedar green silk, with hatch to match and carried a bouquet.

Following the church ceremony a breakfast was served at the Remillard home where many gifts were on display. During the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Parent left for Camp Rich, Milton, Vt., where they will spend two weeks, after which they will make their home in Webster.

Saturday night, cars driven by Sabin Spalding of Woodstock and Joseph Miller of Putnam were in collision on Woodstock avenue. The Spalding car was proceeding toward Woodstock while the Miller car was coming into the business section of Putnam. The cars did not allow of sufficient distance to pass and it is understood that the glare of headlights was a factor contributing to the accident.

In the Spalding car beside the driver were two women and a child while Miller had with him his father-in-law. All were more or less cut and bruised, the wounds being of a minor nature. Both cars were damaged, the Miller car tipping over.

A small boy was knocked down following the service at the Congregational church, Sunday morning, and received some bruises and possible internal injuries as he complains of a pain in his side. The car that struck the lad was driven by Attorney E. Morse. Mr. Morse had just left the church and had taken in Rev. S. E. ozad, Mrs. G. W. Gilpatric and Mrs. Morse. Mr. Morse started his car and had not shifted gears so slowly was the car moving when out from behind a car parked beside the curb darted a boy. Mr. Morse was but a few feet from the boy when he saw him and then the boy disappeared. Mr. Morse fearing that he had gone under the car. Stopping instantly it was found that the lad had been knocked down either by the fender, mud guard or some other part of the car and brushed to one side.

The boy had been playing with a hose on the lawn of a house in the vicinity and had just been warned to leave the hose alone and leave the premises. In his hurry it may be that he did not stop to look but darted out into the roadway just as Mr. Morse came along. The child was taken into the home of Mrs. W. J. Bartlett and a doctor summoned and after an examination was removed to the home of his step-father, Thomas Logan, a few blocks away.

The Woman's Board of Day Kimball hospital is an active body of women of eastern Windham county engaged in raising money and securing the contribution of needed articles for the hospital. In each town of the eastern part of the county are branch organizations of this board. The board works with one purpose and the end in view is the assisting support of the hospital.

In Woodstock recently, the board elected the following officers for the year: President, Mrs. G. M. Sampson; vice president, Mrs. L. H. Healey; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. E. E. May; assistant secretary, Miss Mary Flynn.

The hospital, started in a private residence in Putnam years ago, is now occupying a building of its own, several times added to by structures nearly as large as the original building. A capable surgeon, an efficient matron and staff of nurses are doing a humane service every day in the week, month and year. The demands upon the institution have greatly expanded and the automobile, with its wake of accidents, contributes many emergency cases.

The hospital is not self-supporting and it is due in a great measure to the efforts of the Woman's Board that needed supplies are forthcoming. Many of the necessary adjuncts of a hospital have been placed through the energy of these women. They work quietly and unostentatiously but the results they accomplish are well known and widely appreciated.

The great need of the hospital at the present time is a nurses' home. A fund has been started and has reached substantial proportions. It was thought that the building would be started before this bu. on account of the high building and material costs the plans adopted could not be carried into effect with the money on hand. Doubtless another concerted public effort will be made to add to this fund for there will be no abandonment of the plan to build the needed home and those interested in the project will not rest until the building is a reality.

At present the hospital staff has to occupy room in the building proper, room that could be utilized for patientts when the demand becomes great.

Golf players of the Putnam Country club are showing a decided improvtment in their game this season. The local club, on its own links, won from Woonsocket, June 7th and had no trouble in defeating Southbridge Saturday. The next match at the Putnam club will be on July 12th when Stafford Springs club will pay a visit.

The directors of Putnam Chamber of Commerce have sent out questionnaires submitting the following to the members: "What are the three most important things the chamber of commerce should work for during the year?" An endeavor will be made to work along lines suggested by a majority of members, after answers have been tabulated.

There is a great deal of interest in what action the common council will take at its July meeting this (Tuesday) evening in the matter of the resignation of Prosecuting Attorney J. F. Carpenter. Not a rumor regarding who his successor may be is heard. The only name spoken in connection with the office is that of Attorney Eric H. Johnson, who has filled the office at different times for several terms. The salary of $500 a year is not attractive to many lawyers and the increased amount of work of the office since prohibition necessitates the expenditure of a great deal of time both in and out of court.

Mrs. George Benoit, of Bridge street is in receipt of a cablegram from her son George, dated Paris and stating that the son was married in Paris, June 24th. Following this they motored back toward Putnam and atipped at the Inn Yan-Kan-Kee, Harmony. During the past week eleven permits for new buildings and alterations have been granted by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton bringing the total number of permits for the month to well over the 50 mark. The total valuation of the new building is approximately $30,000.

The weather conditions during the past week have been ideal for building and good progress has been made. A number of the buildings for which permits have been issued this month are well on the road to completion. At the State Hospital the new buildings are progressing with good speed, the brick for the first story having been nearly completed. The steel structural work is well along on the first story.

The house on River avenue for Louis J. Bruette has reached the completion stage and is ready for occupancy as is the house for W. F. Lester on Laurel Hill road. At Norwich town several houses have been completed and are ready for occupancy including three on the Canterbury turnpike. In other sections of the city like progress has been made on buildings being erected.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

A cargo of liquor, the value fo which is estimated all the way from $4,000 to $7,000 is in the vault in the cellar on the north side of the new town building, as the result of action by State Policeman Hulburt who held up a truck driven by Ray M. Dailey in West Stafford Saturday evening. Dailey proved to be a rum runner, his cargo consisted of 60 cases of Scotch whiskey (one dozen bottles in each case) and 180 gallons of alcohol. In court he said that he was carrying the liquor from Providence, R. I., to Troy, N. Y.. He was presented in the borough court, charged with transporting liquors for the purpose of sale. He pleaded guilty but Judge Heald said he thought that the nature of the offense warranted a more severe penalty than the jurisdiction of the borough court would permit, so the accused was bound over to the next term of the Tolland county superior court, under bonds of $1,000. Indefault of the bonds Dailey was committed to Tolland jail. The case will come up in September unless (as now seems probable) the state's attorney applies for a bench warrant to have the accused presented this week.

LEARN HOW TO SWIM.

Little wonder can be displayed at this season of the year over the fact that more and more interest is being displayed in learning how to swim. Many are the communities which are establishing classes for those who do not know how to take care of themselves in the water and valuable instructions are being furnished that should be of inestimable value in the protection of life.

There are those who are determined to learn somehow and there are those who should know something about swimming for their own good. It is an unfortunate fact that so many either go into the water or spend much time about the water in boats and canoes who know nothing about swimming. They can neither take care of themselves should they fall overboard, be upset, get beyond their depth or step into a hole and they can do nothing in the way of aiding others as far as actually helping is concerned. With the great number going in bathing in ponds, rivers and at the beaches and the many who go sailing, rowing and canoeing it is surprising at the large proportion of them who are helpless the minute they get into deep water, and this in spite of the fact that such a predicament is by no means improbable.

The many drowning accidents which have occurred thus far this season, the additions that are being made almost daily and particularly at weekends emphasize the need of knowing how to swim.

As a matter of physical exercise there is nothing that beats swimming. It is not difficult to learn and knowing how doesn't require taking chances in the water or diving in shallow places. Those who go into or on the water should provide themselves with the important protection of knowing how to swim. That doesn't mean that by so doing there will be no chance of losing their lives in the water, for some of the experienced swimmers have been drowned, but it means providing a greater degree of independence and self protection in anticipation of the possibility of those uncertain conditions about which no one knows in advance. It is far better to know how to swim and not be required to use such knowledge in an emergency than to lack such knowledge at a critical moment.

RAILROAD TRESPASSERS.

Not a little uncertainty has surrounded the wreck of a Boston & Albany train at which time the locomotive was sent down an embankment and lives of the train crew were lost. Just what caused the wreck is not positively known. There has been and still is a belief that it was the result of children putting rocks on the rails and thereby causing the engine to be thrown from the track. This impression is strengthened by the fact that the railroad authorities have experienced trouble of this kind in that vicinity and have asked for police protection to prevent it.

There was a time when railroad property was looked upon as a common thoroughfare. Everyone having reason to do so used it freely. It was the highway for many who went to work, it was the short cut for those going to a particular locality and it was the path taken by those leaving their places of employment. The railroad tracks have always been the favorite place for those who tramp. Under such conditions it was inevitable that there should be a large number of accidents and deaths, and the situation became such that trespassing upon railroad property has been made unlawful. This has greatly reduced the number of people using such a thoroughfare and it has resulted in a decrease in the number of persons killed along the tracks.

Clearly the railroad property is no place for those not connected therewith. There is a hazard there which should be avoided and by no means should railroad property be tolerated as a playground. Children are disposed to please themselves. They may not be contemplating a train wreck, and they may. For the protection of the traveling public it is clear that children should be carefully excluded from railroad tracks, while for their own welfare it is the very place they should never be allowed to go. Whether the Boston & Albany wreck was caused by children or not the demands of safety require them to be kept away from such points.

THE OHIO STORM.

Mercy doesn't temper the fury of an unbridled storm. There is nothing more considerate about a middle west tornado than there is about a Pacific coast earthquake as is disclosed by the havoc wrought by the devastating storm in Ohio, where hundreds of lives have been taken and millions of dollars piled up in losses.

To the people of that section the remainder of the country must not only send sympathy but also aid. Where communities have been all but wiped out there is need for early aid, and as is to be expected relief is already being hurried to them.

This is a section of the country which has not become accustomed to such visitations. It is a sweeping destruction such as only those who have gone through such experience can understand and appreciate. New England can appreciate the distress that exists but it is fortunate in not being called upon to undergo such visitations. It is therefore not as well able to visualize the conditions as are those other states in the middle west which can be rated as being in the tornado belt and which know the need of cyclone cellars and what the interior of such look like.

It was something more than a hard blow that put Lorain and Sandusky in ruins. It was more than the bare storms which visit this part of the country. There was little or no warning and the force was so great as to smash everything that stood in the way. It is at such times that the effectiveness of human relief agencies command great attention and respect and in no better way can their need and the preparedness that prompts them be set forth. Service is the object for which they are organized and service is what they render. The cry of humanity in distress never fails to get a response.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS.

When President Coolidge spoke to the administrative heads of the government last night he talked straight, said what he meant and meant what he said, and there could have been no question in the minds of his hearers that he was sincere in his statements. And it is the same impression that his statements of policies is bound to have upon the country. It has applauded him in the courageous manner in which he has stood for economy in government, reduction of taxation and a lowered cost of government, and it is going to have reason to keep on doing so.

When he says that expenditures must be cut to the bone he is renewing his insistence. "I am for economy. After that I am for more economy. We must give the people relief from the excessive burden of taxation" has a ring to it that carried conviction that he is not simply uttering words but outlining a course of conduct. Not only does he set forth his policies but he declares there is no place for the disloyal in the government machinery.

In connection with the figures presented, showing the reduction in the national debt and the successive reduction each year in the government expenditures, there cannot be disregarded the meaning of the admirable manner in which the finances of the country have been handled. The cutting of the public debt is in itself of vital importance to the taxpayers of the country but that reduction, accomplished through the keeping down of expenditures and the careful handling of our revenue, means less interest each year by $120,000,000.

Cutting the debt nearly three billion dollars in three years indicates economy and efficiency in government. It means consideration for national welfare and on top of it there can be put confidence in the statement that it is going to be continued. Standing for lower expenditures, lower taxation and debt reduction, President Coolidge serves notice that there must be "no carelessness in our dealing with public property or the expenditure of public money," and that in these days of waste and extravagance means much to the American people.

A GOOD SIGN.

What appears to be the direct outcome of the favorable reception given to the Dawes report is the action taken in Paris whereby it will be admitted into the International Chamber of Commerce. It was significant that this action should be taken at Paris, that it should have been proposed by a Belgian member and that it should have had the approval of the French representatives.

Germany hasn't been accepted with open arms exactly. There are conditions attached to the action taken, but they are apparently no other than Germany at the present time seems disposed to meet. Germany is required to accept the Dawes report and a resolution of the international chamber concerning reparations, but it is evident that it is only lending encouragement to Germany to continue on the course which it seems to be headed, and to a certain degree make it easier for those in Germany who are advocating such action to bring it to a successful fruition.

There can be no question but what this evidence of better feeling has been prompted and materially aided by the situation created by the Dawes report, the reception of which in Germany has been the most favorable of any solution attempted along the line of reparations. Progress has been made and there is evidence of a desire for keeping it up. It is a good sign.

FROM LUCILLES DIARY

When father suggested to mother that she run down to New York with him I urged her to go and I said that I would do all that I could to help her get ready for the little trip. Father was touched by my unselfish interest, and when they left he handed me $25.

"Fifteen of this is for mother's little helper," he said, with his whimsical smile, "for you have been a brick, Lucile, an the other tend is for fruit and flowers for Miss Mainsell."

"Oh, daddy, what a darling you are," I cried. "I have been wishing for a little extra money and this comes in mighty handy."

"As per usual!" laughed father.

"Now don't forget the attentions to Miss Mainsell," said mother. "I don't wish her to be neglected during our absence."

Mother is quite devoted to father's secretary, who has been ill in the hospital for some weeks.

"Of course I won't forget," I promised, and that very day I took Miss Mainsell some of Tilly's canned pears.

I did mean to run up to her room to see her, but on the way to the hospital I met Ursula Moore, and she told me that a friend of hers who has a sports-frock was having a wonderful sale of light flannel dresses, and she wished to go with her to look at them.

I really could not refuse Ursula, for she is a sensitive person, who several times has become quite "off" me for hardly any reason at all. I am forced to think that she is dreadfully jealous of Dexter Haines' attentions to me. It is absurd of her to fancy that she has a mortgage on him just because she happened to be acquainted with him before I did.

I had not the slightest intention of buying a gown, but there was a pale blue flannel embroidered dashingly with a peacock feather design that I simply could not resist. When I found I could actually get it for only $25, I snapped it up, for I knew I should regret it otherwise.

"Now what shall we do?" asked Ursula as we left the shop.

"Let's have lunch with Dexter Haines," I nonchalantly suggested.

"But he won't be expecting us, Lucile."

"He will after I telephone him," I answered. "You see, dear, he has often urged me to let him know any time I'm downtown without a luncheon date. I dare say he has urged you likewise, Ursula?" She did not reply, but she compressed her lips in an odd way. "Aren't we in luck," I went on, "to have a delightful man friend who isn't office-bound? Maybe Dex will take us for a drive in his new car this afternoon?"

As it turned out he was engaged for the afternoon with some business appointment, but during the cosy luncheon at his club, Dex did ask us to take a long drive on Saturday, and I said that he, Ursula and Billy Farwell, who was to be included in the party, must all come back to my house to dinner, and my invitation was gayly accepted. Although I naturally miss my dear parents when they're absent, in some ways it is pleasant to be able to entertain without having to consult their convenience.

This morning Uncle Bob telephoned to mother, who came home last night with daddy, and in two minutes after the conversation she was in my room looking exceedingly vexed. "Lucile" she said, "Bob asked me how I liked the flowers he sent yesterday to greet me and he was astonished to hear they weren't here, Lucile, did any flowers come?"

"Why, yes, there was a bunch of lilies of the valley and some roses came yesterday. There was no card with them and it occurred to me that you sent her some canned pears! You certainly didn't lose on that deal. I think your father should deduct $10 from your next month's allowance. I simply cannot see, Lucile, how you can do such—"

"But, mother darling, you don't understand. It was this way. I—"

"I think I understand only too well," she interrupted. There are times when mother will not listen to reason or explanation. It is most trying.—Chicago News.

Stefansson Had to "Go It Alone."

Vilhjalmar Stefansson was told that his ideas of Arctic exploration were folly and he was warned that he was condemning himself to death when he set out to test his theories. Accustomed to hard knocks and to roughing it in the west, he believed that he knew how to conquer the pitiless north alone.

Son of an Icelander, who migrated to Canada, he was born in a cabin near Lake Winnipeg in 1879. Eighteen months later the family moved to North Dakota. Working on his father's farm twenty miles from a railroad, he attended school and "punched cattle." With savings earned from woodchopping, he entered the University of North Dakota, from which he was dismissed in his third year for mischievous disrespect to a professor. A journalist in Grand Forks, he was nominated for superintendent of public instruction, only to be disqualified because he was not of legal age. At the University of Iowa and at Harvard he delved into anthropology and won the Thaw scholarship.

After a trip to Iceland as ethnologist with an archeological expedition, he began his explorations. In 1906 he arrived in the upper Hudson Bay region in a light overcoat and a serge suit, determined to prove his theory that an explorer could live off the country. He learned from the Eskimos and so improved on their methods that he fed them in a famine season. Crossing alone from the MacKenzie delta to the headwaters of the Porcupine, he went down on a raft, still alone, to the Yukon, returned home.

Back in the north in 1908, he navigated the MacKenzie and lived off the country four years. He began his third trip in 1913, and after five years in the barren wastes he cut loose from all communication and completed his explorations, living on bear meat and seal meat and sheltering only in snowhouses.

Stefansson is author of numerous works on the Arctic, fellow of learned societies and is famous for his many discoveries and for teaching the governments of the United States and Canada the vast riches of their northlands.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Price of Freedom.

Mr. Editor: "Judge not a man by the tint of his skin; but by the thoughts he thinks." This is an old saying and as good to judge a man by as it was centuries ago. If we Judge Calvin Coolidge by the thoughts expressed in his book, "The Price of Freedom," we are obliged to acknowledge that he is eminently fitted to guide our ship of state wisely through the perplexities and trials of this age. Tersely he explains the foundation principles of our government and the fundamental truths upon which our civilization is based. Our women's clubs cannot find a better book to analyize and digest than this one, for here they will find in a condensed form summed up the basic principles of Americanism founded upon our system of religion and education. The book opens with this rugged truth: "Unless the people help themselves, no one else will or can help them. It is out of such struggle that there comes the strongest evidence of their true independence and nobility, and there is struck off a rough and incomplete economic justice, and there develops a strong and rugged national character. It represents a spirit for which there could be no substitute. It justifies the claim that they are worthy to be free."

All through his addresses he emphasizes the absolute necessity of self sacrifice and service and dependence upon a higher power.

"Civilization and freedom have come because they are an achievement and it is human nature to achieve. Nothing else gives any permanent satisfaction. But most of all there is need of religion. From this source alone came freedom. Nothing else touches the soul of man. Nothing else justifies faith in the people." He closes the book with these forceful words: "The authority of the law is questioned these days all too much. The binding obligation of obedience against personal desires is denied and in many quarters. If these doctrines prevail all organized government, all liberty, all security are at an end. Force alone will prevail. Can those entrusted with the gravest authority set an example save the meanest obedience to law?"

These quotations are sufficient to show that Calvin Coolidge is the man of the hour to uphold our civilization and our religion achieved by our ancestors through self denial and toil.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

General Charles Nollet, War Minister in the new French cabinet, is a veteran military commander and a man with both the academic and practical experience of his profession. Born in 1865, he is the oldest member of the cabinet and the only one without political affiliations. He has lectured at the French War College on the tactics of artillery and on the strategy of infantry, and although a specialist with the former army he commanded infantry at times in the great war and from division commander to the commander of a corps. For the past four years General Nollet has been president of the Interallied Military Commission at Berlin. This position has naturally given him deep insight into Germany's military establishment, so that his word on this subject is likely to be accepted by France as of more weight than tables of statistics uttered by a civilian.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

THE ALEUTIANS

"United State Army flyers, winging their way westward above the thousand-mile arc of the Aleutian Islands that stretch off like giants' stepping stones between Alaska and Asia, are back-tracking in a most dramatic way one important historic migration and perhaps other equally important prehistoric movement," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"If the island dwellers of 179 years ago could see the airplanes whirring along in the path of the sun," continues the bulletin, "they would no doubt be even more impressed than they were by the bearded Russians who came in crude boats from Kamchatka.

"The Aleutians served as a path for Russian adventurers who had made their way across Siberia to the Pacific and were in search of new fur worlds to conquer. When survivors returned to Kamchatka from Bering's voyage which discovered Alaska, a horde of them hastily threw little boats together and swooped down on the Aleutians, exploiting, enslaving and killing the natives in a mad search for furs. With these white men came the diseases of civilization, and before many decades the 30,000 natives who, in 1745, lived contentedly in the Aleutians, had been reduced to few more than a thousand miserable creatures continually harassed by their masters. When in the early nineteenth century Russia established a sort of colonial government in the islands and on the Alaskan mainland, and introduced Christian missionaries, the natives fared somewhat better; but the Aleutian Islands have never recovered from the early days of exploitation and most of them are now uninhabited.

"It was because they were opened up from the east that the islands are known as the Aleutians. The name is derived from that of a Kamchatkan cape.

"Although the Aleutians are as far north as central Canada their climate is not severely cold. Rather they may be said to be always 'chilly,' damp and foggy. Fog is anything but an asset to the flyer; but the Aleutian fog has the good point, at least, of being less dense than the fog of more southern lands.

"The islands are of volcanic origin and for the most part very rough. They are treeless, save for a few scrubby willows along water courses. Dense growths of grass and moss cover the hills and mountains and the small patches of lowland. The islands can be rather closely compared to the islands of the coast of northern Scotland and to Iceland; and, like those regions, could produce hay and support cattle. The few Aleuts who live on some of the isles now, however, maintain themselves entirely by fishing, hunting and trapping. Sea otters, the fur from which is very valuable, frequented the islands in great numbers when they were discovered, but greedy methods of fur collection have almost exterminated these animals. On some of the islands blue fox farms are maintained.

"Alighting on the Aleutian Islands with planes fitted with wheels would be difficult. But nearly all of the islands are deeply indented and provide every few miles little sheltered coves, landlocked harbors or lakes on which pontoon-fitted planes can come to rest in an emergency.

"Dutch Harbor, Unalaska, is the first island stopping place on the flyers' schedule. This deep land-locked harbor is one of the finest in the north and has played an important part as a way station for ships during the gold rushes to the Yukon and to Nome. It is connected with the rest of the world by a radio station. Dutch Harbor is on the shortest route from Seattle to Tokyo, and with the establishment of coaling stations may conceivably become such a Pacific way station for the northern route as Honolulu is for the southern.

"Atka, the second stopping place for the airmen, is approximately the half-way house of the Aleutian chain and on it is the last settlement but one west of the mainland. Nazan Bay, which gives an excellent harbor to Atka, is often clear of fog when it hangs heavily outside. There is a government school in the little village on the inner harbor but no post office, and the only connection with Dutch Harbor is through occasional small trading schooners.

"After Atka is passed the islands for 500 miles westward are uninhabited. Then comes Attu, the last of the Aleutians, the westernmost bit of land at all connected with the American continent, over which the Stars and Stripes wave. This little outpost of America is beyond the 180th degree of longitude and so is technically in the eastern hemisphere. The International date line has been bulged out around it, however, so that all the Aleutians are included in the same time system.

"Attu is much farther west than Hawaii; it is, in fact, in the same longitude as New Zealand. And in the summer the sun is just setting from Attu when it is rising in Maine. It is 2700 miles from Attu to the Coast of Washington state, the nearest point in the United States proper. It is almost exactly the same distance from the coast of Washington to Eastport, Maine. Arrived at Attu, the fliers will have covered more than one-fifth of the longitude they must cover, without having left the territory of the United States.

"Because the International Date Line lies just beyond Attu, the airman, rising from the island to continue their flight, plunge directly into another day without the lapse of any time. Thus, having started from this westernmost American station Monday morning, they were flying a few moments later in the morning of the day that to the Eastern Hemisphere was Tuesday."

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Squirrel Nut Cracker

Isn't it too bad, little readers, that Chatterbox, the red squirrel, is such a naughty little fellow. I mentioned some of his habits in the last story. But, dear me! Little Jack Rabbit was so ashamed of his tiny tree-climbing friend that he hopped right into this story before I could tell you more. Well, here goes, as we used to say at the Old Swimming Pool, when I was a boy in the country. And then there'd be a big splash and your Uncle Dave would come up from under the water to shake the water out his eyes and ears and swim back to the jumping-off place.

"Where are you going, shouted Chatterbox.

"Where are you?" shouted Chatterbox, as Little Jack Rabbit hopped away, not wishing, you know, to talk to anyone who has a habit of stealing other people's property.

"I don't like to hear the naughty things you do," answered the bunny boy, stopping a moment to tighten the straps of his little knapsack.

"I don't always steal eggs and nuts," replied the tiny red squirrel. "I store away the seeds of cone-bearing trees and acorns in my little storehouse. I'm a thrifty person, yes, indeed, and when safe in my comfortable nest made of stripe of bark and leaves in a hollow tree, I'm not afraid of cold weather. But when the sun shines I'm always out and about."

"Well, I must be hopping along," said the little rabbit, and away he went. Only to run across Squirrel Nutcracker, the old gray squirrel, with his two sons, Twinkle Tail and Scatterbrains.

"Dear me," sighed the bunny boy, "I must be careful not to say anything about Chatterbox. He's their cousin."

But the bunny boy need not have worried himself over that, for the first word that Squirrel Nutcracker uttered was:

"Just saw you talking to Chatterbox. What's he got to say for himself. Nothing very good, I imagine."

"Perhaps not," answered the little bunny, not wishing to say anything mean about a person behind his back. "We are pretty busy storing up nuts for the cold weather," explained the old squirrel. "We have a storehouse, but to save time and trouble I bury lots of nuts in the ground."

"What do you do when it is covered with snow?" asked the bunny boy. "Can you find them?"

"I manage to find them all right," answered the old gray squirrel, sitting up on his hind legs and folding his front paws across his white vest. His tremendously big tail was gracefully curled up over his back. My, but old Squirrel Nutcracker was proud of that tail. It certainly was a beautiful one. Everybody was fond of him. And why not? The gray squirrels are friendly little folk, loved by all in the Shady Forest.

A Little Talk on Thrift

SAVINGS

Various authorities who have made surveys of the fraudulent investment situation are agreed that the annual losses thus sustained by the people of the United States amounts to $1,000,000,000.

One way of looking at this matter is to remember that the sum lost through illegal investments is just about equal to the total amount of our annual savings bank deposits.

And there still is another way of looking at it.

An eminent economist estimates that the total yearly savings of the American people amounts to $12,000,000,000. This includes all net additions to our national wealth both through the saving of money, through investment in durable goods and through increases in values. It is the net annual profit of the great American family. A third of a century ago the total wealth output of our nation was no greater than our annual net accumulations of wealth today. England and Germany before the war added only about one-sixth of this great sum to their material resources.

The fact that we thus are able to pile up $12,000,000,000 in new wealth each year is sufficient proof of the opportunities for financial progress that are held out to the individual in this country.

Where there is such opportunity for legitimate advancement, it is all the more deplorable that so many of our people should seek advancement through methods that result in loss and disaster.

The situation is due partly to ignorance and illiteracy, partly to the gambling instinct of many, and partly because of the abnormal desires of thousands of our citizens to get rich in a hurry.

No one should lose sight of the fact that a billion dollars a year flowing through illegal channels means that legitimate business has been deprived of that much money and that a heavy burden is placed on the public through impaired business activities and added costs of living.

The rightful earning capacity of money has its limitations, and when representations are made otherwise it should be borne in mind that such representations either are willful efforts to defraud or spring from business principles as unsound as the shifting sands of the sea.—American Society for Thrift.

POETRY

PRELUDE.

The night was dark, though sometimes a faint star
A little while a little space made bright.
The night was dark and still the dawn seemed far.
When, o'er the muttering and invisible sea,
Slowly, within the East, there grew a light
Which half was starlight, and half seemed to be
The herald of a greater. The pale white
Turned slowly to pale rose, and up the night
Of heaven slowly climbed. A white gulf flew Straight toward the utmost boundary of the East.
Where slowly the rose gathered and increased.
There was light now, where all was black before;
It was as on the opening of a door
By one who in his hand a lamp doth hold
(Its flame being hidden by the garment's fold),—
The still air moved, the wide room is less dim.
More bright the East becomes, the ocean turned Dark and more dark against the brightening sky—
Sharper against the sky the long sea line.
The hollows of the breakers on the shore
Were green like leaves whereon no sun doth shine,
Though sunlight make the outer branches hoar.
From rose to red the level heaven burned;
Then suddenly, as if a sword fell from on high,
A blade of gold flashed on the ocean's rim.

THE TELEGRAM.

The last time that I saw her
I watched her smiling eyes;
To me their light was music,
Their color like the skies;—
And now they wire me she is gone;—
And bid me come and see—
Upon her face I will not gaze—
She is not dead to me.

They telegraph she's lovely still;
All clad in fairy white.
They say that she is smiling yet.
Her beauty just as bright.
Since Death hath closed those suns, my eyes,—
Oh, no, it cannot be;
But I've a vision fair of her—
She is not dead to me.

Let others bear her to the tomb.
The rite I will not share;
Still lives for me her loveliness—
No—no, I'll not be there;
Not there to view what Death hath left,—
I keep what he set free;
And never, never, never
Will she be dead to me.

DECLARES IMMIGRATION BILL IS ONE THING TO CREDIT OF CONGRESS

While dissatisfaction with congress has been nation-wide, there is one great bill which the legislators passed for which they can be given credit, declared Mrs. Morrill Hamlin of Greenwich in the final one of a course of four lectures Monday afternoon at the Community house. This one thing that stands in the unquestioned credit of congress is the immigration bill that will protect us from the hordes waiting to pour in upon us and vindicates the right of the nation to extend its welcome when it is considered wise to do so.

Mrs. Hamlin discussed in an illuminating way two current topics in her final lecture, the immigration bill and the world court.

Japan is the only nation that resents the immigration bill, but it is all foolishness to talk about her going to war with the United States. She wouldn't dare to and Great Britain would never allow any yellow nation to attack us, said Mrs. Morrill. As affecting the situation between Japan and Great Britain, she spoke of the remarkable streak of economy which the Britain parliament had developed in refusing an appropriation of 40 million dollars to build a great naval station at Singapore, which is indispensable to the maintenance of an adequate British fleet in that region for the protection of New Zealand, Australia and South Africa. Japan admits that she is constructing an immense naval base somewhere among her islands, and New Zealand, Australia and South Africa have served notice that if the mother country will not provide this naval base at Singapore, they will take it into their own hands to augment their naval establishments to what they consider the necessary requirements.

When President Roosevelt made the "gentlemen's agreement" with the Japanese ambassador in 1907, he had it distinctly understood that the United States would not permit cheap labor and that meant the exclusion of the Japanese coolie. Japan promised that she would restrict the immigration and she says that she has lived up to it, but she has not done so, said Mrs. Hamlin. She spoke of the drastic laws against the Japanese that were enacted by California in 1919 and told of her visit to that state to make an investigation of the matter for herself. Everywhere she was told that if we want to keep California an American state we must keep out the Japanese. They have been coming in by stealth over the Mexican border by the hundreds. They are wonderful workers, it is true, but they will work 18 hours in the fields, the whole family from the father to the youngest child, and they herd into a single room house. They are not to be called an immoral race, but rather unmoral, and in every way they are detrimental to American life and they never assimilate. Always they hold their allegiance to the Mikado.

Japan takes umbrage at the immigration bill on the ground that it makes a racial distinction, but that is not the real reason for their violent protests, said Mrs. Hamlin. The real reason is because they are casting envious eyes on these Pacific coast states, which have a climate in which the Japanese can live. Unlike the Chinese who can live in any climate, the Japanese has to have conditions like their own land and that they find on our Pacific coast. Therein lies the reason for their resentment at our immigration laws. Every nation has laws against Japan. They accept the British refusal to let them in and Japan exclusion laws against the Chinese and the Koreans. We want the friendship of Japan and she wants ours, but we can never mix. We welcome their students and their merchants but they must go back.

Mrs. Hamlin praised Albert Johnson as one true American who had been working for four years to get the right immigration bill, which in 1924 would admit only 165,000 and after that 150,000 and would have the effect of checking the influx of the Slavic nationals while giving the United States the benefit of receiving a better proportion of the Nordic nationals. With the horde of Slavic nationals coming in, students of history say that the United States was faced with the same danger that faced and overwhelmed the Roman republic. The difference is that America recognized the danger but Rome never did.

Taking up the world court, Mrs. Hamlin paid her respects in no uncertain way to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, chairman of the foreign relations committee because of his seniority in the senate, and she spoke of what Mrs. James Lee Laidlaw told the foreign relations committee, when she appeared before them, telling the committee that it was time for the senate to understand that if they don't represent the people it is time for the people to get men who do. As to Senator Lodge's plan for a world court, she said she thought he must have written it with his tongue in his cheek, knowing that the president and the secretary of state would receive it in icy silence and the people with derisive scorn, which is exactly what happened. Then Lodge got Pepper to write out a plan, which had 16 amendments, all of which had to be voted upon by the nations. At that rate it would be 1975 before we got into the world court.

Mrs. Hamlin declared that it is the will of the American people that America should be in the world court and it will be so forcibly impressed upon Senator Lodge next December that he will be compelled to bring out the Hughes-Harding plan, or resign. It will be adopted and America will be enrolled in a world movement that is not political but humanitarian and in accord with American ideals.

WEST SIDE FOURTH PROMISES BIG PROGRAMME

Without a doubt the West Side Fourth of July celebration will surpass anything of its kind seen in Norwich in many years and will provide plenty of amusement for everyone in the city on that day.

From the time of the big parade in the morning until late in the evening a programme of activities has been arranged. The time of the parade has not been announced as yet but it will start at the Fairgrounds and move down West Main street to Ricker's Corner, then move north over Ann street, through the side streets back to the corner and from thence back to the point of starting.

An invitation has been extended to Mayor Milo R. Waters, members of the court of common council and town officials to witness the parade at the reviewing stand which is to be at Maples Corner where judges will be stationed to select the winners in various entries.

The prize for best decorated floats, automobiles, individual horribles and group horribles have been on display in the windows of Ricker's drug store for the past week having been donated by leading merchants in the city to stimulate interest in this great community undertaking. Besides the prizes for parade groups there are ten prizes for those placing in the first ten in the marathon race for which many entries have been made. These prizes have also been donated by local merchants and are well worth winning.

The marathon will be from Connell street to the Fairgrounds and once around the race track to the judges' stand, a distance of about two miles.

The prizes for parade floats and other attractions are as follows:

Best decorated float—First prize, mantal clock; second prize, silver cake plate; third prize, lamp.

Best decorated automobile—First prize, wicker lamp; second prize, electric toaster; third prize, vase.

Horribles (Individual)—First prize, camera; second prize, pair of oxfords; third prize, ukelele.

Horribles (Group)—First prize, rug; second prize, fishing rod; third prize, undecided.

Rumor has it that the horribles will be original and that entries are many, rivalry running keen among the various entrants.

Through the courtesy of the court of common council, a band concert will be rendered at the Fairgrounds in the evening before the fireworks are touched off. The evening program also includes a basket luncheon, community singing, patriotic address and a general good time.

The evening programme combined with the morning parade and afternoon athletic events, makes a combination of events well worth seeing and the people of the West Side extend a cordial invitation to everyone to be their guests for the day at the Fairgrounds.

One request is being made by officials in charge of the activities of the day and that is, that no fireworks be discharged within the Fairgrounds during the day, owing to the dagner of fire on private property, kindly loaned for the occasion.

LEGION BONUS COMMITTEE WILL HELP ON APPLICATIONS

The American Legion bonus committee held a meeting Monday evening at the Legion rooms on Main street for the purpose of planning ways and means of best serving the hundreds of ex-service men in Norwich and vicinity who are eligible to receive compensation. Chairman Webster D. Copp was in charge of the meeting and it was voted to have members of the committee at the legion rooms on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings from 7 until 9 o'clock for the purpose of assisting all exservice men in filling out thier bonus applications.

The blanks have been received and beginning Wednesday night the committee is to be at the rooms from 7 until 9 o'clock. It is requested that all ex-service men asking for assistance bring their discharge papers with them as it is necessary to have dates and figures authentic before sending the papers to Washington. Service records must also be secured before the application can be granted.

This service is a part fo the legion work for all ex-service men, regardless of whether or not they are legion members, and is being done at the request of the government which recognizes the fact that much time and many errors may be saved in the concerted action on the part of legion posts all over the country.

The committee will meet Wednesday but not Friday of this week, as the latter day is July 4th, a holiday, but beginning next week Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings are to be set aside for this work.

NINE JUNE CALLS FOR CITY FIRE DEPARTMENT

Fires during the month of June were not as many as usual for the month, there being but nine calls for the fire department during the 30 days just passed. Of these calls two were bell alarms, five were telephone calls and two were oral alarms. The largest fire the department had to contend with during the month came on the morning of June 17th when the Pasnik building at 25 West Main street caught fire and damaged the store of Ducharme and Monrat and the Pasnik building to the extent of several thousand dollars.

The last call for a serious fire was from Box 14 for a fire in the barn on Forest stret. By clever work and careful watching the fire was held to the barn. Nearby buildings which were showered with sparks were saved from damage, some of the sparks landing on roofs of houses on the west side of Fairmount street and above that street on West Main street.

RADIO FANS LISTENED TO CONVENTION VOTES

Many radio fans in Norwich followed the convention reports closely on Monday and with check sheets were able to figure the results of the several ballots before the capitulation was made by the men at the convention headquarters in Madison Square Garden. At midnight those interested in the returns were still listening in and watching the returns as they were listed on the windows of several stores.

PEARLS

Recent sale of a string of pearls for a reported price of more than eleven million francs serves to recall that the pearl is a paradox among precious gems," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"The familiar figure of speech, 'casting pearls before swine,' is no more violent contrast than the fact that a pearl is originated by a parasite.

"As one writer says 'The ornament associated in all ages with beauty and riches is nothing but the brilliant sarcophagus of a worm.'

"Certain gems are affected by the newly rich, and sometimes are associated with vulgar display. Not so the pearl—it usually is the insignia of aristocracy, a family heritage above price. Yet a cross-section of a pearl shows it to be structurally just like the humble onion!

"In the language of the chemist pearls are 'calcereous concretions of peculiar lustre, produced by certain molluska.' In everyday language pearls are formed in certain oysters when the oyster secretes and deposits around foreign particles, usually parasites, layer after layer of a limestome substance.

"If this deposit, known as nacreous matter, is spread over the inside of the shell 'mother-of-pearl' is formed; if it is formed on a 'bump' of the shell, a 'button pearl' is the result; but if it is built around a parasite 'running loose,' as it were, in the soft part of the mollusk, then a genuine spherical or a pear-shaped pearl is made.

"Now it would occur to an ingenious-minded person that since an oyster tends to protect itself against foreign bodies by exceuding nacreous substance around them that the oyster could be encouraged to make pearls to order just as bees are inveigled into making honey. Linnaeus, famous Swedish naturalist, proved to the western world that insertion of tiny particles in oysters was equivalent to planting pearls but, as with so many of our latter-day 'inventions,' the Chinese had anticipated him by many centuries.

"For generations the 'culture' of pearls was a staple industry of several villages near Tai-Tsung, China. In early spring the 'pearl growers' would collect river mussels, open their valves with a bamboo stick and insert foreign bodies therein. These were placed in shallow pools, nourished by excrement, and after the lapse of months, sometimes of years, the mussels were collected, the pearls extracted, and the soft parts eaten.

"Sometimes the tiny insertions would be in the shape of an image and the result would be a pearl fashioned after the matrix. Among the most remarkable of these oyster art objects were the sitting Buddhas, specimens of which are on display in the British Museum.

"India is the world's treasure-house of pearls and the choicest collections of them are owned by native rulers.

"The Gaekwar of Baroda has a sash made of one hundred rows of pearls with a tassel tipped with emeralds. His Highness possesses what probably is the most valuable jewel ornament in all the world—a shawl of pearls, ten feet long, six feet wide. This shawl, or rug, literally is woven of strings of pearls and its center and border are set with diamonds. It is worth several millions of dollars.

"A necklace of eight strings of pearls which are said to be the finest specimens in India, and also worth millions, is owned by the Rajah of Dhalpur.

"Pearls too tiny for commercial use are known as 'seed pearls.' In India these are ground up, and because of their lime content, chewed with betel nut. The Romans, you will recall, though their prized pearls as ornaments, flavored their wine with powdered pearls.

"The coasts of Ceylon are the classic homes of the pearl, in later years the South Sea Islands, Australian waters, the Gulf of California and the Caribbean have yielded pearls.

"The adventures of the pearl fisheries—the India divers who anoint their bodies with oil before they make their plunges — offered fascinating chapters of human custom. But that is another story."

"I Am Thin"
HER FRIEND SAYS:
"She Is Skinny"

If she only knew that she could put on at least 5 pounds of good, healthy flesh in 14 days she wouldn't be worrynig about her peaked face and run-down looks.

She has tried Cod Liver Oil, but the ill-smelling, nasty tasting stuff upset her stomach and made her feel worse than, before.

Doctors and good pharmacists know that Cod Liver Oil is full of vitamines that make flesh, creates appetite, builds up the power to resist disease and chases away nervousness.

But it's horrible tasting stuff and every day fewer people are taking it for doctors are prescribing and the people are fast learning that they can get better results with McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, which Lee & Osgood Co., and druggists all over the country are having a tremendous demand for.

It's a wonderful upbuilding medicine for children, especially after sickness, and sixty tablets only cost 60 cents.

One woman gained 10 pounds in 12 days and if any skinny man or woman can't put on 5 pounds in 30 days, your druggist will gladly return the purchase price.

"Get McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Oil Tablet."

MASKED MARVELS PROVE TOO STRONG FOR THE TWILIGHT LEAGUE LEADERS

They came; they played, and they conquered. Who? Why, the Masked Marvels of Norwich defeated the East Ends, leaders of the Twilight league, 10 to 8 last evening at Duwell field. It was a unique game, to say the least, and the originators have sprung something on the public that has never before been seen on a baseball diamond—a full regulation baseball team playing fully masked. People expected a more or less of a farce, but it was far from that, it was a real ball game, with many brilliant plays. The Masked Marvels, whoever they are or were, knew the game, and knew it well, every member being a ball player with experience. They clearly outclassed the East Ends, who are clamoring for another game, but the Marvels say that they are through with baseball.

Half an hour before the game was scheduled to start the big grandstand had started to fill and by 6.30 the stand was packed and the crowd had surged into the outfield, seeking positions of advantage from which to view the odd spectacle that was expected to ensue. It was estimated that fully 2,500 people saw the game and it is needless to say that everyone enjoyed it. The Masked Marvels were a trifle late in arriving but when they did arrive it was in grand style and accompanied by a drum corps. The drum corps was composed of East Side youngsters who have been instructed by George Houston. The boys made a very pleasing appearance and showed no little ability in handling the drum sticks.

The Marvels marched once around the diamond in sort of a ceremonial leading some, to believe that it was a team from some secret organization in town. They then solemnly marched to their bench on the field and then without a word passing between them took their positions on the field.

Umpire Coleman announced the batteries as follows: "For the Marvels, Dynamite, pitch; Nitroglycerine, catch, a dangerous combination; for the East Ends, Tennant pitch and Riley catch." The game was on.

Dynamite had Muggsy Ellsworth scared and fanned him. Joe Belair was far from frightened and crashed out a double to center field. Mills singled and Belair halted on third Tilley went out, Dynamite to Arsenic J. Pedace was safe when Arsenic failed to catch Pneumonia's throw and Belair scored. Dynamite fanned D. Pedace for the third out.

The Marvels came to bat in their half of the first inning. Nitroglycerine crashed out a double but Dynamite fanned. Arsenic singled and Nitro landed on the third cushion. Diphtheria scratched a single and Nitro scored. Iodine failed to clean up and fanned. Pneumonia doubled, scoring Arsenic and Diphtheria. T. N. T. was safe when Mills made a bad throw and Pneumonia went to third and T. N. T. to second. Smallpox broke out with a double, scoring his two mates. Carbolic Acid failed to burn anything and was a strikeout victim.

Dynamite was invincible in the next inning and fanned two men and the other was an easy out. A single by Nitro, a double by Diphtheria and another double by Pneumonia accounted for two runs in the second.

The East Ends scored once in the third on a base on balls and a single. The Masked Marvels added three runs in the third through a double by Nitro, a single by Dynamite and a double by Arsenic, all making a bitter dose for the East Ends to swallow. This ended the scoring for the Marvels, although they threatened in the fifth inning, when they had three men on.

The East Ends scored one run in the fourth on a base on balls, an error and a single. In the fifth inning Pneumonia made a spectacular shoestring catch, robbing Mills of a hit. Iodine made an error and Dynamite passed two men, filling the bases, but he lightened up and pitched himself out of the hole.

Dynamite, who had been acting very well in the box, blew up in the sixth and final inning but the explosion was not much of a shock, as only five runs scored before the debris was cleared away, leaving the final score 10 to 8 in favor of the Masked Marvels. The Marvels were a bunch of hooded demons when it came to hitting, and Dynamite was a whale of a pitcher, getting 10 strikeouts to his credit. The score:

Echoes from the Stands.

(By Matt.)

Bert Lucas said he never enjoyed himself so much since he came back from Asia.

The Pedace brothers, Bullet, Razzo and Spinella, occupied the outfield as usual for the East Ends. The East End management is going to furnish boots for the Pedace boys the next game.

Spark-plug Walz electrified the crowd by a sparkling catch in right in the fourth, falling down and turning a complete somersault.

Bob Woodmansee sported a red sweater with a letter D on it. A young lady in the stand said it must stand for Dumb-bell. How do you like that, Bob?

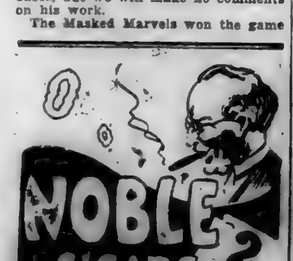
About 100 sports (?) left the grounds when Umpire Coleman announced that a collection would be taken up—and then they want to see ball games. Nice people!

Umpire Coleman was very good on balls and strikes. James umpired on bases, but we will make no comments on his work.

The Masked Marvels won the game in the first and came near losing it in the last inning.

"Bugs" Boyens walked up to the plate, laid down his crutches and pinch hit for Ellsworth. He made a safe hit and limped to first amid loud applause.

Dynamite pitched a star game and had the East Enders nibbling at a wide out-curve. He would make a good man for any team in the Twilight league.



BOSTON AND PHILLIES DIVIDE DOUBLE HEADER

Boston, June 30.—Boston won the first game from Philadelphia today, 9 to 4, but lost the second, 6 to 4. Padgett and Stengel made homers in the opener, the former with one on base, in the last innings of the second game with two out and two on base. McInnis singled off Pitcher Hubbell's leg but Heniine got the ball as it bounded across the first base foul line and threw to third where Powell was caught over-running, ending the game. Hubbell left the field unassisted but an xray examination was arranged for. Bancroft's fielding was sensational. The scores:

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Fordham Flash New York Giants

Tenth inning. Bases full, Score 2 to 2. Two are out. Pinch hitter sent to bat.

Should pitcher throw him a good ball on the first pitch?

Very few hitters are good at slugging the first ball pitched and the pitcher has every percentage in his favor that he can make the first pitch a strike. In the major leagues most of the pitchers try to get the first ball over in a situation of this kind, although a few of them take a chance and try to make the batter hit at the ball. When a pitcher is in a tight place, it's a good plan to get strikes over the plate right off.

New York, June 30.—Jake Fournier increased his home run total to 16, two behind Ruth, by hitting for the circuit twice today in the New York 7 to 5 victory over Brooklyn, the 12th Giant win in 15 games with the Robins. ATTRACTIVE ATHLETIC PROGRAMME PLANNED FOR WEST SIDE CELEBRATION

On Fourth of July the West Siders will present in their athletic program the Marathon—2 to be abbreviated for this occasion. This track event, the first of its kind in Norwich within the last few years, will be one of the big features of the day—an attraction which promises to hold the interest of all the local sport fans.

It originated when the Plaut-Cadden Co. presented the athletic committee a silver cup to be given the winner of this two mile run. Starting at the corner of West Main and Connell streets at 1 o'clock (daylight), they will follow West Main street as far as the New London turnpike, where they will turn to enter the fairgrounds by the main entrance. A wonderful ending will be made after they complete one lap on the track and sprint under the wire in front of the grandstands.

The next eight men to complete the course will be awarded the following prizes:

Second—Humidor and music box.
Third—Shaving outfit.
Fourth—Flashlight.
Fifth—Pair of keds.
Sixth—Camera.
Seventh—White shirt.
Eighth—Billfold.
Ninth—Memo. book.

Samuel Slosberg, who is crowded with applicants for all the sport events, will receive entries until 6 o'clock July 3d.

Winners of the athletic events which will follow the Marathon will be awarded the following prizes:

40 yard dash, boys under 10 years—Air rifle.

40 yard dash, boys under 15 years—baseball suit.

60 yard dash, boys over 15 years—Pair of keds.

440 yard relay race, boys—One lb. box of chocolates to each of winning team.

Obstacle race, boys—Flashlight.

Shot put, older boys—Thermos bottle.

Jumping rope race, girls—Dress.

To conclude the athletic program there will be a ball game between the married and single men. This will be of special interest to all, as many of the men on both sides play in the Twilight league. The lineups of the teams will appear later.

The prizes for these events are displayed in the windows of Ricker's drug store on West Main street with the prizes for the morning parade.

OLYMPIC COMMITTEE PROPOSES RADICAL CHANGE

Paris, June 30.—(By the Associated Press) — The international Olympic committee's plan for a radical change in the track and field program after the Paris games, involving the elimination of five events, and a revival of the controversy over the point scoring system for the coming championships, marked a meeting today of the executive council of the international amateur athletic federation, according to Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the American Olympic committee and United States member of the council.

The Olympic ruling organization through a special committee is working on the problem and proposes to cut from the program henceforth the 200-meter dash, the hop, step and jump, the 10,000-meter walk, the cross-country run and the decathlon.

It also proposes to eliminate the team events, scoring points only for individual first places except in the two relays now on the program, and to curtail the competition in wrestling, rowing, cycling and football, making the conduct of the minor sports optional with the country holding the games and not officially a part of the Olympic program.

The federation council, according to Mr. Rubien, while agreeing in principle with the Olympic body's purpose, believes the proposed alterations too radical. The council members have virtually agreed to cut the program but want three events at most removed although they have not decided which to recommend for elimination to the Olympic governing body.

The Americans favor the retention of the 200-meters dash and the hop step and jump. The former event together with the cross-country run is supported by a majority of the councilmen but the hop step and jump, the walk and decathlon apparently are doomed if the council opinion prevails.

The question, however, will not be decided this year, the present discussions laying the foundation for decisions at the 1925 meeting of the international Olympic committee at Prague.

The point scoring issue also was revived today. Great Britain took the attitude that no places except first should be scored. Denmark suggested that the scoring be on the basis of six points for first place instead of ten as under the system which the French adopted and considere final.

The United States previously had abandoned its idea of urging its own scheme that only the first four places be scored in the track and field events on the basis of five points for first, three for second, two for third, and one for fourth. Now, however, the United States authorities may reopen the discussion on this in view of the action of the other nations.

The federation council, Mr. Rubien says, holds that the French are not authorized to make any point scoring provisions. The whole question, it is expected will be finally considered at a meeting of the council on July 4.

VELVETMEN LOSE CLOSE GAME TO HERRUPS

At the J. E. Martin diamond on Sunday afternoon the Velvetmen went down to defeat at the hands of the Herrups of Hartford, formerly the Federals, by the score of 2 to 1. The game was more or less a pitchers' battle between Fisher and Morin. The Herrups drew first blood in the first inning and scored again in the third. The Martin team scored their only run in the eighth inning when E. Joubert doubled and scored on Morin's single. J. Welch, the Herrup catcher, sprained his ankle in the ninth inning but finished the game. The score:

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, July 30.—The fungral of State's Attorney Hadlai A. Hull, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the family residence, 73 Vauxhall street and was attended by a large assemblage, among whom were man members of the bar from practically every city in the state. So great was the throng of intimate acquaintances of Mr. Hull and sympathizing acquaintances of members of the family, that it was with great difficulty that all were able to gain admission to the house. The floral tributes were exceptionally beautiful. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ and Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church. The honorary bearers were Chief Justice George W. Wheeler, Bridgeport, Joseph E. Lamb, New York, Eugene Atwood Stonington, Alles B. Lincoln, Hartford, Harry L. Messerve, Brookline, Mass., Attorney Wallace S. Allis, Norwich, Congressman Richard P. Freeman and Ernest E. Rogers, of New London. The active bearers were Attorneys Herbert W. Rathbun, Westerly, Arthur M. Brown, Norwich, Warren B. Burrows, acting state's attorney, Groton; Thomas E. Troland, Frank L. McGuire, and Dr. Winthrop E. McGinley, New London. Burial was in the family plot in Cedar Grove cemetery where a squad fired a volley over the grave and taps were sounded as the casket was lowered to its final resting place.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the operators' licenses of Harry J. Gridley, 813 Bank street, a public service operator and Armando Thomas, 28 Crescent street, recently suspended, to be returned to the respective owners.

John Hula, 16, of Colchester, is a patient at Lawrence hospital suffering from a fractured leg sustained last evening near Colchester while attempting to board an automobile truck that was carrying building material to the state highway, which is receiving a new concrete surface.

Mrs. Philip Carney and infant son of Squire street, Mrs. John Connors, Mystic, Mrs. Burnham Jacques and infant son, Boston, Mrs. William Osteen, Pequot avenue, Mrs. John Stone, Summer street, Miss Bessie Wilbur, Monument street, Groton; Mrs. Frances Merritt, Jay street, John Sullivan, Williams street and Edward Packer, Broad street, were patients discharged at Lawrence hospital Sunday and today.

Joseph Young died this morning at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Lena Coombs, 21 Pearl street, death ending a lingering illness. Mr. Young was of advanced years and was well known locally.

The funeral of John MacDonald, four years old son of Mr. and Mrs. John MacDonald, 508 Ocean avenue, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The funeral of Raymond T. Whiting, son of Mr. and Mrs. Verrance Whiting, Oakdale, was held this afternoon at 3 o'clock at No. 48 Shapley street. The services were conducted by Rev. H. I. Pettis, of Norwich. The bearers were Frank Leiper, Donald Kenyon, Theodore Chappell, Frederick Leiper, Truman Chipman and Elmer Chappell. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

William Dooley, who has cruised about New London a good many years, without a home much of the time, was in the police court this morning charged with vagrancy. He said he worked whenever he could get employment and declared that he was a willing worker and had sought work often when he did not find it. But testimony was to the effect that William was in the bootlegging business and that yesterday he met Robert Dollard of Fall River, another fellow without employment and for Dollard Williams went to a drug store and bought a pint of denatured alcohol. He admitted that, but represented that he did not realize what Dollard wanted the alcohol for. Dooley admitted that he, himself, had drank it when it was diluted with ginger ale and then expressed the reluctant opinion that perhaps Dollard intended to make the same use of the stuff. Dollard had the bottle when he and Dooley were taken into custody. The bottle was labelled poison and the advice was given on the label that the stuff was not to be taken internally. That did not frighten the men and they started out to consume it. Dooley was sent to the workhouse to stay six months and Dollard was told to get out of town as soon as his legs would carry him. He said he was going to Taftville and knew the road and the distance from New London.

Jimmy Dixon, colored, who seems to have a weakness for peeping into the windows of residences, made his second appearance in the role last night when found in a yard on Truman street. Jimmy represented that he was there because he wandered in when he had taken a few drinks. He has served a term in jail for that offense and seems to be bound for the same experience unless he uses a compass to guide himself over his routes. He was not prosecuted today.

Maude Estella, 47, widow of Frederick C. Bosworth, died suddenly of heart trouble Saturday night while in an automobile that had started to Plant field, where the bazaar of New London lodge of Elks was in progress.

Mrs. Bosworth, who had been afflicted with a chronic disease of the heart some time, accompanied by her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Seidenfus, 186 Crystal avenue, left her home early Saturday evening. When near Broad street Mrs. Bosworth was observed to collapse, becoming unconscious. Mr. Seidenfus operated the machine to the office of Dr. Hugh F. Lena, but the woman had expired before reaching the physician's office.

Mrs. Hilda Kallstrom, an aged woman residing at 46 Gorton street, who was struck by a public service automobile owned by William L. Caulkins of Lyme at the corner of Ocean and Blydenburg avenues late last night, sustained a fractured hip, fractured pelvic bone, fractured spine and possible internal injuries. Mrs. Kallstrom received her injuries when she stepped from the sidewalk in front of the swiftly moving machine.

A closed car owned and driven by Max Merins, 1713 Second avenue, New York, and with Harry Rakowsky and his son, 4, of 20 Reed street as passengers, overturned early this morning at the corner of Willetts and Ocean avenues. Merins escaped with bruises, but Rakowsky and his son sustained cuts and contusions.

The machine was being driven from New York to New London and reached the corner of Willetts and Ocean avenues about 3.15 o'clock. The highway was slippery because of rain and Merins in operating the car from Willetts into Ocean avenue made the turn at a speed too great for safety. The car skidded and finally overturned and the passengers were held prisoners. Their shouts aroused the neighborhood and C. S. Guthrie, 196 Ocean avenue, superintendent of the Central Vermont railroad, caused the police to be notified. Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Patrolman Howard Sloan found Patrolman Thomas Lyden making the motorists as comfortable as possible until the arrival of a physician who had been summoned. The doctor had all three removed to Lawrence hospital.

Walter J. Kumpf and Miss Katherine S. Clinton, both of New London, were married Sunday at the parsonage of the First Church of Christ, by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth. Mr. Kumpf is employed by one of the local wholesale beef houses.

Miss Irene Jennings, 19 Blinman street, Mrs. Steve Jazzinsky and infant daughter, 535 Main street, Mrs. Rose Castagna, Westerly, and Mrs. Richard Roberts, Groton, were patients discharged at Home Memorial Associated hospital today.

Tobias D. Jennings of Yonkers, N. Y., and Miss Mary M. Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Sullivan, 444 Williams street, were married this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church at a nuptial mass celebrated by Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley. John Sheehy of Yonkers was best man and Miss Helen A. Sullivan, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. A breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents, after which Mr. and Mrs. Jennings departed for the Catskills. They will reside in Yonkers. Mr. Jennings is a postal clerk employed at Madison Square station, New York.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Sarah Priscilla Ford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Ford, 20 Summit avenue, to Edward R. Schenks, Rockville, Conn. Miss Ford has been a teacher at the New London School of Commerce three years.

Walter Lee and Mrs. Ella Cottrell, both of this city, were married Saturday evening at the parsonage of the First Baptist church, Rev. Chester H. Howe officiating. Mr. Lee is employed in a local laundry.

Frederick J. Bacon, residing at the Hotel Mohican, recently discharged at a Hartford hospital after having undergone treatment there several weeks for pneumonia, has gone to Manchester, Vt., where he will spend several weeks.

Mrs. L. C. Chappell, Blackhall street, is in New York as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Vollmer.

Mrs. Frank C. Cutler of Ocean avenue was called to Pawtucket, R. I., by the death of her mother, Mrs. Mary P. Clark. Besides Mrs. Cutler, a son, Charles P. Clark, survives Mrs. Clark. Burial was in Norwich today.

Sergeant Samuel Hick and Traffic Policeman John Courtney will be the delegates to the annual state convention of the State Policemen's association which will convene at New Haven next month. Besides the delegates, Sergeant James C. Sullivan, who is a vice president of the organization, will also attend.

The Ku Klux Klan was active hereabouts Friday night, for it has become known that a number of local members visited a tract of land on an elevation off Vauxhall street and burned another cross. The stump of the burned structure still remains.

Spiro Nichols, 14, of 534 Main street, escaped from the state reform school for boys Saturday night and tonight Superintendent Owens, of the institution, requested the New London authorities to be on the lookout for the youth. The police visited the home of the boy and were informed by the lad's parents that they had not seen Spiro and that they did not know he had made his escape. The lad was committed to the school several months ago as incorrigible.

An automobile owned and driven by Daniel C. Sullivan, 208 Orange street, Springfield, Mass., and a machine owned and operated by Francis Gay Gauthier, 301 West 47th street, New York, were in collision this afternoon at the corner of Broad street and Jefferson avenue, the location of the collision between the motorcycle of Raymond T. Whiting, of Oakdale, and an automobile driven by Charles P. Walters, Hartford, last Thursday night when Whiting received a fractured skull which resulted in his death. Both machines were damaged, but none of the occupants sustained injury.

ARE WOMEN 100 PER CENT. EFFICIENT?

How many women do you know who are 100 per cent. efficient? That means every nerve and sinew of the body pulsating with life and health as nature intended. Do you not know more who are half dead and half alive, with aches, pains, nervous, irritable and despondent, making themselves miserable and every one around them? Women in this condition should let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound rebuild and restore them to a normal healthy condition which will make them 100 per cent. efficient and life worth living. There are women in every section of this country who testify to its merits.

FITCHVILLE PLANNING A BIG DAY JULY FOURTH

At Fitchville, fourth of July promises to be one of those real celebrations when fun and frolic crowd the entire holiday, arrangements for the day are being planned by the entire community. The features are so thoughtfully arranged that old and young will enter into them with the same anticipation of keen enjoyment.

In the morning there is to be a baseball game with Palmer Brothers' team from New London. This is bound to be exciting for the Fitchville team has yet to meet defeat on its own ground. This event will end around twelve thirty just in time to remind the players that their appetites are not to be denied. A real old fashioned clam chowder dinner is being planned as the noon day meal. It is to be public. After this most satisfying meal will come a program of athletic events. Great interest is being manifested in these various stunts for a local two-hundred pound man has already entered. A tug of war, tub race, hundred yard dash, and a potato race are just a few of the many attractions. The stunts will be held on the grounds in front of Palmer Hall. On the beautiful lawn stretching down to the river will be erected many gaily decorated booths. Local girls will have charge throughout the day. Again in the afternoon, at the ball ground take game of the season is anticipated. Fitchville trimmed the crack team from Lebanon once and expects to again prove its skill. A large crowd from both teams is already secured for this game. Upon returning to the picnic grounds lunch will be served.

Perhaps the most popular amusement of all is to come in the evening in Palmers hall. Some of Norwich's "best" will perform as well as some local entertainers.

Fireworks are to provide diversion later in the evening. At nine o'clock a dance will be given as a fitting ending to a real fourth.

A man never thinks enough of his mother-in-law to make his wife jealous.

Upward Trend in Market

New York, June 30.—The upward movement of stock price today entered upon its fourth week. Trading was on reduced volume owing to the disposition of many large traders to restrict their commitments pending the selection of the democratic presidential nominee. Flurries taking failed to halt the rising trend which was most pronounced in equipment, chain stores and industrial specialty issues.

Woolworth was again the individual feature, soaring 8 1-2 points to a new record high at 120 1-2. Kresge department stores touches a new high at 61 1-4, some of the other outstanding specialties included United States cast iron pipe, American Express, American Radiator, international telephone, Kenney & Co., Railroad Steel Spring and Remington Typewriter, all up 2 to 5 points.

American led the so-called pivotal stocks with a gain of 3 5-8 a 115 1-4. United States steel again touched par and then eased to 99 1-2 up 1-4. Baldwin and Studebaker each closed 5-8 higher.

The return of criminal indications against some of the principals in naval oil lease investigation failed to have any appreciable effect on the oil shares which held steady on reports that the producers had taken steps to limit the output. Stocks of the Pan-American and Sinclair Companies, the heads of which were indicted, showed only small fractional changes. Revival of activity in transcontinental followed publication of a report that the company had entered into an arrangement with Prairie Oil and Gass for the sale of its output in Moffat field. Atlantic Refining advanced 3 1-2 points in reflection of the successful sale of a $15,000,000 note issue.

Railway shares were practically neglected, most of the principal carriers showing only nominal changes. Daniel Boone Woolen Mills broke seven points when a large block of that stock was pressed for sale.

Call money again held at 3 per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged. Establishment of a new high record by the Canadian dollar at 99 1-8 and a break of 41 points in Danish exchange featured the foreign exchange market. Other rates showed only nominal changes.

Waning Interest in Bonds

New York, June 30.—Waning interest in bond trading today forced prices generally lower, although public utility and a few industrial issues continued to forge ahead.

Foreign financing virtually monopolized the interest of investment circles. Bankers announced that the American portion of the Hungarian re-construction loan amounted to $7,500,000 would be offered on Wednesday. The bonds, bearing 7 1-2 per cent interest, will be sold at 87 1-2.

Reports that a $10,000,000 Finland industrial mortgage loan, guaranteed by the government would be floated here caused a 3 point rop in Finland 6's to 88, a new price for 1924. Preparations were also reported under way for selling a $2,500,000 Norwegian Municipal loan.

New Orleans, Texas and Mexico 6's and Rio Grande and western 4's sold at the year's top prices. Other changes were mainly unimportant.

The Curb Market

New York, June 30.—Stock prices moved irregularly higher in today's curb market, the oil shares displayed moderate strength on reports that definite steps had been taken to curb production in the mid-continent field. Prairie oil and gas led the advance with a gain of 11-2 points.

National Tea, which moved up 8 points to a record top at 205, was the outstanding strong spot of the industrial list. Public utilities were mixed with price changes narrow.

Speculative interest in the mining shares was confined to speculate interest in the mining shares was confined to the penny stocks with the strength and activity of independence lead as one of the few features.

Trading in bonds was again in large volume but price changes were small.

HIGHER PRICES ON THE CORN MARKET

Chicago, June 30.—Persistent unfavorable weather conditions together with expectance of bullish crop estimates tomorrow brought about sharply higher prices in the corn market today. December corn and all deliveries of oats overtopped the season's previous best quotations. Corn closed strong at 2 1-2 to 3c net gain, July 96 1-2 to 96 5-8, with wheat unsettled, July $1.15 1-4@3-8 to $1.15 3-8 and Sept. $1.16 to $1.16 7-8, oats 1c to 1 1-4c up, and provisions ranging from 12 to 15c decline to 5c advance.

Corn led in activity as well as strength. Further heavy rains had fallen in many sections of the corn belt, and damage reports were increasing, especially from Illinois and Iowa. Interest centered on the December delivery, the relative low price of that month proving a special attraction to buyers. Demand for corn to be delivered immediately appears, however, to be somewhat less urgent than of late.

Advances in the wheat market were ascribed chiefly to higher quotations at Winnipeg, the result of lack of sufficient rain in the Canadian Northwest. European crop reports were also unfavorable. Profit-taking sales here and liberal receipts at Wichita caused some reaction though, from the day's top prices.

NOTICE

General Statutes of the State of Connecticut, Section 5348, Regulating Celebration of Fourth of July:

"Every person who, between sunset on the third of July and four o'clock in the forenoon of the following day, or between eleven o'clock in the evening of July fourth and sunrise of the following day, shall discharge any cannon, pistol, gun, firecracker, torpedo, or any explosive causing a loud report, or who shall by ringing a bell, blowing a horn, beating a drum, or in any other manner make any disturbing noise, or make a bonfire, shall be fined not more than five dollars."

The firing of blank cartridges within the city limits is expressly prohibited.

The police are instructed to enforce the law.

Dated at Norwich, Connecticut, June 30th, 1924.

MILO R. WATERS,
Mayor of the City of Norwich.

NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNERS AND TENANTS

All persons are earnestly requested to clean their premises of all old papers, excelsior, straw, old wood and rubbish, and see that it is carted away to the dumping ground or destroyed before 6 p. m., July 3, 1924.

If all property owners will assist the fire department in this matter of removing rubbish, a large fire may be prevented and small fires reduced to the minimum.

The following suggestions, if carried out, may prevent a conflagration:

Take in under cover all barrels, boxes, etc., or any inflammable material that is liable to add to the danger.

Close all cellars, windows and airways where a match or crackers could be carelessly dropped.

See that all old papers, hay, excelsior, etc., is removed from under the gratings in your sidewalks.

Learn your nearest fire alarm box and ask someone to teach you how to send in an alarm, if you have not been instructed, and use it if necessary.

If you have a telephone in your home or place of business, it may be quicker to telephone to some fire station, being carful to give the correct locality and number of house.

Place the numbers of the fire department telephones on your instrument, so as to be ready. These should always be there ready for any emergency.

Connect your garden hose and have it ready. Also bring your ladder from its usual place and have it ready to get to the roof of your house, where most of the trouble will be, as Norwich is a city of shingled roofs.

HOWARD L. STANTON,
Chief of Fire Department and Fire Marshal. jy1d

TAKES APPEAL FROM GAMBLING CHARGE FINE

The city court had a session Monday morning that lasted until nearly noon. The presentation of the case of Peter Guastamachia charged with operating a gambling place in the bowling alleys in the Thayer building basement, took up a large part of the time. The police seized a board there Saturday night with a number of holes arranged in it which was in use on a pool table.

Guastamachia was fined $50 and costs taking an appeal and furnishing a bond of $100 through his attorney, E. W. Perkins. Guastamachia told the court that the device had been in his pool room only about on hour, having been brought in by a man named Stretch, who made the board. He told of other pool rooms in the city where he said the board was in use.

The breach of the peace case against two brothers-in-law who had a fight in the Bean Hill section Sunday afternoon was continued to Wednesday morning under bonds.

Two men were fined $5 and costs each for intoxication, one paying $15.70 and the other $13.50. Edward Crowe who was before the court on an intoxication charge, was sent to jail for 14 days. He was committed on an old suspended sentence that was given him last May. Alex Weaver was also sent to jail for 30 days on a breach of the peace charge. The complaint was made by his wife.

A nolle was entered in the case of Leo Leonard who had been summoned to court after he had run into three men about two weeks ago while they were walking in the highway on Boswell avenue at the Taftville crossing.

Making Canadian Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Louis N. LaPre accompanied by two of their sons, Herbert and Wilfred, and their daughter, Blanche, all of this city, left Monday morning by automobile for Canada, where they will spend two weeks visiting various places of interest including the Shrine of St. Anne and Montreal.

They will also visit Valcourt Ely, P. Q., the birthplace of Mr. La Pre. He left there thirty-nine years ago and this is his first visit back home.

TOWN OF NORWICH LOSES ON APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

In several New London county decisions handed down by the supreme court at New Haven Monday, the Town of Norwich loses its appeal to the court over the payment by the receiver of the Shore Line Electric Railway Co. to pay for the repairs to a portion of Preston bridge, so-called. No error was found by the court in the judgment given by Judge George E. Hinman before whom the case was tried.

The action centered about the question of whether the trolley company receiver was obliged to pay for the repairs to the portion between the tracks two feet outside the rails, or whether he should pay for only eight inches outside the rails besides the space between the tracks. The amount for the larger area was $1,649.89, the work having been done between September and November, 1923, and for the smaller area the amount was $549.96, for which Judge Hinman gave judgment.

It was the contention of the town's attorneys that the trolley road receiver was bound by a certain contract made between the town of Norwich and Westerly street Railway Co., but the attorneys for the receiver held that the obligation of the company was measured by Chapter 314, public acts of 1921, which defined eight inches outside the tracks as the limit to which the company was committed for repairs. This view was sustained Judge Hinman.

Theophilus Allyn Will Case

In another New London county case which was reserved to the supreme court for the construction of the will of Theophilus M. Allyn of New London, the supreme court rules that under the will a gift to his son, Elmer E. Allyn, is not revoked.

No error was found in the New London case of James W. Hillhouse and others vs Giosue Duca and others, in which an appeal was taken by Harry K. Kennedy, a New London plumber, and by The F. H. & A. H. Chappel Co., lumber dealers.

MAKE FIRELESS FOURTH SAYS CHIEF STANTON

With the approach of July 4th Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton has issued his usual warning to the people of Norwich to do all in their power to prevent any fires on that day. This can be done, Chief Stanton says, if everyone will clean up all rubbish, papers excelsior, straw, old wood, etc., that may now be lying in places where there is a possibility of fire.

Chief Stanton gives out the following suggestions, which, if carried out, may prevent a conflagration:

Take in under cover all barrels boxes, etc., or any inflammable material that is likely to add to the danger.

Close all cellars, windows, and airways where a match or crackers could be carelessly dropped.

See that all old papers, hay, excelsior, etc., are removed under the gratings in your sidewalk.

Learn your nearest fire alarm box and ask someone to teach you how to send in an alarm, if you have not been instructed, and use it if necessary.

If you have a telephone in your home or place of business it may be quicker to telephone to some fire station, being careful to give the correct locality and number of house.

Place the numbers of the fire department telephones on your instrument so as to be ready. These should be there ready for any emergency.

Connect your garden hose and have it ready. Also bring your ladder from its customary place and have it ready to get to the roof of your house where most of the danger will be, as Norwich is a city of shingled roofs.

All of these suggestions are given in order that every precaution may be taken pending the firing of the crackers, etc., on July 4. If the suggestions are carried out the usual number of July 4 fires will be greatly reduced and the fire losses in Norwich reduced to a minimum.

CONNECTICUT PUPILS WIN SAFETY PRIZES

An essay by Mary E. Dodd, a pupil of the Broadway Grammar school, Norwich, entitled "Highway Safety Habits I Should Learn," has been awarded first prize in the national safety contest, it was announced Monday at Washington by the Highway Education Board. Announcement of her winning has previously been announced in The Bulletin. Through Dr. A. B. Meredith, commissioner of education, this pupil has been presented by the board with an appropriate gold medal together with a check for $15 and in addition enjoys the honor of representing her state in competition for one of three national prizes, namely, first, a gold watch and a trip to Washington; second and third, gold watches. Second state prize was won by Alice N. Parsons, a pupil of the Elizabeth Street school, also of Norwich, who has received a silver medal and a check for $10. The national safety contests are conducted annually among the elementary school children of the nation for the promotion of safety education.

Miss Gertrude J. Gorman, teacher in the Grassy Plain school, Bethel, has won first state honors for her practical lesson in training children in habits of safety—a companion to the safety contest. Miss Gorman's paper will likewise represent Connecticut in the national competition for one of three grand prizes—a check for $500 together with a trip to Washington, a check for $300, or a check for $200.

In addition to the first and second prizes for pupils, four third prizes, bronze medals and checks for $5 have been presented to the following pupils: Annette Engleman, Salem school, Naugatuck; Esther Kaplan, Summerfield school, Bridgeport; Sarah Diamond, Danielson; and Cassidy Driscoll, Broadway Grammar school, Norwich.

Summer Drownings Fewer

Summer drownings are not as numerous as formerly, in spite of the fact that more persons are exposed to risk. It is though that the increased knowledge of swimming, the improved methods of rescue work and a more general understanding of resuscitation methods accounts for the decline. Back in 1914 the mortality tables of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company show that ten out of every 100,000 of its industrial policyholders met death by drowning. Last year it ran less than seven. In July, 1921, the company was paying claims at the rate of nine deaths by drowning daily. Last July the average was almost two less. Accidental drowning is still a serious vacation peril, but most deaths from this cause are preventable ones, and the exercise of extreme care on the part of both swimmers and non-swimmers cannot be too strongly urged.

BIBLE STUDENT SPEAKER LECTURED AT THEATER

Under the auspices of the International Bible Students association, C. C. Rice, a traveling representative of the association, lectured Sunday afternoon at the Breed theater upon Church at War—Nations Divided.

In part he said:

The race started in the garden of Eden with a meager knowledge of God; yet it was pure. Disobedience brought disfavor from the Creator, and the race was permitted to drift. Religious conflicts and wars of conquest have written the history of the world in blood as the race multiplied and sought new homesteads.

Each nation, as it grew in power, became imbued with the thought that it should rule all the others. God has permitted this rule of violence, though not without working out His great plan of the ages, as to time and events. Various nations have dominated the world—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, Rome. Napoleon tried it. The kaiser tried it. Mr. Wilson tried it in a league of nations covenant. Wars have been overruled of God to stop the selfish ambitions of certain individuals. The nations are still divided, and many of them are preparing for war on larger scales than ever before. The next war with its poison gas and airplanes will be so destructive that the nations will be brought to their senses; for the Lord now has a controversy with them because of their murderous proclivities. In God's due time, which is very near, He will cause wars to cease to the end of the earth.

Various systems of religions have prospered in the world. Not being in covenant relation with God they proceeded to work out their own religious laws and precepts, until now there are seven different Bibles in the world; and the Christian religion has only a fraction of the peoples of earth as its adherents, and even among these a very small proportion make the Bible precepts a rule of life.

Not all who have professed Christianity are Christians. A "falling away" manifested itself in St. Paul's day, and grew with such rapidity that by 325 A. D. the Council of Nice formulated a creed so out of harmony with the Scriptures that all who subscribed to it became, whether knowingly or unknowingly, opponents of God; and these have assisted and supported a great system which is stigmatized in the Bible as "Babylon"—mystic Babylon, whose doom is recorded in Revelation, 18th chapter.

At the Council of Nice the contention then was over the nature of Jesus—whether as a man He was a human being, or whether He was a part man and part divine, or whether He was God incarnated. It was decided at the council that He was the third part of a triune God; the three were: "God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Ghost." When it is known that that with the spurious text 1 John 5:7 removed, there is not the slightest proof in the Bible for the doctrine of the trinity, thinking Christians become alarmed.

The controversy between Modernists and Fundamentalists has been so timed by God as to bring out the truth on this most vital point at a time when all professing Christians who are not established on the rock-foundation of the truth, must have their superstructure washed away; for Babylon must fall and cease to function in the early dawn of the Messianic kingdom, which is even now beginning to manifest itself in the world. The net in which the churches are caught is a net of their own weaving. We have been taught that the world could not get along without the churches. We wish to affirm that the world cannot go on with them. When they are gone peace will come; and the truth will come to benighted humanity.

The truth is: Jesus is not God, nor a third part of God. In the Bible He is over and over again declared to be the Son of God. St. Paul says: "There is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we in him; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we by him." Rightly understood there is not a thing in the Bible out of harmony with that statement. Jesus had a prehuman existence on the spirit plane, and was known as the Logos. His life was transferred to Mary, who nourished it and gave to it its human organism. It was not the spirit nature that was transferred, but the spark of life. Not being of Adamic stock Jesus "was holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners," though a man—a man in perfection. He died as a perfect man; His humanity was not forfeited, but surrendered in the interest of human life as man's redemption price. He was raised from the dead, not a human being, but a divine being.

Had Jesus been divine while on earth He could not have died; for a divine being has immortality, which means that such is death-proof. Had He been less than a perfect man His death would have availed nothing. Jehovah God is the Author of the plan of salvation; and Jesus Christ is God's well-beloved Agent, who is carrying out that plan as our Savior.

Spoke at Universalist Church

At the Sunday morning service at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist, a most stimulating address was given by Harry Hibschman, L. L. D., lecturer of the Swarthmore Chautauqua.

Next Saturday morning 19 delegates from the Sunday school and the Young Peoples Christian Union will start for the convention and institute at Ferry Beach, Maine.

Next Sunday morning the Holy Communion of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the service of morning worship.

LARGER SPHERE OF WEALTH DISCUSSED BY PASTOR

The Larger Sphere of Wealth was the topic presented at the Radiator Co., at the Monday noon hour by Rev. Charles H. Ricketts. It was given as usual under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. and was the final address of the season.

Mr. Ricketts spoke in part as follows:

There is a great deal of foolish talk about money as though it were a moral quality in itself. Apart from the user, money is absolutely neutral. As a thing in itself the Bible has neither praise nor censure. It is true that we are warned against the "deceitfulness" of riches, that is, they will not give us the pleasure we anticipate, but that is not criticism.

It also tells us that it is "hard for a rich man to get into heaven, because of the time and care imposed in looking after wealth." We are also informed that "money is the root of all evil." This is because so many crimes are committed for the purpose of getting money.

When we come to define riches, we find it difficult to give preciseness to the idea attached to the word. "The man who has gold enough for all his wants is rich." Money is only a means to an end, and that end is the convenient attainment of things necessary for comfortable living.

Let us remember that money is by no means the only substance of a rich life. There is a wealth quite apart from material possession. There is a popular notion that riches consist only of houses and land, stocks and bonds, gold and silver. But the Bible tells us that "a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth." Weath is not made up so much by what a man has, as by what he is; it is not so much what outside things do for us, as what we make outside things do for our own good and the good of others.

The speaker emphasized the following points:

1. There is the wealth of the mind. The man of trained intellect is in a position to acquire all necessary wealth, other things, of course, being equal. Such a man is rich both by what he is and by what he is able to produce.

2. One may be rich in the things of God. The possession of His spirit creates within us a good conscience which is one great asset of life.

3. There is the wealth of faith. The man who has faith in God, faith in his fellow beings, and a reasonable faith in himself to be and to do is rich. The chronic doubter usually has small and shrivelled nature.

4. Rich in the performance of good works we do not think of Florence Nightingale or John Howard in terms of dollars and cents but in what they did.

5. Rich in the heavenly treasure. This treasure is a passport into the life beyond. Earthly treasure as such has no power beyond the point of physical death.

AT SUMMER HOME IN VERMONT FOR VACATION

Miss M. Janie Leach, one of the efficient teachers at the County Home, who resides with the Evans family, 24 Colt street, has gone to her summer home in Pawlet, Vt., for the season and will return in September to resume her school work. Before leaving for Vermont she gave a very enjoyable evening to a party of friends, among them being Mrs. Genie Evans, with her mother, Mrs. R. A. Moraty, who is here visiting. They went first to Westerly where they were the recipients of lovely flowers and rhododendron plants, then to Watch Hill, stopping at the beach. The return was by way of Preston City, taking her guests to the home and through each apartment of the spacious and well appointed school buildings, cool, comfortable and immaculate with the care that is given there.

After passing from one hand to another the old Y. M. C. A. property on Broadway was finally bought outright Monday by William Goldschine and H. L. A. The purchase was made from Harry Rosenthal and Max Rosenthal of New York, who took over the property on a foreclosure proceeding of the Chelsea Savings bank.

The new owners intend to make extensive alterations throughout the building, making the top floor over into apartments. Plans for the lower part of the building have not been completed.

LAFOLLETTE CHAIN LETTERS COMING TO NORWICH

Letters asking for votes for Lafollette for president are being received in this city.

One of the women attending the lecture by Mrs. Morrill Hamlin of Greenwich Monday afternoon at the Community house told Mrs. Hamlin, in the question period that followed the lecture, that her husband had received a letter asking him to vote for Lafollette and asking him to forward copies of the letter to 49 of his friends. The Norwich woman asked Mrs. Hamlin what she would have done with it.

"I should have signed that letter, I will not vote for a renegade republican," and had the whole thing published in the Norwich papers," was Mrs. Hamlin's quick reply.

"We put it in the waste basket," was the Norwich woman's comment

JUNE RAINFALL WAS LESS THAN TWO INCHES

June gave only a scanty rainfall, according to the measurements taken by the water department office, which showed 1.97 inches, the product of five showers.

The reservoirs are holding up well for this season of the year. Stony Brook being one foot and Fairview ten inches down from full pond.

M'ADOO AND SMITH FORCES FIGHTING GRIM WARFARE

Democratic National Deadlock on Presidential Nomination Remains Unbroken—Delegates Adjourn for Night After 30th Ballot Fails to Result in Choice of Candidate—McAdoo Still in Lead Despite Material Loses and Threats of More—Smith Climbing Steadily But Still Short of Even a Third of Total Delegate Strength—Thirtieth Ballot Gives McAdoo 415, Smith 323.

Madison Square Garden, July 1—After balloting through two more long sessions, the democratic national convention adjourned late tonight with its fight over the presidential nomination still a draw.

Despite material losses, and threats of more, McAdoo still was in the lead on the thirtieth and last ballot before adjournment, with Smith climbing steadily, but still short of even a third of the total delegate strength.

John W. Davis, by picking off stray votes here and there and two or three solid state delegations, had gone into third place, and the friends of Ralston of Indiana were taking renewed hope from assurances given them of a swing to their candidate once the deciding break in the balloting comes.

The backers of the Indiana senator declared he would be satisfactory to the McAdoo forces; should Mr. McAdoo release his delegates, and that William Jennings Bryan and other leaders were actively working toward the nomination of Ralston.

Another long and weary day of balloting had accomplished little except to hold in check the two leaders, McAdoo and Smith—and build up the hopes of several of the trailing group of dark horse candidates.

The friends of John W. Davis and Ralston of Indiana, were claiming the greatest advantage from the day's voting. Davis had climbed from almost nothing at the start to a total of more than one hundred votes, and the Ralston supporters had received large accretions, principally from the McAdoo camp. That encouraged them to believe their man eventually would be the choice of the convention.

Insiders insisted that William Jennings Bryan was working in perfect harmony with the Ralston camp and would be depended on not to start an independent fight for the Hoosier senator. His particular ambition, they said, was to stop Davis and no one is urging him to get Ralston out in front at this stage of the game and use him as an implement on the Davis boom. The Bryan attack upon the candidacy of John W. Davis was maintained during the recess hours.

The twenty-fifth ballot on the democratic national convention, first of the night session and tenth of the day, was like its predecessors in producing no nomination. It also failed to show any tangible evidence of the trades and shifts which were being made, but the leaders declared those were simmering and would be forthcoming later.

Conferences of the McAdoo and Smith managers in conferences during the day had held caucuses and decided to wait a while longer for their candidates. So far as Ralston was concerned his friends said they were certain sooner or later to get several votes in a general breakup and they were not anxious to force it immediately. The Davis men seemed content with the strength displayed by their candidate during the day's balloting and confident despite the fact that William Jennings Bryan had declared his opposition to Davis and was counselling his associates to go to Ralston if there were a break in the McAdoo ranks.

On the twenty-fifth ballot the leaders stood:

McAdoo 436.5, Smith 308.5; Davis 26; Underwood 39.5.

This showed a loss of two for McAdoo, a gain of half a vote for Smith, a loss of three and a half for Davis. Underwood was unchanged.

During the recess the Ohio organization created something in the way of a general staff. At the head of the new floor committee were E. H. Moore of Youngstown, and former Senator Pomerene of Canton. Others on the committee were J. Henry Goeke of Lima; W. W. Durbin of Kenton and Joel Shoup of Dayton. The creation of the war council was regarded by members of the Ohio delegation as a reaching out for contacts with other delegations.

Into the 26th ballot, the convention plunged, led by a good reading clerk who had refreshed himself and tuned up his vocal chords during the recess.

Nebraska gave Smith two more than formerly and gave one to Ralston which he did not have before. The votes were taken from John W. Davis and Senator Walsh of Montana.

The casting of New York's ninety for Smith brought North Carolina's twenty for McAdoo hurtling back across the hall as usual.

Oklahoma made the expected departure from McAdoo and cast her twenty for Senator Owen, the senior senator from the state. It was promptly challenged by a delegate and the poll was deferred to the end of the roll call. The Oregonian's Pennsylvania's seventy six were still flying loose on the twenty sixth ballot but the dividends of them in the field made no change for the leaders.

The twenty sixth ballot produced no sensation and timely change in the voting. The only feature of the ballot was an attempt by the Oklahoma delegation to leave McAdoo and go to Senator Owen of Oklahoma while looking around in the field of candidates. It produced challenges and a poll of the delegation.

McAdoo votes were there but under the unit rule the votes went for Owen. The total for the leaders on the ballot then stood this way: McAdoo 415.5; Smith 311.5; Davis 135.

This was a loss of 21 for McAdoo; a gain of 3 for Smith.

The break in Oklahoma came at the instance of the Davis followers, headed by Charles A. Welch of Antlers, who demanded an opportunity to get the entire delegation behind the west Virginian.

Welch predicted the state's twenty votes would go into the Davis column within five ballots. Governor Trapp, chairman of the delegation declared the vote would never get back to McAdoo again.

During the evening recess William Jennings Bryan called at the McAdoo headquarters for a conference with the candidate. Afterwards it was said there that Mr. Bryan's opposition to John W. Davis did not mean that he was prepared to throw his support from the McAdoo camp to that of some other candidate.

Commenting on the gain made by Davis on balloting today, Rockwell charged that big business was interested in the Davis candidacy.

At the end of the 26th ballot McAdoo had less than he started with 26 ballots ago.

Smith had a loss on that ballot, but the mere mention of his name in announcing the result set the galleries off on another fit of whistling and howling that stopped the proceedings altogether.

Chairman Walsh took a vacation during the twenty-seventh ballot and left the veteran democrat, Judson Harmon of Ohio in the chair. Having been a presidential contender himself, the Ohio warhorse looked over the tug of war with a good deal of interest.

North Carolina which had been voting her 24 solid for McAdoo broke on this ballot and gave two and a half to John W. Davis. The remainder went to McAdoo as usual.

Wyoming made the switch forecast by giving five to Smith and one to John W. Davis. Massachusetts and Pennsylvania standards flew down the table and escorted the Wyoming standard into a quickly formed procession which picked up adherents as it moved.

McAdoo lost one and one-half votes in North Carolina, which were divided one to Josephus Daniels, and one-half to Smith. The Smith adherents in the gallery let out a roaring cheer.

Judson Harmon read the results, the convention gave him a cheer for Auld Lang Syne, and a new clerk charged into the 28th ballot.

In Arizona J. W. Davis lost one to Senator Robinson. In Colorado, McAdoo took half a vote from J. W. Davis.

The four in Illinois which had been going to Glass went to Owen on this ballot.

In Massachusetts half a vote was taken from Smith and given to Governor Ritchie, of Maryland. Smith's vote there was not changed. Then Michigan took one from J. W. Davis and gave it to Senator Ralston.

South Dakota placed one vote on Ralston, previously it had been going to Ritchie.

In Colorado McAdoo picked up one, taking it from John W. Davis.

Georgia sang in chorus again "Twenty-eight votes for Mc."

Illinois which had been scattering their votes among half a dozen candidates, passed.

In Massachusetts Governor Smith recovered the half vote which previously had been transferred from him to Ritchie.

North Dakota divided its vote between McAdoo and Smith, giving the latter one previously voted for J. W. Davis.

Vermont transferred the one vote it had been giving to McAdoo to Fred C. Martin, of Bennington, a member of the delegation. The vote of the Panama Canal Zone delegation was challenged and a poll of the delegation was ordered.

When the break came in North Carolina it was on an effort of friends of Josephus Daniels, former secretary of the navy, to swing the entire 24 votes to the native son, but the move was blocked by the McAdoo friends without a fight when Daniels passed out the word that he was not a serious contender in the presidential race.

The word went around that an adjournment until tomorrow would be asked at the conclusion of the 30th ballot.

Smith gained two in Illinois but the greater part of the vote still was widely scattered.

The delegation stood three for McAdoo and three for Smith.

It developed that the reason Illinois passed was that Chairman Brennan was not in his seat when the name of the state first was called. It made no change in the vote from the previous ballot.

After 30 ballots Pennsylvania still was scattering her 76 votes in seven directions without altering her division among the leaders.

The ballot ran on through to the end without material change from the previous one.

The announcement of the Smith vote was greeted with another tremendous outburst from the galleries, which had little reflection on the convention floor. Senator Walsh restored quiet and went on with the reading. At its conclusion the convention adjourned until 10.30 a. m. tomorrow.

JAPANESE CUTS DOWN FLAG AT UNITED STATES EMBASSY

Incident Was Discussed in Lower House of Japanese Diet—Matter Reported to Premier Kato During Session of House of Representatives—According to Foreign Office Statement Compound was Secretly Entered by Young Japanese Who Stealthily Lowered Embassy Flag and Made Good His Escape—Special Meeting of Tokio Cabinet May Be Called.

Tokio, July 1. (By the A. P.).—The cutting down of the American flag at the United States embassy here by an unidentified Japanese was discussed in the lower house of the diet today, while it was officially indicated that a special meeting of the cabinet might be held to discuss the affair.

The matter was reported to Premier Kato today during a session of the house of representatives. With Foreign Minister Shidehara and Home Minister Wakatsuki, the premier immediately left the chamber for a conference as to what action should be taken. Following the conference, a most thorough police search for the man who cut down the flag was ordered, together with an investigation into all phases of the affair.

A formal statement of the incident was issued by the foreign office. "I realize what the American flag means to the American people," Minister Shidehara said in making public the statement. "We are most regretful that this has happened."

The foreign office statement read:

"A man apparently about 27 years old secretly entered the compound of the United States embassy, stealthily lowered the embassy flag, and then made good his escape. The action was discovered by several policemen dispatched thither in connection with the anti-American demonstrations which had been going on in the city since morning. Chase was given immediately. The police lost sight of the man they sought after a hot chase for a short distance.

POLICE INQUIRY REVEALS DETAILS OF INCIDENT

Tokio, July 1.—(By the A. P.)—Numerous details of the cutting down of the American flag in the United States embassy compound today have been brought to light by police inquiry although the identity of the Japanese who slashed the halyards and then unceremoniously removed the ensign had not been uncovered several hours after the affair.

The officers' inquiry disclosed that about 13.45 p. m. a Japanese stole into the compound, climbed the flag pole and cut the flag from the ropes with which it is hoisted, escaping before the police arrived. The cutter seized an opportunity to enter the compound when there were no Americans in that part of the enclosure which formerly surrounded the embassy buildings destroyed by the earthquake and fire of last September.

Until recently a body of marines was encamped within the compound but now only three of the party are left. The embassy offices are being housed in the Imperial hotel pending erection of a new building. This is half a mile away from the compound, none of the three men remaining in the compound saw the cutting.

SAYS U. S. OIL WILL SOON BE EXHAUSTED

London, July 1.—Sir Richard Redmayne, British mining expert, told the international power conference at today's session of that body that the oil resources of the United States would be exhausted in a generation and the coal supply within 2,000 years. The coal of the British empire would be gone within a few centuries, he declared, and attention should be directed to using the potential energy in fuel to the best effect so as to conserve the world's supply. A low temperature of carbonization in coal would be an important step in this direction.

O. C. Merrill, executive secretary of the federal power commission of the United States, the general chairman, said the United States was undertaking the greatest water power development in its history, with 10,000,000 horsepower construction or licensed.

The conference sessions, begun yesterday with representatives of 39 countries, including a large American delegation present, will continue for a fortnight.

Pointing out the progress achieved in the development of Palestine, the resolution recommended that the headquarters be removed to Perusalem together with the headquarters of the Palestine foundation fund, the chief Zionist financial instrument to which American Jews have contributed $6,000,000.

Convention leaders declared they expected the recommendation would precipitate a bitter fight at the London meeting, strong opposition coming from the European Zionists.

WILLIMANTIC

"The Spirit of '76 still lives and will continue to exist and be an attribut of every American citizen which will be respected by the world over, so long as America stands for democracy, freedom and righteousness," were the inspiring words brought out in forceful manner by Attorney Thomas J. Kelley, speaker at the weekly session of Willimantic Rotary club Tuesday noon. His subject was "Independence Day and What It Signifies" and the address was the nucleus around which a patriotic program had been arranged, under the chairmanship of James P. Bath. Mr. Bath used eloquent words in introducing the speaker, who lent the services of four sons to his country during the World war. Thanking the club for the courtesy extended him and expressing his complete and sincere sympathy with the subject of his talk, Attorney Kelley extolled the glories of the American nation from its infancy when thirteen thinly populated colonies tottered feebly against an aggrieved world to the present day, when forty-eight great states combine to make it a pillar of strength among the nations of the world. Stressing the necessity for safeguarding American citizenship and patriotism, the speaker chose as the nation's ideal citizen "the predominant and preeminent figure in that first great struggle for independence and democracy, George Washington." Referring to the spirit of '76, Attorney Kelley gave a brief eloquent outline of American achievement on the battlefield when that same spirit came to the fore and America undauntedly asserted her rights for a century and a half, down through to 1917, when the kaiser attempted to dictate to the country that but one vessel should sail on but one day out of the week of seven days—and he in turn was told where he could go on all of the seven days of every week. "We have been charged with being a nation of bluffers," said the speaker, "but were we bluffing when the shot that was heard around the world was fired at Lexington; were we bluffing when 1500 raw recruits withstood an army of trained troops at Bunker Hill; did Cornwallis think it a bluff when he handed over his sword at Yorktown; and again when Americans rallied the first battle of the Prussian reserve at Chateau-Thierry and when tons of American cannon shells silenced the enemy and ended that epic struggle of all nations of the universe."

"As long as the United States stands for democracy, as long as Americans love freedom the Stars and Stripes will continue to fly over the land of the free and the home of the brave and Independence Day will always maintain its true significance," concluded the speaker. A hearty round of applause and a rising vote of thanks by the audience followed the conclusion of the address.

The meeting was opened with lively selections by John F. Quinlan, pianist, and Ralph Gibson, violinist. Answering to a call of Song Leader John F. Albert, a double quintet composed of the following belched forth in close harmony: George W. Hickey, Raymond A. Parker, Dr. R. Bullock, Harry W. Standish, John R. Pickett, Elmore S. Smith, William A. Dawson, James P. Mustard, Henry M. Congdon and Maurice S. Leonard.

Carry Me Back to Old Virginny was rendered by a sextette, Dr. Jones, Ray Parker, Hen Congdon, John Pickett, Harry Standish, Ellison Smith and George Hickey. Secretary Hill called the roll, showing that the attendance was nearly perfect. George Buck attended the meeting of the Palmer club last week, enabling the local club to chalk up a 99 per cent. attendance for that week. Letters of appreciation were received from a small boy to whom a new suit and shoes were given for recent graduating exercises; from Dudley H. Burr who was awarded the Rotary loving cup as best all-round athlete at Windham High school, and from the newly elected first vice president of Rotary International, Don Adams, former district governor, to whom a congratulatory telegram was sent. Seated in the dining room were Mr. and Mrs. Mathewson, the former a New Haven Rotarian, and they were hailed as guests. Doctors M. D. Riordan and William E. Hendry were tardy, but declined making excuses, on the grounds that they would thereby violate a ruling of their profession. Kind-hearted Rotarians who lacked a sweet tooth donated some half dozen pieces of rhubarb pie to Secretary Hill who was requested to give a pie eating exhibition but got cold feet when he discovered that he was seated in proximity to Funeral Director Fred L. Avery. Like the democratic convention, the gathering was divided into two sections but for the battle of ballots was substituted a song duel, one-half the club rendering Keep the Home Fires Burning under leadership of Ray Parker and the remaining specialists booming away on There's a Long Long Trail a Winding. In connection with the patriotic program the members arose and with the waving of individual American flags sang Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean. Frank M. Foss, chairman of the Fourth of July committee submitted a report of progress which was accepted along with a suggestion that the "shrimpsters" of the club, Charles Pomeroy and A. Linn Weatheread lead the Rotary broncho in the parade. Following announcement at 1.35, the board of directors and the fellowship committee went into executive session.

"There'll be something doing in the old town Fourth of July, it is indicated with certainty as plans for the big celebration and parade develop daily. Jeremiah McCarthy, George A. Bartlett and Eugene E. Hickey, each in charge of a division of the procession made announcements Tuesday that practically everything was in readiness. Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock as the Federal Tea truck, 23280 Conn., of Norwich and driven by Edward Gilchrist, 717 Boswell avenue, came down Liberty street, it was in collision with the Buick coupe, L-743, Conn., of Louis S. Poutray of Main street, Stonington. The coupe was coming out of Noyes avenue and was hit on the left side, was badly dented and the fenders bent and twisted. The left side of the truck was also damaged. Pawcatuck patrolmen, Charles W. Conners and Francis J. McMahon, investigated the collision and Gilchrist was summoned to appear before a session of Stonington town court in Borough hall, this (Wednesday) morning at 9 o'clock.

James McGarvie of the West Side received for the Anguilla Gun club, of Stonington, six cans of fingerling brook from the Burlington hatchery, for distribution in the brooks of the town. Two weeks ago twenty-six cans of fish were received from the hatchery so that the six cans, which came by truck Tuesday, thirty-two cans altogether have been received and distributed. Brooks in which the trout were placed were Anguilla, Shunoc, Shingle Mill, Wyassup, Sim White and Yawbaux. This is the third year of brook stocking by the Anguilla club. Previous to this time for a period of at least twelve years not a fish was received for distribution in Stonington brooks. The members of the club, who assisted in the work Tuesday besides Secretary McGarvie were James A. Sheldon, Fred Harvey and Adin Sheldon. The membership of the Anguilla Gun which now numbers one hundred, greatly appreciate the co-operation of Supt. John W. Titcomb of the Connecticut State Fish and Game commission. The advantage of having a club like the Gun club is easily shown by their ability to obtain the fish which they send for, as compared with previous years when the requests of individuals were not as promptly complied with. The real sportsman also claims an advantage in having the fish as early in the season as the first of July when the law goes on the brooks and when there is more water in them. They claim that when the fish are received in August the brooks are lower and the natural enemies of the fish, such as mink, snakes and turtles find their prey more readily. But under favorable conditions and in advantageous brooks it is said that these trout, which were put in the brook Tuesday will in two years time attain a length which is legal for taking them.

The Anguilla Gun club is looking forward to the receipt of pheasants from the state authorities, which they will place them in suitable localities.

There are thousands of women who are literally slaves to their kitchen because the food upon which they lavish so much care and attention is likely to spoil if the fire is too hot, or not hot enough.

Coal and wood stoves require endless attention. They make every kitchen hot and difficult to keep clean. They mean the heavy hauling of coal or wood and ashes.

The New Perfection Oil Cookstove burns kerosene—clean and odorless. It is practically automatic in its operation, and delivers a wide range of heat—bakes, broils, boils, roasts, and toasts.

It eliminates coal, dirt and ashes. It adds immeasurably to personal comfort because it keeps the kitchen cool.

Ask your dealer to demonstrate the particular model which you like best, and which you will find displayed in his store. Remember that each New Perfection model, whether it be the famous Blue Chimney, or the fast-as-gas Superfex, represents the utmost in cooking satisfaction at its price.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

Women Who Give, Reginald Barker's latest Metro production, which comes to the Breed theatre today is heralded as the season's most thrilling story that deals with seafaring men and their wives and sweethearts who patiently await the return of their loved ones who go down to the sea in ships. It is an adaption of that famous classic, Cape Cod Folks, by Sarah P. McLean Greene and has been directed with all the noted skill of Mr. Barker, who engaged a most impressive cast to enact the leading roles. The two prominent feminine characters in the photodrama are played by Barbara Bedford and Renee Adoree, two particular fans of this city. Women Who Give has numberless exciting and thrilling scenes among which might be mentioned a desperate battle with a huge swordfish in which the players nearly lost their lives. There are two distinct love stories running through the plot of Women Who Give and there is comedy relief, so taken all in all, this Louis B. Mayer-Metro offering contains the elements of universal appeal, everything that goes into the making of a thoroughly worth while photodrama.

Closing a three day run at the Breed theatre tonight, the William Fox production of The Temple of Venus offers the beauties of nature, adorned and otherwise. Those of the island of Santa Cruz in the Pacific ocean are unadorned and remarkably effective.

Mr. Levine made the statement:

"We have always maintained high-class entertainment in our Broadway and Strand theatres and for this reason we took considerable time and effort to go over the forty Paramount pictures, to make sure they were in keeping with the likings of our patrons. The program is a wonderful one and we know will please the people of Norwich. Never before has such a wonder list of titles, stars and directors been assembled under one banner, but Paramount certainly fulfills the true meaning of its name in its new program."

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

The approach of July 5—the date on which it previously has been announced the new parking regulations in certain business streets and adjoining thoroughfares will become effective—serves to direct attention to the changes that are to be brought about under the new order of things. The parking regulations have been given due and detailed publicity. It is assumed that motorists, at least those resident in Killingly, have familiarized themselves with them.

Anticipating the putting of the code into operation, Chief John McFarland had new No Parking signs up in certain sections of the business section, Tuesday. Every consideration will be shown motorists in the enforcement of the new regulations. If the motorists reciprocate, there need be no clash of interests.

The police have much work cut out for them in keeping check on parked cars and on how long they occupy any given parking space. This the officers will try to do as carefully as possible and to enforce the new regulations with the least possible friction.

Such rules as have been made are put in force in the hope of easing off the traffic congestion in the business section, this congestion made materially worse by long lines of parked cars. It so happens that Danielson's Main street is a part of two state trunk line highways. This complicates the traffic problem here because the movement of machines over both trunk lines is very heavy every day and especially so at week ends.

A work train of the New Haven road and its crew of workers was busy here Tuesday completing roadbed work incident to the recent installation of heavier rails than have heretofore been in use. New creosoted ties have been put in where replacements have been required and the roadbed graded up to meet the requirements of new roadbed equipment.

Thundering northward Monday and Tuesday evening, the Bar Harbor expresses, running in several sections each night, have carried hundreds to the summer playgrounds of Maine. There isn't anything to indicate business depression in the manner in which these trains de luxe are patronized. Those who ride in them appear to have as much money as ever, if the number of trains and the number of cars each night are indications of prosperity, and they probably are.

For the first time in its history of 102 years, the Windham County National bank of Danielson in its semi-annual statement issued Tuesday shows resources in excess of $3,000,000—$3,046,046.52, to be exact. As attended the rapid growth of this bank during a little more than a decade, it may be mentioned that the resources of the bank in the first decade of the present century reached $300,000 for the first time and have since grown amazingly. The past six months have been prosperous ones for the bank, rated one of the most liquid in Connecticut. Of interest is the fact that the institution already has earned and set aside for the December dividend period $40,315.59. The surplus fund, the statement shows, has been increased to $100,000.

The solidity of this bank is added evidence of the importance of Danielson as a banking center and the strides it has made to gain its present splendid position within a period of a dozen years.

Up to late Tuesday afternoon no case of relatives of Enoc Birch, who died in Dayville Monday, had been found. Mr. Birch's history was not even known to any extent by anyone in Attawaugan, where he was last employed. He was an itinerant mill operative, it is believed, going from place to place as fancy called him.

Sporadic use of firecrackers and other explosives in advance of the Fourth has begun to tantalize those who have rasping nerves or dislike such noise in any event. Little of the advance celebrating of the holiday is noised about the central part of the borough, but in the residential districts farther out there was quite a lot of what may be covered by the general term shooting on Tuesday.

The advance guard of the several hundred children and youths on the West Side who must be vaccinated as the result of the order of the health officer of the town of Brooklyn wended its way Tuesday to the offices of physicians who have points and who are doing the necessary service.

Danielson, it is indicated, will be well represented at the observance of the Fourth in East Killingly. The morning attraction is the parade, getting underway at 9 o'clock, standard time. Thereafter the day will be well filled with various events tending to arouse the patriotism of those who attended, renew the inspiration given by the nation's leaders at the time of its birth and withall to furnish diversion and associations that will combine to make East Killingly a splendid place in which to spend the holiday.

Tomorrow (Thursday) evening Goodyear will have its grand display of fireworks and concert, an affair that is likely to attract several thousand people from all the surrounding territory.

A field trip of interest to every fruit grower in the section is to be held July 3, starting at the farm of Harold Easterbrook, Dudley, Mass., 9 a. m. (standard time).

Prof. W. R. Cole, Massachusetts Agricultural College, will discuss storage problems, and apply the principles at the different farms visited.

Other stops in the morning will be at L. H. Lindeman's, East Woodstock, Conn., and William Childs' of Woodstock. At the latter place a stop will be made for dinner. Each is to carry a basket lunch, and either coffee or lemonade will be provided.

In the afternoon calls will be made at Dr. George McClellan's and Herbert Woodbury's, Woodstock Hill, the last stop at Henry B. Buell's, president of the Quinnebaug association.

All are being urged to bring their families and make a picnic of the trip.

Should some be unable to reach Dudley for the start, it is hoped that they will come to Mr. Childs', in order to take part in the afternoon trip.

Roadside stands are beginning to reap the season's harvest of coin. Within a radius of a dozen miles of Danielson, on all the state highways, these little business places are to be found. They add to the joy and comfort of the motoring public and in the aggregate do a surprising amount of business. The season's fruits and flowers are included in their offerings in these early days of July, as well as light refreshments and smokes and what not.

Just in advance of the holiday, Chief John McFarland again warns the public against the use of revolvers in celebrating or in transgressing any law or rule that is intended to make the observance of the Fourth safe and sane. A particular drive will be made against the users of revolvers. As is well known, everyone must have a permit to carry one in any case. Also, their use is forbidden and they can and will be confiscated and the users will not get them back.

Miss Eudora Naylor, injured in the automobile accident at Wauregan on Sunday morning, will be a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam for at least another week. Her face is swollen as the result of the battering she received when the car in which she was riding with a young man ran into a telephone pole, as the result of the steering apparatus failing to function. Miss Naylor, who is a telephone supervisor in New York, was on her way home from a vacation spent in Lynn when the accident occurred.

One hundred and two years of honorable service is sufficient evidence of the reliability of the Windham County National bank as a depository for your funds.—adv.

Radio fans continued to follow with the keenest interest on Tuesday the balloting in the democratic national convention in New York.

Henry A. Horne of New Bedford was a visitor with friends in Danielson Thursday.

Friday, the Fourth, the postoffice will be closed for the transaction of business after 10 a. m., though the lobby will remain open. No money order business will be transacted on the holiday and the city and rural delivery service will be suspended for the day.

Excavating is under way for the foundations of a new home to be erected on the westerly side of Elmville road by Frank A. Davis.

Numbers of bass were brought into Danielson Tuesday by fishermen who went out to enjoy the sport on the first day of the open season.

PUTNAM

Charles E. Dawes, nominee for vice president on the republican ticket, is a great-great-grandson of Manassa Cutler, who was born in East Putnam and became one of the country's famous men after he moved to Ohio, where he was one of the founders of Marietta. Mr. Cutler was the author of the ordinance of 1788 which prohibited slavery north of the Ohio river and due to this the federal government was saved, for it kept those states north of the river in the Union when the south seceded.

George LaFountaine, who was killed in New London Monday when a floor in a brick block collapsed, as told in The Bulletin Tuesday morning, was a resident of Putnam up to a short time ago, and his parents now reside in this city. LaFountaine was a carpenter, but a year or so ago began doing chimney cleaning and flagpole and other work that called for going to a considerable height. He with his brother, Fred LaFountaine, and Theodore Langlois took the contract for painting the spire on the Congregational church last summer. This steeple is the highest in the city and the work of the three men attracted a great deal of attention. LaFountaine was well known in Putnam, where he had lived nearly all his life.

The wrecking crew of the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad was summoned from Midway Tuesday, arriving in Putnam about 1 o'clock in the afternoon. In 55 minutes the men had three box cars back on the iron and returned to their station.

The cars left the track while a train was making up on a siding south of the railroad station. One of the cars leaned to the west and blocked the westbound track so that trains had to be switched to the eastbound track in order to pass. Aside from the inconvenience and delay, little damage was done.

The newly organized Junior Chautauqua Summer club has begun holding meetings. The officers elected to serve until Chautauqua starts in August are: Mayor, John McKenna; town clerk, Helen Varbedian; law and order commission, Ada Morse, Dorothy Varbedian, Blanche McKenna, Harry Morse, Jr.; health commission, Catherine Cody, Donald Fisher, Loretta Dumas; service, Gladys Varbedian, Orin Morse; leader of jolly games and stunts for the boys, Edward Spellacy, Walter Cody, Roy Fisher; leader for the girls, Isabelle Henderson, Medora Benoit, Helen Varbedian, Ada Morse; story teller, Blanche Greene. The Northeastern Connecticut Fish and Game club, organized in Putnam two years ago, is again active in securing large quantities of fingerling trout which are being liberated in brooks in Putnam, Thompson, Woodstock and Pomfret. A quantity of the fingerlings were recently sent to Irving Paine, the fish and game warden in Woodstock. These trout were put into the Nightingale, Lyon and Wauregan brooks of Woodstock; Hermdeen and Bundy brooks, West Woodstock, and Muddy brook, East and North Woodstock.

Members of Putnam lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Woodstock, have accepted an invitation to attend a church service on Woodstock Hill Thursday.

The disappearance of the large number of men that for weeks have been idling about the street in the business section is evidence that they have found work. Most of them were mill operatives made idle by the closing of the factories in the city. The summer months have afforded an opportunity for outdoor employment and apparently most of them have taken any kind of a job that has come to hand through necessity, and the uncertainty as to when Putnam mills will begin operations again. As far as can be learned there is no actual suffering in the city through lack of employment, although demands for town aid are above normal.

Wappaquasset tribe of Red Men has accepted an invitation to participate in the Fourth of July parade at East Killingly. The members will meet at their hall on Pomfret street at 7.30 in the morning and transportation will be furnished to East Killingly. Following the parade, there will be a dinner and sports. The tribe hopes to make a big showing.

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Should Know how this Worker was Made Strong and Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Zahl, N. Dak.—"I was nervous and weak and was not regular. I also had pains frequently. I was sickly for seven years and finally had a nervous break-down following an operation. I am a dressmaker and milliner, and a lady I work for told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am taking it and it has made me well and able to do my work again. I have even helped take care of a sick neighbor recently, so you can see how fit I am. I highly praise your medicine and you may use my letter as you see fit. I hope it will help some other woman."—Mrs. CLS NOZALSEN, Box 29, Zahl, North Dakota.

Over 121,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent. of these replied answer "Yes."

This means that 96 out of every 100 women taking this medicine for ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it. For sale by all druggists.

SUFFERED 20 YEARS BEFORE RELIEF CAME

Mrs. Duckett Was Despondent When Tanlac Brought Change.

"I cannot give Tanlac too many thanks, for it brought back my health and strength after everything else failed and nearly all hope of getting well had left me," is the grateful statement of Mrs. Sarah Duckett, 45 Peru St., Burlington, Vt.

"Stomach trouble and rheumatism had been gradually weakening me down for 20 years. At times I ached all over, could not walk without limping, and felt too weak to get out of my chair. Sleep was almost out of the question and I was nervous, discouraged and despondent.

"When I began taking Tanlac I was down to 120 lbs., but I now weigh 140 and haven't an ailment in the world. This is what Tanlac did for me four years ago and since then I have never been without it in the house. I take a bottle now and then and everyone says I am the picture of health."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills, for constipation; made and recommended by the manufacturers of TANLAC.

NEW ENGLAND WEEK.

A proclamation has been issued for a New England week that will be held throughout New England, September 15-20, the object being "to display the products on which the prosperity of New England depends, to illustrate to New England's own people the beauty and utility of the product of the industries of New England, and to demonstrate to the world beyond our borders how vast and various are the activities that have earned for New England her fame."

This may well prompt the response that "It is a good idea." New England and thrift, New England pride and New England manufactures are commonly referred to. New England is known as a busy hive of industry. New England is known to produce a vast amount of manufactured goods in great variety, but few, even in their own cities, know just what is being manufactured or the uses of the great volume of our manufactured merchandise. Time and again have the eyes of the people of Norwich been opened by the display of goods manufactured in this city. There was little idea of what the various industries were producing or why they were in operation, and what is true here is unquestionably true elsewhere.

The idea of a New England week may well be carried out for the purpose of letting others know what we are doing, but there is much to be gained in getting acquainted ourselves with New England products, and especially so since it is proposed to have demonstrated the uses and qualities of our merchandise, the processes of the factories explained and information given that will permit New England and its army of visitors to know more about this section of the country industrially.

Instead of permitting New England manufactures to be known in a general way the idea of bringing labor, management and capital together as a unit for the better setting forth of its activities opens many possibilities. It is an effort that should receive enthusiastic support throughout the six states.

THE OIL INDICTMENTS.

Indictments by a federal grand jury in the District of Columbia against former Secretary Fall, the Dohenys and Sinclair doesn't mean that they have been convicted. It does mean that the government's prosecution of charges arising out of the leasing of oil lands has been advanced to the point where the accused are to have their day in court and where justice will be dispensed in accord with the facts as they are disclosed.

The indictment, following the appointment of special counsel by President Coolidge, means that good progress is being made in accordance with the promise of the chief executive that no stone would be left unturned to punish the guilty. Likewise it comes at a time when there are those who have been saying for political purposes that nothing has been done.

Quite in contrast to the congressional hearings concerning the scandals is the work of counsel leading up to the indictments. They have been conscious of their duty and they have followed it with successful results thus far, and in a manner which indicates a conscientious determination to meet the responsibility placed upon them by the president. Partisan prejudice which was so conspicuous throughout the congressional hearings disappears in connection with this non-partisan effort in behalf of justice and the upholding of the nation's interests.

This is of course as it should be. Efforts to charge any of it up to partisan politics or to claim party corruption quickly bring to light the activities which show it to be a personal rather than a party affair with those involved reaching into each of the parties for the help which they sought.

It was therefore the proper move to eliminate this matter from political parties and to place it in the courts where it is now located with the belief that the criminal phases of it will be dealt with in accord with the facts that can be produced. The indictments show that the case is not being neglected but rather that such progress is being made as to give satisfaction to the country at large.

STANDARD EQUIPMENT

Interest attaches to the fact that several communities in this state have recently adopted standard threads for their hose couplings and hydrants. A movement in this direction has been underway for some time and gradually are those cities which have other than standard equipment, coming to recognize the importance of uniformity in this direction.

Quite as good fire service may be rendered with couplings that are not standard, the hitches may be made just as quickly and just as tight, but when the time comes that it is necessary to call for outside assistance there is encountered a handicap that is serious.

It is for the purpose of dealing with such emergencies that the standard thread has been urged upon all cities. When it is possible for any other department to come into a city and hook up to its hydrants there is gained an added protection which means much.

If it were possible to know in advance when a fire was going to break out that would exceed the capacity of a local department to handle, some provision to meet it might be made. But fires are not heralded in advance. They come unexpectedly and; when they get to such proportions that it is impossible for a local department to cope with the situation outside aid is summoned. If these cities which send assistance have the same type of couplings all is well, whether they happen to be standard or not, but when they differ a situation is faced which renders such help practically useless.

With all departments provided with standard couplings apparatus can be put into service wherever needed. The fact is that there are so many advantages to be gained by the standard equipment that there ought to be no thought of permitting any other kind to be used. If every community had fire hose and hydrants carrying different threads in each instance the chance of going to the aid of each other in time of fire would be practically eliminated.

FOR A FIRELESS FOURTH.

Timely is the appeal which has been made by Fire Marshal Stanton concerning fire precautions for the Fourth. It is fitting that in connection with a safe and sane celebration of Independence day that there should be proper thought given to the prevention of needless waste through fires.

Too large a number of the fires at all times are due to the failure to use proper preventive measures. Frequent are the instances where the combination of firebrands and rubbish, which has been allowed to accumulate, is responsible for serious losses. These conditions are not necessary and can be easily remedied. It is far preferable that a little time and effort should be devoted to the removal of that which may serve as the kindlings for a small or a large fire than to neglect it and invite the consequences.

It is all well enough to place full reliance in an efficient fire department but there is nothing to be gained by forcing it to needless efforts. Prevention is always preferable to cure and it holds as true concerning conditions involving fires as anything else.

Chief Stanton has given the people of Norwich some excellent suggestions. It is to be hoped that they will not only be appreciated by the few but that they will be followed by the many. Norwich would much prefer to have a fireless Fourth and the small effort that would be required to accomplish it is certainly worth making. Clean up the rubbish and guard against fires and the day after will be a much happier one. The time for action is before anything happens, not when it is possible to look back and see what might have been done.

LATE, BUT NECESSARY.

New York has been conspicuous for the number of its automobile accidents but there can be little surprise when it is understood that those driving cars in that state have not hitherto been obliged to take an examination when obtaining a license. New York has been taking note of its situation in this respect and the result is that all drivers of autos in the Empire state must be examined for a license before the first of October.

This means some business in view of the millions who drive cars in that state, but it is a provision in behalf of safety which has been too long delayed already. It is not to be supposed that the mere fact that an auto driver has taken an examination before being licensed will prevent all accidents, but it should and doubtless will serve to prevent those who are incompetent from having the privilege of driving machines over the highways of the state. This is a provision that is needed for the sake of protecting the other users of the roads.

New York is doing no more than other states have long since found it necessary to do, for in addition to the provision concerning examinations for drivers it is putting into effect many traffic rule changes and placing restrictions about motor vehicles which have been dictated by conditions. That state has been going along under the impression that the new transportation situation was taking care of itself. It has suddenly awakened to the fact that it has been outstripped by other states which have been alive to the conditions created by the automobile and have been accompanying them with proper regulatory legislation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Comfortable, cool and cloudy wasn't such a bad opening for July.

Has the democratic convention reserved any explosions for the Fourth?

With a field of 16 at a start it is always more or less difficult to get and hold the pole from the very start.

The democratic platform isn't what it might have been but what can be expected from so much scrap material?

The man on the corner says: The worst may happen but the democrats are trying to stave it off as long as possible.

The temperature of Madison Square Garden hasn't been tempered for the past week by the effort to keep cool with Coolidge.

Now that scientists at Lehigh university have perfected an "unbreakable cigar" the cry will go up to know if it's a five center.

The oil indictments are not convictions but progress is being made in that direction even as the administration insisted there must be.

Cleveland may be committed to a safe and sane Fourth but there's no telling what may happen with a LaFollette convention underway there.

Once again Connecticut can congratulate itself that it doesn't experience the devastating and killing storms that some other sections of the country do.

Four isn't much larger than one but it will be impossible for so many to claim the distinction of furnishing the votes that beat the anti-Klan movement at New York.

A LA MODE

"Now Miss Seamer are you absolutely sure that sleeveless gowns will be good all this season?" asked the stout lady who was having a dinner frock made at home. "You know when Mrs. McDermid recommended you to me she said that you were really an authority on style, so I'm depending on you entirely.

"No, of course I know that no one, as you say, is infallible. I hope you won't think me fussy, but I adore being up to date in my clothes, and if you really think that this sleeveless mode is going to continue to be the thing we'll certainly make my dress that way. Unless you think, Miss Seamer, that my arms are perhaps a trifle plump?

"Yes, I realize that other people have larger arms than I, but I don't wish to make a spectacle of myself. Maybe after all you'd better put in georgette sleeves. I can telephone my husband to run into Bink's and buy some georgette. Or do you think all over lace would be better?

"Possibly the georgette would be safer. Men have so little judgment about shopping. It's lucky it's Saturday, so my husband can bring it home early. Now, are you quite definitely decided about the waist line? The long waist has been in for ages, our a friend of mine, Mrs. Burlingham, went to the theater, the other night and she told me that the three most fashionable women in the play—it was a London society drama—had natural waist lines. She says that she can always get the very latest styles at a good play. I suppose you go to the theater regularly, don't you, to keep your self right up to the latest vogue?

"No, I suppose you can't afford the time and money to go to everything, but you certainly ought to go to the New York and London dramas, if you wish to keep up to date. Maybe you think I'm not quite slim enough for the natural waist line.

"Well, you can at least try the effect on me. That's one reason I prefer having my sewing done at home, so I can see just how my things are going to look.

"Honestly, Miss Seamer, I don't believe I look a bit plumper in the short waist than I do in the long. But you had better try the long again, too, for we must be sure.

"Well, which do you like better I really am in favor of the short, myself. I do think the natural waist line suits my figure, don't you? And it's so much newer. I can't be glad enough that Mrs. Burlingham went to see that play. Now let's decide about the length of the skirt. Of course I never liked the extremely short skirts, but the real long ones look awfully dowdy, don't they?

"Yes, possibly the longer ones do give a more slender effect, but on the other hand, they also make a person look so much older. I think about eight inches off the floor would be a happy medium for me. Don't you think so?

"Well, there's my husband. Didn't he get here quick? I told him to take a taxi. As a rule I'm economical about cabs, but there are times when one is absolutely necessary.

"Well, Miss Seamer, just look at this number of Styles. It came wrapped up with the georgette. If you'll believe me, there isn't a natural waistline shown anywhere in this book. You know yourself that Styles is always the very latest cry. You'll simply have to lengthen that waist by some hook or crook. I do wish that you hadn't been so precipitate about cutting it. I'll just bet that play Mrs. Burlingham saw was a mid-Victorian drama in costume. It's a good joke on her.

"Oh, dear, I wish I hadn't spent the money on that georgette. Maybe my husband can take it back on Monday. Every dinner gown here is sleeveless and think of the price of the taxi! Well, it never does to hurry.

"Yes, of course, I did say I wished my frock to be done tonight. Now, listen to this: 'Seven inches from the floor is the correct length.' You can let that skirt down an inch easily, can't you? You'll simply have to, that's all. Now, really, Miss Seamer, I wouldn't say anything unkind for the world, but I should think you'd try to keep a little more up to date for the sake of your customers."—Chicago News.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

LURE OF EXPLORATION

How our own continent is revealing to explorers a civilization more than twice as old and fully as complex as that of Tutankhamen's period, and how American explorers have unlocked the secrets of glaciers, volcanoes, earthquakes and curious peoples was described to delegates of the National Education Association at a geographic conference at Washington Tuesday afternoon.

One explorer, just back from Asia with an amazing story of ancient China's aboriginal tribes, brought pictures which showed these people engaged in the rites of a religion which Buddhism supplanted; and depicted his own adventures in traversing a river gorge twice as deep as the Colorado Canyon.

This explorer was Joseph F. Rock, already widely known for locating the Chaulmoogra tree which yields a leper-healing oil. Teachers were given the first showing of some of the remarkable pictures he took while leading a National Geographic Society Expedition through the untraversed and bandit-infested natural wonderland between Tibet and China.

First showing also was given of slides made from photographs taken by Frederick R. Wulsin, leader of a National Geographic Society Expedition in China's extremely wild northwest, where his party's conveyance ranged from camel caravans to yak-skin rafts.

The National Geographic Society's Expeditions which have sailed the seas, climbed mountain peaks, penetrated the frozen north and braved tropic jungles were reviewed by Ralph A. Graves, professor of Applied Geography, School of Foreign Service, Georgetown University.

One Geographic Expedition now is delving further into the ruins of Chaco Canyon, where it built a miniature railroad to remove tons of rubbish. Therein it finds an occasional memento to piece together the fascinating story of this apartment community which thrived before Columbus came.

It is the Society's Expedition to Cuicuilco, south of Mexico City, which is uncovering the Pompeii of the Western world—a giant mound which, centuries before Pompeii's time, was encased in time-defying lava and today is disclosing to the explorers emblems of a people who lived there probably 7,000 years ago.

The speaker began with slides of the National Geographic Society's first expedition—that to Mt. St. Elias, Alaska, which first named the piedmont glaciers and gave an account of Alaskan mirages—mirages which only recently helped bring disaster to Major Martin on the army's flight around the world.

He told the story of The Society's study of Martinique, where a favorite peak for picnics exploded and annihilated a city of 30,000 people, and destroyed 17 ships anchored in the St. Pierre harbor. One member of that expedition was Dr. Thomas A. Jaggar, now a world famous volcanologist, who then aroused skepticism by prophesying that it would be possible to predict eruptions in time to avoid such casualties. This prophecy was vindicated when the explosion of Sakurajima, Japan's greatest volcanic eruption, was definitely predicted and its ravages minimized.

The Society's volcanic studies reached their climax, the speaker said, when a series of expeditions were sent to Mt. Katmai, Alaska, and during the studies of that greatest active volcano in all the world the famous Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes was discovered. Motion pictures were shown of this "Scenic Coney Island" which was estimated to be emitting more gases from the earth's interior than all the craters and all the fumaroles in all the world.

Another expedition to Alaska solved problems relating to the Ice Age and discovered traces of a Jamaica flora, showing that Alaska once had a tropical climate.

Other expeditions described and pictured included the Wellman Polar Expedition, that if Peary which planted the Stars and Stripes and The Geographic flag at the North Pole, that which studied the effects of the Messina earthquake and gave an impetus to seismological science, and that which uncovered the marvels of Machu Plochn, Peru. There Inca city-farmers cultivated highly specialized vegetable crops, gossiped beside beautiful fountains, fashioned intricate trinkets for their gods and their women, and gave to the world two major crops, Indian corn and the potato.

"And all this was happening on our continent," the speaker said, "while our European ancestors lived by the chase and dressed in skins."

Another Geographic Expedition now in the field is that at Carlsbad, New Mexico, where the Society sent geologists to traverse the greatest of North America's caverns. The startling magnificence of its subterranean wonders was depicted and many beautiful slides shown.

According to government figures there was a decline of 10.8 per cent in the number of breeding sows on farms on April 1, 1924, as compared with the number a year before.

Doheny Was Broke At Forty

Early in his career as a prospector, Edward L. Doheny vowed to make $100,000 and several times he was near his goal, but when he was 40, he did not have $40 to his name. For twenty years he had sought underground riches and after hunting and being hunted by Indians, after being maimed in a mine and crippled by a mountain lion which he killed with a knife, he found himself in middle life, stranded in Los Angeles.

At Fond du Lac, Wis., where he was born, he was graduated from high school at 15, although he had worked the greater part of each year. He went with a surveying party to Oklahoma when he was 17. Then going to New Mexico, he made $2,000 dealing in horses captured from marauding Indians, but lost everything on a prospecting tour in the Black Hills. Another venture failed, and he began the study of metallurgy and geology in earnest.

He discovered and developed the silver district at Kingston, N. M., in 1880 and quickly garnered $30,000.

At 25 he was mine owner and operator and partner of C. A. Canfield, mining wizard. For a few years he prospered. Then he fell down a mine shaft and broke both legs. In the hospital he studied law and at the end of six months was admitted to partnership in a law firm.

In 1892 in Los Angeles he took a handful of greasy dirt from a wagon, grasped the meaning of it, and discovered his first well, which was in the heart of the city. It failed, but with $400, he and Canfield bought another property and found oil. Again making money fast, he was refused funds by bankers and had to trustee his property to escape bankruptcy. At 40 he was broke. Within two years he had his properties back. In 1900, prospecting in a private car, he discovered the Tampico oil fields in Mexico, which was the start of the gigantic Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company, of which he is president.

His wells have produced more than a billion barrels of oil and have made him one of the world's richest men.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Thomas W. Hardwick, who has announced his candidacy for the seat in the United States senate now held by William J. Harris, is a former representative, senator, and governor, with a long record in the public service of his native state of Georgia. Mr. Hardwick is a lawyer by profession, with a home in Sandersville, Ga. After service in the Georgia legislature, he entered Congress in 1898 and remained in the House until 1914, when he was named by the governor to fill out the unexpired term of A. O. Bacon in the United States senate. His reputation as a national lawmaker was that of a conservative and a legalist of the extreme type. As United States senator, he was often and severely criticized during the war for his attitude toward the government program. In the Georgia primary of 1918, his overwhelming defeat was attributed in part to a letter from President Wilson characterizing the senator as a constant and active opponent of the Administration.

CHILD TRAINING

SHALL I TAKE MY CHILD TO TOWN

By Marion Beal

Whether or not to take the young child to town is a problem that confronts the average mother, at some time or other, and one which requires a wise solution, if she is to give the child the best care possible. She has been told that these trips to the city are injurious to the delicate nervous system of the young child, and having given much thought to his best interests she hesitates to take him anywhere.

To the mother, who must take her child or children, or else stay at home, this is indeed a grave consideration. I have often seen these mothers, with two or three youngsters trailing petulantly and fretfully in their wake. One look at the little faces proved that it would have been much better for these children to have remained at home. The mothers, too, showed plainly the fatigue marks that support this conclusion.

Here the wisest solution is to ask the father occasionally to give his weekly half holiday to caring for the children, so that the mother may shop, free from the burden of keeping an eye on restless youngsters. Perhaps Dad will demur, but most men, not in a position to provide an assistant for the wife and mother, will be glad to perform this duty, if the reason for it is made clear.

However, it is to the mother who can leave the children in charge of a competent person, that I purpose to address this article. As a matter of course she leaves the children at home when she goes shopping. Yet perhaps she is often perplexed as to how to answer the repeated pleading of the youngsters to be allowed to "go with mother."

A solution of this problem may be found in a plan I have tried with great success. When my eldest boy was a little over a year old, I allowed him a short trip; that was the beginning. I had been attracted by a show window in a big store, a window full of gaily colored balloons, tossed about by a fan, and the next afternoon I took the year-old son to see this window. For half an hour he stood and crowed with delight, just watching the gaily colored balls floating about. And for a week he would clap his little hands and call, "Blow."

Of course on this trip there was no shopping to tire him; he was merely allowed to watch the fun, then taken directly home, and I found the small adventure did him no harm. Naturally, it was not repeated often, but as he grew older he was given opportunities to watch other windows, never, however, to the point of fatigue, nor was the trip topped off by a lot of rich candy and ice cream, although a simple treat such as a milk chocolate, was sometimes allowed.

These trips, "window education" my friends call them, have proven really instructive, for as a direct result the children have learned many interesting things. They have seen wonderful displays of jewels, musical instruments, and goods from many foreign countries. They know just how silk, cotton, and woolen goods are made from seeing replicas of these processes. They know how cigars are made, and how a piano is made. They have seen windows that in the appeal to the childish imagination have been a true delight; Easter windows and Christmas windows have afforded them pleasure that lasted for weeks.

More rarely, perhaps once in six or eight weeks, they see a really good motion picture, one that I have previously seen and found suitable. Of course they do not go if an epidemic is prevalent not unless in perfect health themselves, and I take the further precaution of inquiring at the box office when the house is least crowded. Safeguarding them in these ways, I have found it beneficial to indulge the modern youngster's longing to go to the movies.

One feature that appeals to me very strongly in favor of this mild "going to town" is that the children are thus acquiring a natural poise and are at ease with any person with whom they are thrown. They are learning to take an intelligent part in conversation, and while not forward, are not self-conscious and shy, as the child is apt to be if kept too much at home.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

THE WISDOM BOOK

"Learn a little every day.
Store it in your hand away.
Then with Memory's help you can Be a very learned man."

shouted Professor Jim Crow, from his Tall Pine Tree House.

Down he came with the Wisdom Book

"That's just what I'm doing," answered Little Jack Rabbit who happened by at that very moment. "I learn a little every day and always have time to play."

"That's a good boy," cawed the wise professor bird, fluttering down to the ground beside the bunny boy. "How's mother today?"

"Prettier than ever," answered the little rabbit. "She always wears two roses, one in each cheek."

"Don't you ever make the tears come to her eyes," advised the old blackbird. "Don't you ever do that.

"I never will," answered the good little bunny boy.

"Mother has plenty to do without wiping her eyes," added the old crow. "There never should be tears in her eyes unless she is peeling onions."

"Where's your Wisdom Book?" suddenly inquired the bunny boy.

"Oh in the house," answered Professor Crow. "Why, do you want me to read you something?"

"No, Yes, I want to. And out who stripped all the bark of that hemlock tree yonder."

"I have the picture of the fellow who did it in my Wisdom Book," quickly answered Professor Crow. "Wait here a minute while I fly up to my study," and the old black bird clapped his wings and flew up to his bungalow atop the Tall Pine Tree. In a few minutes down he came with the Wisdom Book under his left wing.

"There," he cawed, opening to page fourteen. "There's a picture of the fellow who skinned the old hemlock."

Peering over his shoulder the little rabbit saw Prickly Porcupine's face staring at him from the page.

"Did he do it?" inquired the bunny boy.

"He certainly did," replied Professor Crow. "For days he just stayed in that tree until he had stripped off every bit of bark. Now the tree is dead. Dead as dead can be, dead can be, poor old sticky hemlock tree."

Just then who should come shuffling along but Prickly Porcupine himself. My, how slowly he moved, the sharp quills with which his fur coat is covered, making a queer rattling noise.

"Hello!" he said in a peevish voice turning his dull-looking eyes first on the little rabbit and then on the old blackbird. "Talking about me, eh?"

"Yes, and why not?" enquired Professor Jim Crow, backing away, fearing Prickly Porcupine might come too near. Goodness me, boys and girls I hope he doesn't prick him in tomorrow's story.

Stories That Recall Others

Fly Away, Birdie.

A school teacher decided to take one of her women friends to the theater. As she was anxious to have good places she requested "two end seats." The request was filled literally and each seat was on the aisle, one in front of the other. When the two women found that they were seated in such an unsatisfactory manner the teacher began to wonder if some way out of the difficulty could be found. Sitting next to her was a man. Beyond him was a woman and some children but as he said nothing to the others she decided they were not together. He being alone, would doubtless be willing to exchange his seat for the one directly in front of the teacher, then she the latter and her friend could sit side by side. The teacher inclined her head slightly and whispered to the man who was her neighbor.

"Pardon me," she said, prefacing her request, "but are you alone?"

"Fly away, birdie," the man responded, "the whole family's with me."

Supposing.

There was a discussion in the family about those who were going to a bathing place and using the automobiles for places to change their clothes.

Within hearing of the conversation was a youngster whose ears were pinned back and whose reasoning power was not deficient.

At the proper moment, when such use of the autos was being related, she piped up: "Mother, suppose they had gone on motorcycles?"

BLODGETT ADVISES TAX COMMITTEE ON FIRST STEPS FOR EQUALIZATION

W. R. Blodgett of Hartford, tax commissioner of the state, and Mr. Lamb, an assistant from his office, appeared here Tuesday night before the citizen's tax equalization committee and representatives of the assessors and board of relief at the first meeting the committee has held since its recent organization for the business for which the committee was created.

The meeting was scheduled to be held in the assessors' office, but the attendance was so large that it shifted to the mayor's office at the courthouse, where Chairman James L. Case opened the meeting with a few remarks about the importance of the work before the committee and introduced Tax Commissioner Blodgett.

Mr. Blodgett gave a very complete resume of the tax laws of the state, with many instances of inequalities that occur in different places. But he said there is a very general trend all over the state for an equalization of taxation. The system that is followed in Norwich is almost no system at all, he said, but the assessors for the past three years have been carrying out one admirable improvement in comparing sales values with assessment valuations. This has resulted in their finding that sales values in that time have been nearly three times in excess of the assessed values. On the points in which he criticized the Norwich assessors he said they were not wholly to blame, as they are handicapped in many ways.

Mr. Blodgett suggested that the first step in handling the Norwich situation would be to make an analysis of the methods employed by the assessors in order to discover and demonstrate the inequalities that exist in Norwich and that the result of this analysis ought to be published for the full information of the citizens.

He declared that a tax map is an absolute necessity in an effort for tax equalization, and that when property is assessed land and buildings should be valued separately instead of possibly half a dozen different parcels being put in at a lump sum.

It was decided by the committee to leave to the executive committee the plan of procedure and now that Mr. Blodgett's suggestions have been heard there will be an early meeting of the committee and it is probable that there will be conferences with different groups of citizens.

The next meeting of the committee will be at the call of the executive committee and the chairman.

From 3 to 4 o'clock there was a programme of games and races under the direction of Miss Edith Ellis and Emory H. Davis, in which the prize winners were as follows.

At 6.30 basket lunch was enjoyed, coffee and ice cream being served under the direction of Mrs. Henrietta Tefft, and from 7 to 8.30 there was an excellent entertainment by Miss Hersey, the Sunshine Girl, Miss Wilson, pianist, and Miss Ferrari, accordeon. Community singing, led by the accordeon, made a pleasant social period before the picnickers were conveyed home to the city by automobile.

A $5 prize that had been offered by George W. Carroll for the best aster of the school was awarded to the babies of the cradle roll and the prize was presented to Mrs. C. Edward Smith, cradle roll superintendent, to be used for the department.

The general committee in charge consisted of Miss Bessie Grimes, chairman, Miss Alif Stephens, and Mrs. Willis Hill.

WEST SIDE PLANS PROMISE BIG DAY

The final meeting of the general committee for the West Side celebration, Tuesday evening concluded the plans for a most promising Fourth of July.

The parade committee gave a most satisfactory report. Frank D. Davis, who is in charge of the floats, said that the arrangements were complete and that the decoration of the various trucks was the bulk of the remaining work. The time of the parade was announced to be at 9 o'clock (standard) and it was stated that all participants should be at the Fair Grounds at least one hour before the time of the parade. The parade will form within the grounds and will march out the main entrance. Following West Main street as far as the corner of Anp street they will turn into Ann and from Ann go down Pearl to Fairmount street. Turning from Fairmount onto Pearl they will return by way of Asylum street to the Fairgrounds, where the winners of the various prizes will be announced. These prizes will be awarded to the winners in the afternoon with the prizes for the athletic events.

John D. McWilliams announced that competition waxed high between the various owners who planned to decorate their cars. It was also announced that the judges' stand has already been erected in front of Frank T. Maples' house on the corner of West Main and Maple streets.

S. Slosberg stated that the entries for the Marathon race were slow in coming in but that the other events were being filled. He emphasized the fact that the events would be run off with the assistance of E. J. Fritz, the local Y. M. C. A. director.

To aid in the community singing, Roderick M. Sullivan announced that he is having printed a large number of song sheets. Jerry Angel will have charge of the refreshments which will be sold, and the profit is to be given to help defray the expenses of the occasion.

Finds Osteopath Competent

Hartford, July 1.—One error in a superior court decision was found in nine opinions handed down by the supreme court of errors today. Five verdicts were upheld and three opinions gave advice in causes reserved by the superior court.

Finding that an osteopath was competent in his methods, the court advised the superior court to sustain an appeal from the compensation commissioner's finding in the suit of Stanley Towers against Gilder and Levin. Towers sued to recover compensation for injuries and the commissioner found that an osteopath was not a "competent surgeon."

SEMI-ANNUAL BONUS FOR SHOE FACTORY EMPLOYES

July 1st marked the end of another six months' period and the employes of A. Werman & Sons, Inc., manufacturers of children's and women's stitchdown novelty shoes, were made happy by receiving their semi-annual bonus.

The bonus was distributed among the 50 employes by Jack Werman, vice president of the company, and Samuel DeMarco, manager of the plant, the sum of $2,500 being given out. Employes having been with the company throughout the entire six months receiving as high as $50, and some with the company only a day or two receiving not less than $1.

Since coming to Norwich two years ago the company has steadily increased its business and six months after arriving here started the bonus system. The company keeps a record of the earnings of each employe during the six months and on Jan. 1st and July 1st every employe receives a bonus of 5 per cent. on their pay for the six months. The method has worked out nicely and the employes have always expressed appreciation for the bonus they receive.

The company enjoys the distinction at this time of being the only shoe manufacturing plant in this part of the country, and one of the very few in the country that is working full time on fall and spring orders. The volume of business and increase in the payroll is indicated when figures of Jan. 1, 1924, show that the bonus has increased 33 per cent. in six months. During that same period of time the working force has been increased 25 per cent., and plans are being made to increase the force by as large a percentage before Jan. 1st. The company now owns the building in which it manufactures its products for marketing and occupies two whole floors, showing increase in floor space over two years ago, when only one part of a room was used. New machinery has been installed and everything is ready for turning out a larger production during the rest of the year, until the fourth bonus is paid to the employes just before Christmas instead of on Jan. 1st.

MRS. JOHN E. MURTHA DIES IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. John E. Murtha, of Hallville, died Tuesday in the Fordham hospital, N. Y., of injuries received when she either fell or threw herself in front of a subway express.

Mrs. Murtha, who was known in New York as Dorace Miller, was born in Willimantic and following her marriage with John E. Murtha of Hallville, went to live in that village, where Mr. Murtha was employed in a power house. She was a trained nurse and for a time was employed at the Norwich state hospital.

About a year ago she left home and went to New York to follow her occupation as a nurse and located in Manhattan. When news of her death was published in many papers last week Friday, her husband, who knew she had changed her name to Dorace Miller got in touch with the Fordham hospital authorities and found the report was incorrect, that his wife had not died, but was in a critical condition. He immediately went to New York. Her death did not come until Tuesday and it is claimed that the injuries she received came when she accidentally fell in front of the subway express, and, that, she did not endeavor to commit suicide as first reported.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Murtha is survived by two sons, Daniel and James Murtha of Hallville; four sisters, Mrs. Arthur Robitaille, Mrs. Albert Monits and Mrs. Existe Bernard of Willimantic, and Mrs. Marie Drescher of Norwich and one brother, Peter Desjardin of Norwich; also six cousins in Jewett City. There are also two sisters in Canada whose names could not be learned.

THROWN FROM AUTO IN COLLISION WITH BUS

Albert F. Lasch of 328 West Town street was thrown out of the Studebaker touring car he was driving on Washington street, Tuesday night about 10.30 o'clock, but not injured, when the touring car and a motor bus of the Norwich-Hartford line collided a short distance south of the Lafayette street corner. The two machines blocked the street completely after the collision and the noise of the crash aroused the neighborhood and residents from all the houses nearby turned out to view the accident, while someone telephoned in to police headquarters. The bus was driven by James Molonson and was coming towards the city.

Sergeant Thomas Murphy and Officer Patrick Murphy went to the place in the motor patrol wagon and hauled the Lasch car to one side of the street after they had investigated the accident.

According to the reports made by the two drivers, the accident occurred when Lasch pulled out of a line of cars that was proceeding northerly on Washington street. Molonson claimed that he saw the Lasch car pull out of the line and he steered the bus over into the right hand gutter and had brought it to a stop when it was hit by the touring car. Lasch disputed the statement that the bus had stopped and claimed he was forced out of line by a car behind him and was hit by the bus.

The bus had its right forward axle and fender bent. The Studebaker had left fender and running board crushed and the frame of the machine twisted so that the wheels were out of line.

Lasch was summoned to the city court to answer to a charge of reckless driving. He was fiat on his face in the street after the crash and was picked up by the driver of the bus.

NUGGETS PLAY LOOSE GAME AND ARE OVERWHELMED BY THE FAST HARDIGS

If any grammar school team put up such an exhibition of baseball as was shown by the Nuggets Tuesday evening at Duwell Field they would go and hide in shame. The Hardigs had an easy time winning by the score of 17 to 3. While the Nuggets played such a loose game no credit can be taken from the Hardigs for they played a snappy game from start to finish. Nip Rankin, who pitched for the Hardigs, was not hit hard and pitched a strong game for the whole seven innings.

The Nuggets made error upon error and besides the large quantity of errors there were a number of beautiful dumb plays which gave the fans something to cheer about. George Madden started in the box for the Nuggets and all he had was a glove and a prayer; the glove was all right but George apparently lacked faith. He stayed in the box until the Hardigs had scored 13 runs and then resigned in favor of Chick Stanley. Chick after he had warmed up, showed a good deal of stuff and held the Hardigs to four runs which resulted from errors. One tally, however, was made through Peterson's steal of home.

The only shining light of the Nuggets was Midget Tombari, who played an errorless game, making two nice catches and hitting well. Mileski caught a good game for the Nuggets, but outside of these two the rest of the team played terrible ball.

The crowd at the game was the smallest of the league but those who attended enjoyed the farce of the Nuggets immensely. The misplays of the Nuggets furnished much amusement for the crowd which was pleased to see given an opportunity to razz some one.

The heavy hitters of the Hardigs were DeBarros, Tombari, Heebner and Kamos. Heebner in the outfield starred with several catches and Tombari and DeBarros starred in the infield.

Echoes From the Grand Stand
(by Matt)

Stanley pitched a good game after he warmed up and received a good many cheers for the burden he took into the box with a 12 run lead against him.

Standish made a pretty hit with the bases full but the unknown only went to second and Myles had to pull up at first.

Madden had a right fielder that nobody knew. He dropped a fly ball in right which was right in his hands and when he came in to bat he got on base and stole third on a fly ball, this was too much for Madden who benched him.

As a pitcher the "Ox" was a failure but as a second baseman he was a star making several spectacular stops.

Coleman, the favorite umpire of the league, took charge of the game in his usual good style.

The Hardigs played so good they made the misfit look foolish.

It was rumored on the grounds that "Jimmy" Madden is going to release George and all his misfits, if he does so will relieve the fans from a lot of agony.

Peterson stole home on Stanley's slow wind up.

Tombari made the feature play of the game when he ran into left field and made a fine running catch of a ball labeled for a double.

Madden stood still and watched a slow roller go by then looked at Stanley, both are fast men at the dinner table, that lets them out.

SUB BASE OPENS SEASON AGAINST RIVERVIEW TODAY
(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, July 1.—The Submarine Base will usher in its baseball season at the Base ground Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock (daylight time) with the State Hospital nine as its opponents. The Dungaree baseball league which has occupied the limelight at the base during the spring, came officially to a close last week and immediately upon the termination of the league season the selection for the first Base team got under way.

Good baseball material was discovered as the result of the games played in the Dungaree league. The players who had no idea of their ability on the diamond and other material that was lying dormant was brought to light and a fast combination is expected to result when the final selection was made. The present lineup which was released for publication by the Sub Base manager, will not be the same that will be used all season. Several new men are expected to be transferred to the Base from southern bases and with this new deatchment among whom includes baseball players of real ability, the Base team will once again take the field to prove itself to be one of the fastest nines in New England.

The lineup for the opening game for the Submarine Base will be as follows: Hawes 2b, Harold p, Dinty Moore ss, Mangold cf, Le Blanc lf, Amcktle c, Compton rf, C. Moore 1b, Hackett 1b. Lefty Harold, who is well known in this section of the state as an outfielder and pitcher will toe the slab against his former teammates from the State Hospital. Dinty Moore needs no introduction to the the fans in this vicinity as his playing for the various semi pro teams in this section of the state has marked him as a reliable hitter and fielder. The rest of the lineup was carefully selected from the teams who were entered in the Dungaree league.

For the State Hospital it is expected that Roy will do the hurling and Joe Belair will be behind the bat. This game will be the first of the year in which either Moore or Harold will be missing from the lineup and it is expected that the hitting strength will be somewhat lessened by the absence of these players from the Riverview lineup.

Just how successful Lefty Horold will be in his debut with the Sub Base as a pitcher can only be speculated on at present. He was touched up quite frequently in the game he pitched for Moosup against the Duwells of Norwich at Moosup Sunday. Only good fielding saved him from losing this game. Notwithstanding this fact the Base supporters are confident of a victory and are betting on the Base team to come through with a victory in their opening contest.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Fordham Star Infield Captain

Fifth inning. Score 0 to 0. A fast runner on third base. He attempts to steal home when the catcher relays the ball to the pitcher.

In what way should the pitcher throw the ball to the catcher?

Many pitchers get excited and hurry the throw so much that they make a wild one. This is because they throw the ball before they have a good hold on it. In throwing the ball home, to catch a runner trying to steal from third; a pitcher should get a good hold on the ball and then try to get it low and over the plate, as that will save time and permit the catcher to tag the runner just after he gets the ball.

Manager Chalmers took his defeat with very poor grace. Chauncey Lacey celebrated his return to the game with three hits and several stolen bases. Lacey had been suspended by the league president.

MLLE LENGLEN'S PHYSICAL CONDITION FORCES HER OUT OF WIMBLEDON PLAY

Wimbledon, Eng., July 1 (By the A. P.)—Suzanne Lenglen, who has five times won the Wimbledon championship and holds the world's title, is out of the game. Her doctors have forbidden her to continue play in the present tournament and she is under treatment for physical disability.

Mlle. Lenglen's strenuous match with Miss Elizabeth Ryan yesterday was a great strain on the champion, according to a statement made by Captain Borotra of the French team. Three weeks ago she was confined to bed with Jaundice, and had not properly recovered when she began to play at Wimbledon. Her doctor insisted on her abandoning the game for period, but the French girl compromised by deciding that she would not play in the mixed doubles.

This did not suffice, however, to meet the physician's wishes, and absolute restriction was tonight put upon her appearance on a tennis court. Indeed, she has been ordered to spend several weeks in bed.

The withdrawal of the French champion is the sensation of the Wimbledon tournament. Until she clashed with Miss Ryan yesterday she had flashed through three rounds of the women's singles without losing a game. In her contest against Miss Ryan, she had to use all her skill and agility to win, and even then the Californian captured one set. Only Miss Kathleen McKane, whom she has often beaten, and Miss Helen Wills, the American champion, stood between her and her sixth straight championship.

Miss Wills is to meet Mrs. Satterthwaite in the semi-finals tomorrow and, if victorious, will play Miss McKane in the finals.

Another surprise of the day was the defeat of Vincent Richards, of the American Olympic team. Richards was favored from the start to win the title against the entire international field, but he was eliminated by the young French star Jean Borotra, whose sharp, dazzling volleys made his triumph a brilliant one. The score was 6-4, 4-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Watson M. Washburn was the second of the Americans to be eliminated. Weary from a week of hard fought matches in both singles and doubles, Washburn played with such a tired and unhappy air today that he went down before Louis Raymond, of South Africa, who limped and robbled about the court, wincing from the pain of a torn leg tendon.

These two defeats leave R. Norris Williams as the solitary American survivor from the semi-finals. The other three contenders are La Coste and Borotra of France and Raymond of South Africa.

Williams to win his way to the semi-finals had to defeat one of England's veterans, A. R. F. Kingscote. It was a hard fought contest, Williams eventually bearing off the Palm Taun 6-4, 6-3, 6-4. He will now meet La Coste, and unless he defeats him, the finalists this year will probably be Frenchmen, as a year ago they were both Americans, for it is hardly likely that Raymond in his crippled condition can stand up against Borotra.

CLEVELAND LANDS IN FIRST DIVISION BY DOUBLE VICTORY

RAY AND NURMI STAGE IMPROMPTU RACE IN WORKOUT

Paris, July 1.—(By the A. P.)—The Americans and Finns, chief rivals for the Olympic track and field honors, met today for the first time during the workouts at the Colombes stadium and mingled in a friendly spirit on the battleground where they will fight it out for the world's athletic supremacy next Sunday.

The largest crowd which has as yet visited Colombes, including several hundred American enthusiasts, witnessed the practice of athletes of nearly all the two score nations entered in the games but the principal attention was centered upon the Finns, who had their first workout since their arrival yesterday and upon the Americans who showed impressive form in the hardest two hour workout they have as yet had here.

The Finns, whose squad of nearly 60 includes athletes who accounted for nine first places at the Olympic games four years ago as well as several new stars, also made a formidable impression, the critics agreeing that the lineup of the rival teams promise the keenest battle for points.

All eyes of the observers were turned upon Paavo Nurmi, the brilliant and versatile runner who is entered in six events at distances from 800 meters to 10,000 meters. He was among the first to take the track where he was quickly joined by Joie Ray, the American mile champion, who gave the onlookers a thrill by carrying his Finnish rival at a fast pace in a 1500 meter workout which assumed the proportions of an impromptu race.

Ray, "under wraps" pulled out from a little group of runners, Nurmi responding to the challenge and quickly following, moving easily with a machine-like stride but not as smoothly as the little American. Rounding the last turn they spurted, Ray keeping two yards ahead to an informal finish then pulling up while the Finn kept on for several additional laps.

A meeting of these rivals at their favorite distances of 500 meters has been prevented as Ray is not entered in this distance but it is likely they will match strides in the 3,000 meter team race, one of the concluding features. It developed today that despite the fact that Nurmi made sensational times recently in the 800 meter event, he is not likely to start at this distance, the Finnish officials indicating their belief that he had better conserve his strength principally for the 1500 and 5,000 meter race finals which come the same afternoon.

STOCK PRICES HIGHER

New York, July 1.—Stock prices gave another impressive demonstration of strength today with all the so-called pivotal industrials touching new highs on the current upward movement. An increase in the call money rate from 2 to 3 per cent due to the heavy demand for funds for mid-year requirement, brought about some profit-taking just before the close, but with few exceptions, the recessions were slight.

Brokers reported that much of the demand for high grade industrials and railroad issues represented the reinvestment of July dividend and interest payments. An active resumption of pool operations also noted particularly in a number of the inustrial specialties. A score of stocks established new high quotations for the year, including such widely diversified issues as American Express, Kresge, Lorillard Tobacco, Allied Chemical, Texas and Pacific, American Radiator, Utah Copper, United States castiron pipe railway steel springs, Colorado fuel and Loose Wiles biscuit.

United States steel commons was one of the market leaders selling as high as 100 3-4, and then slipping back to 100 3-8, where it was up about a point on the day. American Can and Baldwin each crossed 116, but were unable to maintain their gains.

Oils, motors, and rubbers responded to active short covering, gains of a point or more being recorded by Cosden, Atlantic Refining, Tidewater, Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil, Studebaker, Stromber carburetor, Hays wheel, United States Rubber common and first preferred and Goodrich.

Kresge department stores closed 2 3-8 points lower at 57 1-8 and Woolworth dropped from 118 to 114 1-8, off 4 3-8 on profit-taking Montgomery Ward and Kinney touched new high prices for the year.

Except for the gain of nearly two points in Texas and Pacific, the principal railroad stocks showed only minor changes.

Despite the firmer rates for call loans time money and commercial paper rates remained unchanged.

A break of 15 points in French francs to 5.13 cents, which was believed to reflect the accumulation of dollars by the French government for Japanese loan repayments, was the feature of the foreign exchange market. Other Europena rates showed only nominal changes.

Bond Prices Lower.

New York, July 1.—Bond prices drifted irregularly lower today, in quiet trading, which was enlivened only by a brisk rally in Wilson and company obligations.

Prospects for early completion of the company's re-financing program without a receivership, the renewal of 93 per cent of the $31,000,000 outstanding notes and failure of remaining creditors to press threatened suits revived buying interest in the Wilson issues. The 7 1-2 scored a net gain of more than 11 points, the convertible 6s jumped 8 points and the first 6s moved a point higher.

Virginia-Carolina 7s1-2s warrants also developed independent strength rising 3 1-2 point but fractional recessions were general in other parts of the industrial list. Railroad and public utility issues were fairly active but moved within narrow price limits. Arrangement were completed to pay interest on underlying Denver and Rio Grande bonds affected by the reorganization plan.

Bankers who will offer the American portion of the $50,000,000 Hungarian loan tomorrow said preliminary reports from London indicated oversubscription of the issue in Europe.

The Curb Market

New York, July 1.—Mixed price movements took in today's curb market, but the main trend was still upward. A break of 2 1-2 points to 210 in Prairie Oil and Gas caused some unsettlement in the oil shares although Standard Oil of Indiana, mutual, Vacuum and Creole Syndicate, the foremost active issues closed fractionally higher.

Motor and chair store issues were the strong spots in the industrial group. Ford of Canada jumped 30 points to 440, while Durant motors, McCrory stores, National Tea and United Bakeries closed 2 to 3 points higher.

The feature of the trading in bonds was a gain of 1 1-2 points in Cudahy Packing 5 1-2.

KING GEORGE PRAISES CANADIAN RAIL HEAD

New York, June 30.—A cable received here today reads, London, June 30th. King George praises work of American. King George received the premiers of Canadian Provinces at a garden party at Buckingham Palace. In questioning the visitors on Canadian affairs, his majesty expressed very particular pleasure at the success of Sir Henry Thornton as President of the Canadian National Railways. "You have taken a good man away from us in England," said the king. Sir Henry Thornton, born in Indiana, was associated with British railways and with the Allies' war effort from 1914 until called to Canada to head the Dominion's national system.

HINTS FOR CARE OF THE HORSE IN SUMMER

Now that the hot weather has arrived in full measure, as a timely warning for the relief and comfort of horses during the summer, the following suggestions sent out by General Manager H. Clay Preston, of the Connecticut Humane society, have been received by Dr. Charles H. Lamb, local agents: Give extra and frequent rest on hot days. Feed lightly and rest well at noontime. Rest your horse by removing harness and collar. Leave him standing in the shade, unless overheated. Avoid overloading; with a fair load, work moderately. In traveling long distances, drive slowly. Water at short intervals and not to excess. If exhausted by heat, cool the head with ice. Give a cool bath, a good bed and plenty of air at night. Keep bearing places of collar and harness clean. Remove friction from galls by cupping the collar. Wash harness sore with cool water and castile soap. Avoid high checks; and check reasonably, if at all. Protect your horse from torment in fly-time. Proper shoeing protects the feet from hot pavements. Apply wet clay or water compress to the forefoot at night. Try the virtue of a bran mash or green grass weekly. Let the poorer horse of the team set the pace. Good care at night will make up for a hard day. These humane suggestions are made in the interest of the horse, but do not forget that he is your property and the value of many horses is depreciated by their treatment in hot weather.

This Society receives many complaints of the abuse of horses by young and untaught drivers on delivery wagons. Merchants have asked us to report these cases to them and have prompted prompt attention. Such cruelty works against a merchant's own interest. First, it awakens unnecessary criticism on the part of the public, which sees it. Second, it is a bad advertisement for the firm, displeases patrons, and sometimes loses trade. Third, it injures and often ruins valuable horses. Fourth, it encourages the driver in cruel habits, which affect his character and impair his value to the business.

Some boys are too young and are unfit for employment as drivers. All inexperienced ones should be instructed by an employer or competent stableman. Attention to this matter will save driver and horse. Patrons should give their orders early. It helps the merchant, the driver and the horse, who runs a tardy order.

Following are the suggestions for drivers: Your value to your employer is increasing by the wise handling of your team. Make a friend of your horse, and treat him as you would your friend. A driver should never blame his horse for what is clearly his own fault. Control your temper and never whip your horse when in anger. Avoid the habit of twitching or snapping the reins and the constant use of the whip. Do not urge your horse up or down hill; you may injure him. Report at once to the stableman any harness sore or lameness. Follow carefully the instructions of stableman as to watering your horse. Do not forget that your horse has rights, and that the state has enacted a law to protect him.

ADD EDIT STORY Question of Courage

"When I stepped into the chair he whispered into my ear, 'If you show the white feather, horses will never drag the truth from me. I'll never give you away to the Westons.'"

"As Dr. Conway applied the forceps on the second tooth there was a little difficulty, and I let out a hearty yell. Immediately there was a crash and a groan behind my chair. Looking around, we discovered that Frank, my cheer-leader, had fainted quite away.

"The nurse revived him and I brought him home in a cab. With difficulty I persuaded him this morning to go to the office for a while, at least. I knew if I could get him down there he probably would stay all day.

"Honest, Florence, I need the rest, not so much from the dentist's activities, but from Frank's infirmities. He protests that lack of courage was not what made him faint, but he agreed that perhaps he had been working too hard lately. He is a nice Frank, but he would never make a surgeon."—Exchange.

SCHOOL PICNIC HELD AT CAMP WA-WOG

The Northwest Corner school, North Stonington, taught by Miss Helen G. Kahn of Franklin closed Friday, June 27, for its summer vacation, with a very enjoyable picnic at Camp Wa-Wog. About 11:30 the Camp W-Wog machine came for the children and took them to the lake. In the shade of a small grove of trees games were enjoyed until the sun hid itself and the rain began to fall. Lunch was served in Edgewood Hall by Mrs. T. Wachenfeld, Jr., assisted by Miss Kahn, the menu consisting of sandwiches, fancy cookies, salted peanuts, candy, popcorn, and lemonade. On account of the rain the races and boating had to be postponed. The children enjoyed fishing from the veranda and a few stunts were tried. When the fishermen became tired, the piano afforded great amusement. Although it proved a stormy and disagreeable day the children had an ideal outing as every thing for their comfort and amusements was arranged by the Wa-Wog Inc. Just before leaving a lunch of sandwiches, cake and lemonade was served to the children who were seated on the veranda. The happy picnic was brought to an end altogether too soon for the children when they saw the machine coming around the corner to take them back to the school for their last look. Miss Kahn and the children greatly appreciate the kindness shown them by Mr. and Mrs. Wachenfeld.

NOTICE
TO PROPERTY OWNERS AND TENANTS

All persons are earnestly requested to clean their premises of all old papers, excelsior, straw, old wood and rubbish, and see that it is carted away to the dumping ground or destroyed before 6 p. m., July 3, 1924.

If all property owners will assist the fire department in this matter of removing rubbish, a large fire may be prevented and small fires reduced to the minimum.

The following suggestions, if carried out, may prevent a conflagration:

Take in under cover all barrels, boxes, etc., or any inflammable material that is liable to add to the danger.

Close all cellars, windows and airways where a match or crackers could be carelessly dropped.

See that all old papers, hay, excelsior, etc., is removed from under the gratings in your sidewalks.

Learn your nearest fire alarm box and ask someone to teach you how to send in an alarm, if you have not been instructed, and use it if necessary.

If you have a telephone in your home or place of business, it may be quicker to telephone to some fire station, being carful to give the correct locality and number of house.

Place the numbers of the fire department telephones on your instrument, so as to be ready. These should always be there ready for any emergency.

Connect your garden hose and have it ready. Also bring your ladder from its usual place and have it ready to get to the roof of your house, where most of the trouble will be, as Norwich is a city of shingled roofs.

HOWARD L. STANTON,
Chief of Fire Department and Fire Marshal. jy1d

SPRING HILL

There was an unusually large number at the church Sunday to listen to the concert by the Sunday school in observance of Children's day. The recitations were particularly good and the choir of ten voices added much to the success. The songs by the four girls were worthy of especial praise. The following programme was very closely followed:

Choir, responsive reading, prayer, choir, recitation, Kenneth Mattern, Mary Boglisch, Dorris Gardiner, Lois Gillette; song, four girls; recitation; Myron Boglisch, Bobbie Wildes. Roberta Smith, Fanny Curgenven, Edith Slate; song, infant class; recitation, Donald Hawkins, Willie Rogers, Florence Mattern, Justine Hawkins; choir; recitation, Ralph Slate, Dorothy Aiken; Marjorie Gillette, Miriam Hawkins; choir; recitation, Russell Slate, Hazel Gillette, Jack Begg; song, 4 girls; recitation, Harold Mattern, Homer Boglisch, Alice Mattern; collection; choir; remarks, Supt. W. P. Wildes and Mrs. Jones; choir.

Anyone at the church Sunday would be easily convinced of the advisability of again opening the public school on Spring Hill.

Probably most of the residents here will attend and some take active part in the celebration of the Fourth at Mansfield Centre.

J. Reynold Beebe has his house far enough along so that the family is living there.

Judge L. J. Storrs and fishing party got home from a trip to Maine Thursday evening.

Judge Storrs and Robert Gardiner left early Sunday morning for an automobile trip to Newark, N. J.

Mary Storrs of Jeffersonville, Vt., is visiting Mrs. E. E. Storrs.

Margaret and Kenneth Hawkins of Willimantic spent Sunday with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Flaherty.

Mildred Cummings of Staten Island, N. Y., has arrived for the summer.

Mr. Bischoff has gone away for the summer.

Miss Anne C. Leadbetter of Newark, N. J., is visiting at Alanweld.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson White of Winsted were at the Flaherty home a part of a day early last week.

Miss E. Janie Palmer, who is attending the Congregational Sunday school convention at Storrs as a delegate from Manchester called at Alanweld, Saturday.

Endorsement of the plan for observing Sunday, December 7, as International Golden Rule Sunday is given by President Coolidge in a letter made public to the Near East Relief, which is conducting the movement in this country.

POETRY

THE MIRACLE OF THE DAWN.

What would it mean for you and me
If dawn should come no more!
Think of its gold along the sea,
Its rose above the shore!
That rose of awful mystery,
Our souls bow down before.

What wonder that the Inca kneeled
The Aztec prayed and pled,
And sacrificed to it, and sealed,—
With rites that long are dead,—
The marvels that it once revealed
To them it comforted.

What wonder, yea! what awe, behold!
What rapture and what tears
Were ours, if wild its rivered gold,—
That now each day appears,—
Burst on the world, in darkness rolled,
Once every thousand years!

Think what it means to me and you
To see it even as God
Evolved it when the world was new!
When Light rose, earthquake-shod,
And slow its gradual splendor grew
O'er deeps the whirlwind trod.

What shouting then and cymballings
Arose from depth and height!
What worship-solemn trumpetings,
And thunders, burning-white,
Of winds and waves, and anthemings
Of Earth received the Light.

Think what it meant to see the dawn!
The dawn, that comes each day!—
What if the East should neer grow wan,
Should nevermore grow gray!
That line of rose no more bed rawn
Above the ocean's spray!
—Madison Cawein.

TO A BUTTERFLY.

I've watched you now a full half hour,
Self-poised upon that yellow flower;
And, little Butterfly, indeed
I know not if you sleep or feed.
How motionless! not frozen seas
More motionless! and then
What joy awaits you, when the breeze
Has found you out among the trees,
And calls you forth again!

This plot of orchard-ground is ours;
My trees they are, my Sister's flowers;
Here rest your wings when they are weary;
Here lodge as in a sanctuary!
Come often to us, fear no wrong;
Sit near us on the bough!
We'll talk of sunshine and of song,
And summer days, when we are young;
Sweet childish days, that were as long
As twenty days are now.
—William Wordsworth.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Boy—Shall we sit this out?

Flapper—Oh, Joe, I'm so tired; let's dance. — Jack o'Lantern.

TAFTVILLE

Troop No. 123 oy Scouts of America of Brooklyn, New York under the leadership of Scoutmaster William Weller, have been in camp on the Canterbury Turnpike Monday and Tuesday. The boys will break camp this morning and continue on their journey to points of historical interest in New England taking tests for merit badges en route.

A Brooklyn resident, who was interested in boys work had a 1915 Ford touring car which had been driven over 100,000 miles and which had been standing idle in the yard for three years. He told the boys that if they could fix it up so that they could take it away under its own power, he would present it to them. They overhauled and painted it and put on four new tires, which were also donated, and they are using the renovated "Lizzy" to carry their tents, oil stove and utensils.

They arrived in New London, on Monday evening and were met by William C. Kendall and George Stevens who brought them to Taftville in their automobiles so that they might visit some of the places, where Scoutmaster Weller learned woodcraft and other requirements of a scout. During the evening they were cordially received by troop 3 and Scoutmaster Davis and were entertained in the scout recreation rooms at the Taftville congregational church.

The Brooklyn boys were very much impressed with the village and surrounding woods and envied the local scouts whose opportunities for enjoying scouting is far greater than those of the city chaps. After breaking camp this morning the boys left for Narragansett Pier via Stonington, Newport, Fall River, New Bedford, Plymouth, Boston and Gloucester, Mass. On the return from Gloucester the boys will take the Boston-New York boat for home.

FORMER CHRIST CHURCH CHOIR BOY TO SING

Galilee chapel, Eastern Point, opened Sunday for the season with a congregation of summer residents and guests from the Griswold. Dr. Curtis Lee Law, editor of the Baptist Watchman and Examiner, occupied the pulpit.

The chapel has secured this summer the service of Glenville W. Phillips of New London as organist and David Merritt Carlyle, also of New London, as soloist. Mr. Phillips has made music his life work and has long been recognized as a brilliant pianist.

Mr. Carlyle has a lyric tenor voice of rare quality. Some years ago he sang as boy soprano at Christ church, Norwich, where among 40 voices he was awarded a gold and silver medal for excellent service. He is now first tenor in the Silvertone male quartet of New London.

ANSWERS THREE QUESTIONS IN THE ALLYN WILL

Three questions that were submitted to to the supreme court on the construction of questions arising under the will of Theophilus M. Allyn of New London were answered when the court handed down decisions Monday, the opinions being by Judge Marvin. Mrs. Ida A. Daboll, a daughter of the testator, is the executrix of the will, which contained a codicil, which presented a question for the court concerning a trust for the benefit of the testator's son, Elmer E. Allyn, now deceased.

That the gift to Ida A. Daboll in trust for Elmer E. Allyn, contained in the codicil, did not revoke the absolute gift to Elmer E. Allyn contained in the will.

That the gift to Ida A. Daboll in trust was intended by the testator to be only a protection against the improvidence of his son Elmer E. Allyn, without otherwise affecting the absolute gift under the will, so that upon the death of Elmer E. Allyn, what remained of the trust property became part of the estate of Elmer E. Allyn.

That the testator did not intend to exclude Elmer E. Allyn from any portion of his share of the residue of the estate unexpended at the time of the latter's death.

Laura A. Palmer, widow of Albert Marshman Palmer, theatrical manager, and daughter-in-law of the late Rev. Albert G. Palmer of Stonington, Conn., left a net estate of $56,191.09 when she died in New York on March 15, 1923, according to a transfer tax state appraisal of her property, on file in the surrogate's court in New York city.

Under her will, executed on May 31, 1922, most of her bequests concern Stamford, Conn., people.

The gross value of the estate left by Mrs. Palmer, who was the divorced wife of Sheridan Shook, brewer and theatrical manager, who died almost 30 years ago, amounted to $59,191.14.

Albert Marshman Palmer, her husband, died on March 7, 1905, following a second stroke which he had within a year. At one time he was the partner of Sheridan Shook and figured much in Mr. Shook's matrimonial troubles. After the Sheridan Shook divorce he married Mrs. Sheridan Shook, the testatrix, but Mr. Shook made it so miserable for him that financial misfortunes forced him to retire from the theatrical field in 1896.

"CRASHED" CONVENTION GATE FOR NORWICH PARTY

Joseph F. Williams, William H. Harrington and Jeremiah A. Desmond, who were in New York last week during the democratic convention had an amusing illustration of how the gate can be "crashed" by those who have sufficient influence in New York politics.

The three Norwich men had no way of getting into the convention session but they happened to meet Frank P. Bent, formerly of this city, who for years has been a leader in New York democratic politics. Frank had a Yonkers delegation in tow and was about to take them into the convention, but he adroitly put them aside for a while with the explanation that he had just met his old schoolboy friend, Joe Williams, from the old home town, and would have to take care of him first. Telling the Yonkers to meet him in half an hour at a designated spot, Mr. Bent told the Norwich men to come along with him, although he had but one pass, but he said he would get them in. When the gate tender was reached, Mr. Bent handed his lone pass on which Mr. Williams walked in. Immediately Mr. Bent snatched the pass out of the hand of the gate tender and presented it again for the second man in the party. The same process was repeated for each one and Mr. Bent finally recovered his pass for future use.

HOW CONNECTICUT VOTED IN MONDAY'S CONVENTION

Connecticut's delegation in the democratic convention at New York, started out in the Monday evening session by dividing its vote on the tenth ballot, exactly as it did on the ninth ballot. Mrs. K. Mangan of New Britain, gone home, leaving Mrs. Kennedy of West Hartford without an alternate.

Just before the evening session opened, Cummings, who had been assisting McAdoo with his strategists on Monday afternoon in directing the fight for his nomination, summoned Walsh, Spellacy, Fitzgerald and Yeomans to one side, where an earnest discussion followed. It was thought that Cummings was asking the leaders to throw more support to McAdoo during the evening balloting, notwithstanding McAdoo's failure to reach a majority.

On the eleventh ballot, the votes of Spellacy, Mrs. Welch, Mrs. Whitney, Yeomans, Fitzgerald and Walsh were switched from Governor Smith to McAdoo, raising his strength in the Connecticut delegation to six and three-tenths and reducing Smith's to seven and seven-tenths. The other McAdoo supporters in Connecticut were Cummings, Miss Ruuts-Rees and Michael T. Cuff. Bolan and Jodoin jumped back into the Smith column. McAdoo gained one more Connecticut delegate, Mrs. Kennedy, on the 12th ballot, tying Smith as far as the state delegation was concerned.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR SEASON AT CAMP TERREHEGAN

The first four days of the fifth season have been active for the boys camped on Long Pond, Ledyard, at Camp Terrehegan, the Y. M. C. A. camp for the boys of New London county.

Several important improvements have been made at the site this year, chief of which is the new water supply. A corps of men under the direction of Harry Rafferty, the army and navy secretary, has been busy for two weeks digging a well, which now gives the camp an abundant supply of excellent drinking water.

The tents have been placed on a higher elevation overlooking the play field and lake beyond and with the completion of the tennis court the camp committee will have one of the best camp sites and equipments in the state.

Central Baptist Pulpit Supplies.

The court of common pleas, which opened Tuesday morning in this city, adjourned shortly afterwards, owing to the three cases having been settled out of court. Judge Charles B. Waller then adjourned the court until next Monday when a session in common pleas will be opened in New London.

The opening dinner dance of the season at Watch Hill is set for July 4th, at the Misquamicut Golf club. The golf programme at the club began Monday and will continue until September 6.

M'ADOO PASSES 500 MARK AT DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

Passed Much Sought Goal of 500 Votes in the Fortieth Ballot When He Polled 505 1-2—Smith Drops Back to 318, a Slight Loss For the Day—Convention Adjourns for Night at Close of Forty-Second Ballot—Missouri and Oklahoma Induced to Vote McAdoo Column by Dint of Frantic Persuasion to See What Could Be Done With the Advantage of Their Moral Support.

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 2.—William Gibbs McAdoo ran to a new high mark in tonight's balloting in the democratic national convention. He passed the much sought goal of 500 votes by dint of much frantic work and persuation and maneuvering on the part of his floor managers, who declared they hadn't figished their work yet.

Running close to the 46 and 44 ballot record of the Baltimore and San Francisco conventions respectively, the Madison Square Garden exhibition gave promise of setting a new mark. McAdoo hit his high mark so far in the fortieth ballot when he polled 505 1-2 votes. Smith at that time had dropped a little below his high level, 323 1-2, made on previous ballots. At the close of the thirtieth ballot last night McAdoo stood at 415 1-2 votes. Thus he gained nearly a hundred in today's balloting and the votes he got were taken principally from John W. Davis who fell to 70 on the last ballot tonight. The McAdoo people went late tonight's session attempting to estimate what damage had been done to their cause by the riotous performance of the late afternoon session when William Jennings Bryan precipitated a tumult with his approval of McAdoo from the platform and aroused cries of "oil."

At first there were various predictions of what the effect might be at the night session but when the leaders got outside and thought it over it became apparent that the principal effect of the Bryan incident had been to solidify the Smith forces and to spur the McAdoo people on to a new effort. To pass the 500 mark tonight and adjourn while it was held there was their first goal. They made it. The day's proceedings were full of incident and color. Twelve ballots were the accomplishment of the two sessions of the day. The desertion of two votes in the New York delegation from Smith to McAdoo gave the McAdoo people all they wanted for a demonstration at the day session and the sliding of Missouri and Oklahoma to the McAdoo standards at the night session furnished the occasion for the demonstrations tonight.

The rumpus Bryan kicked up has seldom been equalled at any national convention and it probably never has been surpassed in anything short of blows and bloodshed.

The Smith people decided, contrary to report that they would not trot out their full strength tonight, and from all evidences they did not do so. The McAdoo people declared they knew there were more Smith votes on the floor to be brought out when called for and they were playing a game which would force all the Smith votes out before they brought out their own full strength.

On the surface the situation when the convention adjourned tonight had not reached the stage for final dealing between the leaders. It was obvious that the McAdoo strength and the Smith strength had reached such proportions that the contest was not going to be decided inopen football play, and it was more certain than ever that each side had a veto on the other. The deadlock, therefore, was becoming tighter.

The convention assembled at 8 o'clock tonight for the 39th ballot.

Senator Walsh, of Montana, a declared supporter of McAdoo, had given way in the chair for the night session to Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, a declared supporter of Smith so that the way might be cleared of any embarrassments for clearing the galleries of Smith rooters if they became so unruly as to stop the convention proceedings as they had done at the afternoon session when they howled Bryan down with storm of yells, catcalls, and uncomplimentary epithets.

Slowly the record of ballots was climbing toward the record made at Baltimore and San Francisco where it took forty-six and forty-four respectively to find a nominee. If no nomination were made tonight the record was in a fair way to be broken. At 8.15 o'clock Chairman Walsh began gavelling for order, silenced the band, waved delegates and alternates to their seats, shook a leonine head at the galleries to keep order and announced that Dr. Frederick H. Knubell, of the United Lutheran churches would lead in prayer.

The New York police glee club then sang some songs. Evidently the convention managers felt that some music was needed to soothe the savage beast of contention.

The old familiar "twenty-four votes for Oscar Underwood" opened the proceedings

McAdoo lost a half vote in Arizona which was given to Smith. The dinner recess had not shaken Arkansas loose from Senator Robinson, nor California from McAdoo.

Colorado was standing with a pat hand left from the previous ballot; Connecticut was ready for no change; Delaware was still with Senator Saulsbury with all her six. Florida had that one Smith vote despite Bryan's speech. The remainder of her twelve went ten for McAdoo and one for Ralston. Georgia, McAdoo's birthplace, cast her 28 votes for him once again and Idaho also remained solid for him.

Illinois again scattered her fifty-eight over the field, giving Smith the greatest number—twenty—in the division.

Bryan's endorsement "could" not give Indiana more than thirty votes for Ralston, but the Hoosiers cast those. Iowa and Kansas still under the unit rule cast for McAdoo. Kentucky gave her all to McAdoo again; Louisiana stuck fast for John W. Davis; Maine made no change; Maryland's favorite son was still in control of her votes and they were cast for Governor Ritchie. Massachusetts gave the same vote again. In Michigan McAdoo lost one; Smith lost one; Davis and Ritchie picked up the two votes.

On the 40th ballot Connecticut announced a change involving a loss for Smith and a gain for McAdoo. There was a protest and the state was passed for a poll at the end of the roll call.

Minnesota made no change in her vote this time. Mississippi still was in the McAdoo camp. Missouri with her 26 for Davis passed, to be reported later. Montana, Nebraska and Nevada were unchanged. In New Hampshire McAdoo picked up a half vote which had been going to Senator Walsh of Montana. Smith's figures there remained the same. New Jersey stayed with Smith, New Mexico stayed with McAdoo. New York still had those two loose votes for McAdoo, but the remaining 88 went for Smith.

In North Carolina Davis picked up a half vote from McAdoo.

North Dakota's 10 divided evenly between Smith and McAdoo; Ohio's 48 were still firm for Cox; Oklahoma passed; Oregon gave her usual 10 for McAdoo.

In Pennsylvania, Robinson's one went to Glass. The poll of the Missouri delegation going on meanwhile indicated that the state was going back to McAdoo under the unit rule.

The list ran on without change until Vermont was reached, when the one McAdoo vote there was taken away and cast for Mayor Jackson of Burlington, Vt. Virginia's 24 remained firm with Glass. Washington's 14 stayed with McAdoo.

John Keegan of St. Louis demanded the poll of the Missouri delegation when he finally could make himself heard, and his demand was seconded by Frank H. Farris of Rolla, Mo., a McAdoo man.

The McAdoo people had the majority of the Missouri delegation in the poll. The result in Missouri was 19 1-2 for McAdoo, 15 for Davis. Under the unit rule it went to McAdoo.

Oklahoma on its poll went to McAdoo without a roll call.

Arizona changed her vote before the roll call was concluded, and that added a half vote to McAdoo, bringing him to 495—within one vote of that coveted 500 which his adherents had been working so hard to get.

On the 40th in Colorado McAdoo gained a half vote from Davis. In Michigan McAdoo gained one, taking it from Ritchie. In Nebraska McAdoo picked one from Smith.

Mayor Jackson's vote in Vermont went to McAdoo on this ballot, the other seven going to Smith.

The poll of the Connecticut delegation resulted: Smith 10, McAdoo 6.

On the 41st ballot in the democratic national convention the leaders stood: McAdoo 504.9; Smith 317.6; Davis 70.

The passing of the 500 mark was attained in a great drive toward getting a majority, with rumblings of a fifht on the two-thirds rule in the offing.

Missouri and Oklahoma had been induced to come to the McAdoo column for a few ballots at least and see what the McAdoo floor managers could do with the advantage of their moral support.

The McAdoo partisans, eager to recover from any reaction that might be developed against them as a result of the Bryan hurricane during the afternoon session, left no stone unturned to drive over the 500 mark and toward the majority. They interrupted the announcement of the official vote of the 40th ballot with a demonstration which was only quelled after repeated efforts. The McAdoo people had some demonstration tricks on hand; among them was a curly-haired girl who was carried about the hall on the shoulders of a man.

There was quite a howling contest between the Smith people in the galleries and the McAdoo people on the floor. Chairman Walsh of Montana leaned leisurely over the speakers' desk waiting for the racket to subside.

On this ballot McAdoo lost 6-10ths of a vote and Smith gained 1-10th. Davis lost a half vote.

The changes emphasized the even balance of the struggle and how tight the deadlock had become.

In Colorado McAdoo lost a half vote which went to Davis of West Virginia.

In Michigan Smith took the two votes which had been going to Ralston and Cox.

New Hampshire gave one to Homer Cummings, chairman of the convention platform committee, taking it from Smith. Mr. Cummings is said to be on the dark horse list.

While this ballot was in progress Mr. McAdoo once more took up his headquarters in the hotel across the street from the convention hall and began a series of conferences with his floor leaders. There was talk of pressure to bring Virginia and Arkansas over to the McAdoo rising tide. South Dakota gave McAdoo 9 and 1 to Thomas J. Spellacy of Connecticut.

Anti-McAdoo folks were at work and conferring also. Thomas Taggart of Indiana visited the Missouri delegation to find out how long it was going to stay with the McAdoo standard.

A California matron who had been waving a collection of little flags at every mention of McAdoo suddenly discovered that someone had slipped a Smith banner on the top of the staff and that she had been waving an emblem for the New York governor. She indignantly tore off the Smith streamer and destroyed it into tiny bits.

At the conclusion of the roll the clerk went back to Connecticut, where the poll had been demanded.

While it was on, the McAdoo floor scouts were frantically working all over the hall trying to round up enough to get a majority—having passed the 500 mark.

William J. Bryan was active in the same cause. The understanding was that Missouri and Oklahoma would stay on the McAdoo side a bit and give the McAdoo managers a chance to get the majority while they were with them.

There was renewed talk of an attack on the two-thirds rule if the McAdoo people succeeded in getting the majority. Whatever the plans were in that regard, they did not develop openly.

"We are asked for our plans," said one of those high in command in the McAdoo ranks. "Our answer is that we are dug in. We're waiting now for the other side to play their last trump, and then the real business of the convention may begin.

"We know that there are more Smith votes on the floor. We know that most of them are in Illinois and that they will be thrown in whenever they are asked for. We have discounted that fact and are psychically prepared for it. We are waiting for the bosses of the convention to exhaust themselves."

In many anti-McAdoo delegations the availability of additional Smith votes was freely admitted, but at the same time it was apparent that great care was being exercised to prevent a too rapid development of maximum strength. That this eventually was receiving thoughtful consideration in the Smith camp also is admitted.

With the announcement of the figures for the forty-first ballot the clerk went back to calling the roll again—this time made forty-two. There was talk of the situation in the Oklahoma delegation not being entirely settled about staying with McAdoo.

Smith lost one to Davis in Michigan.

Mississippi once more voted her 20 for McAdoo. But it was on a slender thread. The delegation at the moment was being held by a woman alternate who was fro McAdoo but acting for a delegate who was for Davis. Efforts were being made to get the delegate back into the hall and swing the Mississippi vote back to the Davis column on a later ballot. McAdoo lost one which Smith picked up in Nebraska. New Hampshire took the vote she had given to Homer Cummings on the last ballot and gave it to Smith.

North Carolina gave 4 1-2 to Glass, taking four of them from Davis of West Virginia and a half vote from McAdoo. Oklahoma, despite a report that she was about to switch to Robinson, stayed with her 20 for McAdoo.

The leaders in the contest stood this way at the conclusion of the forty-second ballot: McAdoo 503.4; Smith 318.6; Davis 67.

NEW METHOD OF RADIO BROADCASTING

New Haven, July 2.—A new method of radio broadcasting developed at Yale university, and demonstrated before groups of engineers for several nights in Dunham Electrical laboratory was announced today by Franklin M. Doolittle, instructor of communication engineering today. The method, according to Mr. Doolittle, makes it possible for a radio listener to tell the location of performers with respect to the microphone at the broadcasting station as readily as though that individual were in a studio. He says that the method transmits the sensation of space which is normally present in hearing but which is completely lost in the usual method of radio broadcasting. The binaural radio method injects the element of dimension and produces the illusion which is comparable with the illusion of solidity obtained when two properly taken photographs are viewed through a sterescope.

Technically, the method is explained in this way: Three distinct impressions are involved when a person of normal hearing receives a sound—quality, intensity, and location of its course.

Quality and strength impressions do not depend upon the use of both ears. Location impression depends upon use of both ears and results primarily from the slight difference in time of arrival of sound at the right and left ears. Radio broadcasting at present transmits the first and second impressions with great fidelity but location impressions which depend upon the binaural sense is lost. The Doolittle system provides means of casting by two radio transmitters adjusted to separate wave lengths. A listener-in will be able to turn on either wave length but to obtain best results two receiving sets should be used, one telephone receiver being attached to one and the other to the second set. The two ears of the listener are in effect transferred to the location of the microphone. The impression received is that the listener is standing in person at the microphone.

The new method is to be used on station WPAJ, New Haven.

The right channel ear is operated at 268 meters and the left ear channel at 225. Two receiving sets should be adjusted to these wave lengths.

CONVENTION IN UPROAR AS BRYAN EXPLAINS HIS VOTE

Florida Delegate Attempts to Stem Tide of Opposition to William G. McAdoo in Address Which Plunged Convention Into Near Riot—Bryan All But Driven From Platform by Heckling Delegates and Booing Galleries—Speaker Said Candidate Must Be a Progressive to Fit the Party Sentiment—Attacks Republican Party for Teapot Dome Scandals and the Mellon Tax Plan.

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 2.—At the beginning of the 38th ballot today William Jennings Bryan asked unanimous consent to explain his vote for McAdoo. He got it and mounted the platform.

"When I am through I hope you feel I have improved my time for the benefit of the democratic party," began Bryan. "I have only one desire—that is that we shall win this next election. I only desire that because I see no other hope for the nation except in the victory of the democratic party.

"In the first place the party has candidates in abundance. In every state we could find a democrat worthy of being president.

"In Florida," Mr. Bryan continued, "we have Dr. Murphree."

"We want Smith," shouted a delegate from New York.

"We've never heard of him," shouted another.

"Those who have not informed themselves on the nation's great men ought to be silent until they have had a chance," retorted Bryan. "He would fill the office with credit to himself and with honor and credit to the nation.

"Travel north from Florida to North Carolina and mention one of the best democrats in the United States—Josephus Daniels. He made a magnificent secretary of the navy. My third is another southern man—Senator Robinson of Arkansas.

"He measures up to every requirement of the presidency. Here are three men from the south. This is probably the last convention of my party at which I may be a delegate—" at that there was applause.

"Don't applaud," interrupted Bryan, "I may change my mind."

"It is time we should hush forever the voice that says we should not recognize the south in full participation of our party triumphs. The man who says the north would not vote for a southern man libels the north."

"What this nation wants is a man whose heart beats in sympathy with the common people and they don't care where he was born.

"The first northern man I mention is Samuel M. Ralston of Indiana. He is a progressive democrat with a noble record of work done for his state and his nation through the democratic party. My next man from the north is E. T. Meredith of Iowa. He was in the president's cabinet—an honor to the cabinet—he has long been identified with agriculture and knows the farmers' needs.

"To fit our party's sentiment and record and platform and to appeal to the only votes we have any chance of securing, our candidate must be a progressive.

"Now I mention one that made it possible for us to have a progressive platform.

"The man who has made it possible the election of a progressive is William Gibbs McAdoo."

While the galleries, packed with Smith supporters, fan off into a riot and Chairman Walsh ordered some sections of them cleared, the floor went off into pandemonium, the McAdoo people went off into fits of cheering and the Smith people went to booing.

From the floor a New Jersey delegate shouted to Bryan: "You have stated that Senator Walsh was the greatest of all investigators. Bear in mind that he disclosed that McAdoo has accepted retainers from oil." At that point more pandemonium broke loose and there was some question about the propriety of Bryan proceeding under the rule.

"Give him time," yelled a Smith admirer from the gallery, "give him twenty years."

"The gentleman asked about Mr. McAdoo's retainers from Mr. Doheny," replied Bryan when some order was restored.

"Mr. Doheny's retainers related to old Mexico," replied Bryan. "I will go further and say that if any oil ever touched McAdoo the intense and persistent opposition of Wall street has washed it all away."

By that time the crowd was howling Bryan down and Bryan was shouting into the noisy mass before him and nobody could be heard.

An Ohio delegate mounted a chair and shouted: "Can you tell how McAdoo collected a fee of $200,000 for cutting $2,000,000 off the taxes of ——?" The remainder of the question was drowned out in the roar.

Bryan shouted something in reply but men sitting five feet from him couldn't hear what he said. The gesticulations of the commoner were the only indication of what he was shouting.

Dennis F. Dunlavy, of Ashtabula, Ohio, was the man who asked Bryan to explain McAdoo's part in the tax cases.

From the floor E. H. Moore, of the Ohio delegation demanded the regular order.

Bryan waved to Moore in an entreating gesture to sit down.

The chair refused to entertain any motions while Bryan had the floor. Charles F. K. O'Brien of New Jersey was next recognized. He recalled that the chairman had previously stated that he would entertain a motion for the regular order after Bryan had answered the questions asked from the floor.

Chairman Walsh refused to return to the regular order and told Bryan to go ahead.

"You didn't answer that man's question," shouted one delegate, pointing out the Ohio man who asked about the tax cases.

The riot died away for a second and Bryan getting control of the situation, again proceeded, reciting the movement toward governments of socialism and communism abroad

"It has been brought about" he said, "by the concentration of wealth that has enriched the few and made homeless the many."

He followed with an attack on the republican party for the Teapot Dome scandals and the Mellon tax plan.

"If the republicans go on piling up riches in the hands of the few," Bryan continued, "it will only be a question of time when the same question Lloyd George asked in England will be asked in the United States 'the men of wealth ought to know and the democratic party ought to tell them that it is better to have good government than leave large fortunes.'"

Bryan's time, taken up about half with the roaring and booing of the crowd, expired. Chairman Walsh tapped him on the shoulder and told him it was up and with a gracious "I thank you," the commoner concluded and left the platform.

RECOUNT OF MAINE'S VOTE IN PRIMARIES

Augusta, Me., July 2.—A complete recount of Maine's vote for the republican nomination for governor in the primaries of June 16, was ordered today by Secretary of State Ball on petition of Senator Ralph O. Brewster. The latter, defeated by Senator Frank G. Farrington by 320 votes on the face of the official returns, claims that inspection of ballots in some places has shown violation of law, and errors in tabulation.

Local inspection of ballots in 35 cities and towns left no net change in the plurality, but Brewster supporters claim to have advices from 292 cities and towns which reduced Farrington's lead to 91.

Brewster's campaign was supported by the Ku Klux Klan, and had as its principal issue withdrawal of state funds from sectarian schools, with the result that normal party lines were broken down, democrats voting in the republican primaries, and ballots in the latter fell short causing the use of "home made" ballots in some places.

WILLIMANTIC

Acting Mayor George W. Hickey has issued a proclamation requesting all citizens to take active part in the observance, locally, of the Fourth of July. It is asked that the Stars and Stripes be displayed on premises and that a part be taken in the various functions of the day, in cooperation with the several committees who have made arrangements for a program of sports, amusements and attractions which will equal if not surpass, those offered in any other city in the state this year.

The Fourth of July parade in this city will start at 9 o'clock, the line of march being up Valley street to High, down Main street to Recreation park. Three divisions of the parade will represent every phase of the city's life and interests, from business and social standpoints. The marshal will be Jeremiah McCarthy and one representative of every society in this city will comprise his aides. Individuals or organizations are being invited to get into the march, which will form at 8.30 o'clock.

Following is the formation: Platoon of police, Marshal Jeremiah McCarthy; staff to be composed of one representative of each civic society. Acting Mayor George W. Hickey and executive committee of city council; clergymen; Boy Scout band; Boy Scout troops 2, 3, 4 and 5; Company C, 169th Inf., Connecticut National Guard; Guard Sacred Heart; veterans of all wars; civic societies.

Division No. 2—George A. Bartlett and aides; B. P. O. E. band; horribles and novelties; Barnum & Bailey, Ringling Bros., Sparks, Sells Floto, Al. Sautelle's Combined Circus parade; Odell M. Chapman's Continental Drum Corps; four hundred boys in comedy makeup; six comedy floats.

A widely appreciated announcement made here is that the taxing of telephone toll messages ended at midnight Wednesday night, with the going into effect of the new tax bill. The range of the Willimantic exchange covers a large surrounding territory in which are located the towns of Ashford, Hampton, Chaplin, Columbia, Mansfield, Windham, most of Coventry and a good part of the towns in Andover, Willington, Hebron and a section of Lebanon. Meriden will show here against the Americanites Saturday afternoon.

The New Britain-Willimantic controversy was aired at a meeting of the Connecticut State League, held at Hartford Tuesday night. Manager John F. McQuillan and President Bert [illegible] of the local association were present. The question arose over a game from New Britain to receive [illegible] in this city on the holiday afternoon, while the league recognizes twice the guarantee at $100. The compromise was reached and an additional $50 was thrown into the pot.

Lincoln square will be roped off for dancing as part of the program for the night before the Fourth tonight (Thursday) from 4.15 o'clock in the afternoon to midnight when adjournment will be taken to Recreation park to witness the big bonfire. The main thoroughfare will be roped off near Railroad street and signs will be posted at Bridge street, informing the motorists and drivers of other vehicles from the west, headed for Boston, Putnam, Providence and other points east and south, to detour over Bridge, Mountain and Pleasant streets. Signs at Windham road will detour autoists going west over the same route, and more signs at Jackson street will lead tourists around the back streets back to the main highway. On Friday morning, July Fourth, from 9 o'clock until after the parade there will be no parking of automobiles on either side of Main street from Watson street to the junction of Main and Union streets, just east of the main office of the American Thread company. Music for the pavement dancing at Lincoln Square will be furnished by the B. P. O. E. band.

		DOUBLE-FACED Number	List Price
By the Waters of Minnetonka (An Indian Love Song) (Lieurance) Violin Solo Under the Leaves (Thiedi) Violin Solo	Renée Chemet Renée Chemet	1015	$1.50

An emotional violin setting of Lieurance's song of the two Indian lovers who met death together. The companion number is a gracious pastorelle in the French manner. Both vividly portrayed by this violinist's art and faultlessly recorded by Victor processes.

Napulitanata (Fair Maiden of Naples) (Di Giacomo-Costa) Neapolitan Chi se nne scorda cchiù! (Oh, How Can I Forget!) (Marucci-Barthélemy) Neapolitan	Tito Schipa Tito Schipa	952	1.50

Two impassioned tenor songs from Neapolitan sources, beautifully sung and accompanied by a "little orchestra" of violin, mandolin, guitar, flute and piano. These songs are of the true vintage of life, and being Victor Records they are true reproductions of the artist's interpretations.

Vocal Selections

Face to Face Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour	Henry Burr Charles Harrison-Clifford Cairns	19324	.75

A very fine sacred number, simple and reverent, the voice floating over a rich and impressive undercurrent of orchestral harmony. With it is combined a duet for tenor and bass, in similar style. No matter how many sacred songs there are in your record library, you will want to add these.

(1) Lady Moon (2) The Village Dance I Know a Bank	Anna Howard-Laura Littlefield Anna Howard-Laura Littlefield	19295	.75

A Christine Rossetti lyric, a Hungarian dance, a Shakespeare poem, for two sopranos in canonic harmony. Educational records of such beauty that they will delight every one.

Tom Boy Blues Bull Frog Patrol	The Duncan Sisters The Duncan Sisters	19352	.75

As a pair of "Tomboy Taylors," these dainty comediennes are having a hard time of it in the first record, if you may believe them. In the second number they carol to the King's taste. Droll numbers that are most entertaining—typical of the vaudeville presented on Victor Records.

Dance Records

Paradise Alley—Fox Trot (from "Paradise Alley") with vocal refrain Where the Rainbow Ends—Fox Trot	Paul Whiteman and His Orchestra	19353	.75

Brilliant, varied fox trots by this master-organization. The first has a vocal refrain, celebrating the delights of "Paradise Alley." The second is a fitting companion number. Here is new joy for dance lovers who know and appreciate the unequalled quality of Victor recording.

A Thousand Kisses—Waltz Apache Dance	International Novelty Orchestra	19351	.75

A famous Archibald Joyce waltz in a beautiful rescoring, and a remarkable number for exhibition dancers. A record to try out your dancing, but delightful even if you just want to listen.

I'm On My Way Back Home—Fox Trot vocal refrain and whistling by Carson Robison Just to Be Held in Your Arms—Fox Trot	Charles Dornberger and His Orchestra Charles Dornberger and His Orchestra	19354	.75

Dashing, stimulating fox trots. The first has a vocal refrain with two-tone whistling effects and other sounds of travel. The second is also an excellent number. Dance them or just listen and experience that keen sense of pleasure which only Victor Records afford.

Bandit Chasers With Radio

Radio is now beginning to loom up as a real foe of the criminal. In many cities radio-equipped police departments, according to Mr. Benjamin, of the local Exide service station, are either being considered or have already been established.

In Detroit three big Lincoln touring cars have recently been equipped with radio receiving sets, which will enable these high-powered and speedy cars to maintain constant communication anywhere and at all times with police headquarters. It is planned eventually to have seven of these cars in service.

In Philadelphia plans are under way for the installation of similar radio equipment, which will be used in conjunction with the searchlight system inaugurated by the famous General Butler.

Upon the speed with which the description of the criminal can be placed in the hands of every policeman after the crime has been committed depends, largely, the probability of capture. This has time and again been demonstrated when men and women without previous criminal experience and record have committed crimes and in spite of their lack of experience have actually managed to escape. Had the police been warned in time, the awkward efforts of these criminals would have quickly caused them to fall into the police net. This also applies to the class of criminals "known to the police."

The new radio-equipped cars will be especially valuable in bandit-catching work. These cars patrolling various parts of the city can be notified instantly of hold-ups and immediately sent in pursuit. Incidentally the Detroit cars can travel over 80 miles an hour, the speedometer of the fastest actually showing on tests 84 miles an hour. These cars are equipped with windshields seven-eighths of an inch thick, made of bullet proof glass. Two gun racks are provided, one on the heel board of the front seat and one, coversal, on the heelboard of the rear seat, each to carry a sawed-off shot gun.

Both A and B batteries will be charged every five days. Two complete sets have been furnished to each car, so that the car will not be out of service while the batteries are being charged. Superintendent Pott of the signal department, Detroit police headquarters, states that the cars will be in service 24 hours a day and will constantly be in touch with headquarters station KOP which broadcasts on a wave length of 286 meters.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PALACE THEATRE

A little stenographer is a dangerous thing.

For proof of this perverted proverb we direct your attention to "Why Men Leave Home, a First National picture, produced by John M. Stahl, which is scheduled to open a three day engagement at the Palace theatre starting today.

It was personally directed by Mr. Stahl from the famous stage play by Avery Hopwood.

In this picture Alma Bennett, a stunningly beautiful young actress, plays the role of a stenographer, her employer being impersonated by Lewis Stone. The employer, John Emerson, was happily married — that is, he thought he was—but his wife did not see much joy in being neglected by her husband, and was forced to seek recreation and enjoyment with her woman friends.

It was while she was on a week-end trip to a resort that John discovered that he missed his wife considerably. He found a way to relieve his lonesomeness by taking the stenographer out to dinner. All would have been well if his wife had not returned unexpectedly—and smelled perfume on his Tuxedo. The journey to the divorce court was a swift one—and John found himself married to the typetapper.

They had been married but a few hours before fate intervened and separated them for good.

Helene Chadwick plays the part of the wife in this picture, others in the cast being Mary Carr, William V. Mong, Hedda Hopper, Sidney Bracy, Lila Leslie, E. H. Calvert and Howard Truesdell.

Also latest Pathe Review Special two reel comedy and Palace supreme orchestra.

Four days starting Sunday, B. P. Schulberg presents a Gasnier production Maytime, from the play by Rita Johnson Young, scenario by Olga Printzlau, with Harrison Ford, Ethel Shannon, Clara Bow, William Norris and Hollywood's twelve most beautiful girls.

AT THE BREED

Women Who Give, adapted from that widely-read novel Cape Cod Folks opened at the Breed theatre yesterday. Our advice is to see it by all means, for it is an unusually striking story of great dramatic value, exceedingly well directed and enacted by a particularly fine cast.

With the rugged New England coast as a background Reginald Barker has produced a motion picture that fairly tingles with romance, drama and thrills. Sarah P. McLean Greene's story of seafaring men and the women who await the return of their loved ones with the fishing fleets, is a classic and it is even more absorbing and interesting on the screen than it was as a play and book. Incidentally it is the sort of photo-drama that holds interest for everyone, man, woman and child and should pack the Breed theatre during its engagement there.

Barbara Bedford, Renee Adoree, Robert Frazer, Frank Keenan, Joseph Dowling, Margaret Seddon, Joan Standing, Victor Potel, Eddie Phillips and William Eugene are in the cast.

Women Who Give is a Reginald Barker production presented by Louis B. Mayer-Metro, adapted by Bernard McConville and J. G. Hawks from Sarah P. McLean Greene's novel with scenario by A. P. Younger.

STRAND THEATRE

No one will be able to question the fact that Harold Lloyd performs his own "thrill stunts" in the seven-reel hair-raising Pathe-comedy, Safety Last, which comes to the Strand theatre Friday, Saturday, for in practically every scene in the picture Lloyd's face shows on the screen.

Thrills with frills and chills are promised, with the spectacled comedian performing the difficult task of climbing the side of a twelve story building and reaching the roof after overcoming the most hilarious and fearful hazards. And, although suffering part of the time from a disappointed shoulder, Harold declined to use a "double" at any stage of the production. Indeed, it will not require a close inspection to disclose this fact.

The production contains one of the most delightful love stories ever screened, with Mildred Davis, of course, being the young lady in the case. As the worshipping young man, Harold Lloyd puts all the famous screen lovers to shame and mingles sentiment with comedy in a most charming manner. Safety Last can be truly said to be the greatest comedy ever produced.

Other pictures will be on the same program.

Children will be admitted for 10c.

The Crystal Water company was sending out notices Wednesday informative of the fact that the water supply for sections of the borough south of the Main street railroad crossing and on the West Side will be cut off next Tuesday at 10 a. m., while essential changes are under way in connection with the installation of a new six-inch main that is to run from a point in Main street near the bridge over the Assawaga river through Water street to Union street.

The section of Water street to be outfitted with a six-inch main runs along the rear of the Keystone, Evans and Hyde blocks and the Augustus Longo property. This section of Water street has never had a water main—only a small pipe bringing a supply of water to dwellers in tenements in that section.

For a week past, Danielson at large has had cause to be appreciative of the service that Harold B. Atwood has rendered to those interested in affairs political in making available continuous radio returns direct from the convention of the democrats in New York.

Every morning as the convention opened a group of listeners has been on hand. Many of them have taken occasion to make notes of the result of each ballot, that they might tell their friends as well as distribute the information by telephone to territory hereabouts. Gratuitously, Mr. Atwood has kept all who cared to be in immediate touch with the doings of the convention.

The service has been splendid, so much so that it has fascinated many into neglecting for an hour or two pressing business matters or being late for their meals. It has been the best demonstration here of the wonder of the radio, and this has been largely possible through the excellence of the equipment that Mr. Atwood has been using.

The work of excavating, laying pipe and filling long stretches of trench in carrying out the project of the Eastern Connecticut Power company in establishing a high pressure gas line between Danielson and Putnam is nearing an end. Up on the Elmville road the last stretch of trench that will be opened along a state highway in connection with the work is being filled in. The main now runs all the way from Danielson to Putnam. Some time must elapse before the necessary work can be done to give Elmville and Dayville gas service. These communities have been without gas, the service never having been extended out of Danielson.

From a picnic park at Lake Hopatcong, N. J., there floated gracefully to earth at the power station and clubhouse of the Connecticut company at the Dyer dam a toy balloon, evidently set free by some holiday-maker. Frank Gallup watched the balloon as it came floating slowly in from the southward and had but just remarked that he wished it would come to earth when it gradually descended. Information stamped on the balloon established whence it came.

Today (Thursday) brings the rush period for sales of fireworks. All the familiar devices in this line of merchandise are available in the stocks being offered this season and some new-fangled notions that without doubt will hold a strong appeal for Young America. The giant firecrackers of the old days are missing from the offerings of this year, but there is a variety of offerings sufficient to interest all who desire something that will make a noise or burn brightly on the Fourth.

Harking back through the years, a group of old-time residents of Danielson were recalling Wednesday where picnics for the multitude used to be held in this vicinity on the Fourth. One of the first places named was what formerly was known as the Haley orchard, a tract at Mechanic and Hutchins street, bounded on the west by the tracks of the New Haven road. Hubbard's grove was another favorite resort. What was Hubbard's grove is now one of the fine residential sections on Broad street, the William J. Ross property about in the center of it. Still another picnic place was what was then an orchard on the Ely property, near where St. James' school and convent stand. Again, there was a picnic ground off lower Dyer street, the grove through which a roadway now leads to the railroad coal dump of the Quinebaug company. This will be largely news to the younger generation of Danielson people, and a stimulant of fond memories from hosts of older people. Undoubtedly there were other old picnic grounds in Danielson, but they are not recalled here.

Incidentally, Fourth of July picnics are not as popular as once was the case. The summer resorts, like Wildwood park, with its fine new dance palace, has replaced them, and the shore dinner places also have their appeal to all who like such outings on a holiday.

Employes in the Danielson division of the S. N. E. T. company were in Putnam Wednesday evening to attend a social affair at which Miss Alice Sherman, chief operator in the Putnam division, was presented a 25-year service button by the corporation.

There have been certain indications this week that the worsted and woolen business promises to show some improvement at an early date, news of welcome interest to hundreds of workers in territory hereabouts.

Special officers will go on duty this evening to keep a careful check on over-enthusiastic celebrators of the night before the Fourth and their activities. The police will use their best efforts to see that the holiday is ushered in quietly, in accordance with the law.

Rev. F. T. Ledwith, M. S., who is spending a few days at St. James' rectory, will be a speaker on the Fourth at the observance to be held in Willimantic. Father Ledwith is an orator of exceptional force and magnetism.

Taking advantage of the holiday period that the Fourth will bring, many Danielson people have planned outings that will take them out of town—to mountain and seaside resorts.

For an outpouring of fishermen the past two days—the opening one of the bass fishing season—have been productive of small returns. Only a few worth-while bass have been taken, but some good catches of white perch were reported from Alexander's lake.

From a distance it would appear that there would have been little material difference between being in the Ohio tornado or Madison Square Garden.

This is the night that brings the fireworks display at Goodyear and a band concert in advance of the Fourth.

Roy Tillinghast of Louisville, Ky., is visiting his mother, Mrs. A. J. Tillinghast, of Academy street.

Arthur W. Williams, Jr., as a member of the Service battery, has been detailed for special duty at Hartford.

Rene Caron, recently operated upon for appendicitis, has so far recovered that he will be able to leave the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam before long.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Cayen and Francis Cayen have been motoring in New York state the past few days.

Driving a big army truck, as part of the special duty to which he has been assigned, D. W. Arnold of the Service battery went through Danielson Wednesday with equipment of the newly formed infantry company at Putnam, en route for the state camp ground at Niantic.

G. A. Gilmore of Providence was a visitor with friends in Danielson Wednesday.

Under a new arrangement, just effective, Capt. F. O. Armington and other commissioned officers of the Service battery are now rated officers of the United States army, instead of officers of the Connecticut National guard.

At Putnam Trade School

Stanley Bartlett will be graudated from the electrical department this week having completed the course in electricity. This work includes theory and practice in elementary and advanced electrical work together with drafting, machine shop and carpentry experience required in the trade.

The Trade School Athletic association held its annual picnic Wednesday at Webster Lake. It was for all those connected with the school, including the girls in the Home Economics Department.

Work in the Textile department on a special order of blue and white mercerized Oxford is progressing favorably, some of this having been sent to the finishers recently.

The school is receiving a large number of applications from out of town students this year, aside from those having entered the summer school.

Additional equipment is to be installed in the electrical department to take care of the increasing demand for this instruction.

PUTNAM

A representatives of the Minneapolis Trust company, trustee under the will of the late Harriet Tourtellottee, has been in Putnam this week inspecting the Tourtellotte Memorial chapel at Grove street cemetery. By the will of Mrs. Tourtellotte a fund of $50,000 was left in trust for teh Putnam Cemetery association with which to erect a chapel to be a memorial to her husband, Dr. Tourtellotte. Dr. and Mrs. Tourtellotte formerly lived in Thompson and it is due to their benevolence that the town has the beautiful Tourtellotte Memorial high school.

The representative sent to Putnam was satisfied with the work done. The building is practically completed except for the fitting and furnishings. A roadway leading to and around the building is being constructed by the cemetery association at an approximate cost of $4,000, much grading being necessary.

Mrs. Harold C. Burnham of Hartford, soprano soloist of the Fourth Congregational church of Hartford for the past eight years, has been secured as choir director of Putnam Congregational church to succeed Frederick W. Bailey of Worcester resigned. Mrs. Burnham will personally conduct the choir Sunday mornings which will be an advantage as Mr. Bailey was not able to be in Putnam Sundays on account of engagements in Worcester. The music committee of the church, of which Mrs. S. M. Wheelock is chairman is pleased at being able to secure the services of Mrs. Burnham.

Putnam clerks will not have their half holiday this (Thursday) on account of tomorrow being a holiday. Most of the factories that are running will close from Thursday night to Monday morning.

Some forty to fifty boys from New York arrived in Putnam Wednesday afternoon, and went at once to a summer camp near the shores of Roseland lake. Every taxi driver at the railroad station got a load of boys to transport to Woodstock and some of them had to return for a second load. The state department of health's ban on bathing in the lake which is the source of Putnam's water supply ahs apparently not disrupted the plans of the summer campers.

Nearly every town in Windham county was represented at a meeting of the directors of the Windham County Farmers' Association held here Wednesday. General business matters were discussed including the annual field day to be held August 14. Among the visitors was B. W. Ellis of Storrs college, formerly Windham country farm agent.

Henry N. Benoit, an assistant to the clerk of the United States senate, has arrived from Washington to spend the summer at his home in Putnam. Since he has been in Washington Mr. Benoit has studied law at the night school of Georgetown university and recently was graduated with an LL. B. degree. Mr. Benoit was one of the first letter carriers at the Putnam post office when free delivery was inaugurated. Some years ago he left Putnam to enter the post office department in the house of representatives. During the war he was sent to The Hague on account of his knowledge of French. Upon his return he again entered the post office department. Upon the resignation of Attorney L. H. Miron of Putnam as assistant to the clerk in the senate Mr. Benoit was appointed his successor.

The Republican club of Woodstock numbers 79 members and activities for the future are being planned. Chairman George M. Sampson has announced that Lieutenant Governor Hirame Bingham will come to Woodstock Wednesday afternon, July 16th, to speak in Academy hall in the afternoon. There will be other speakers and a programme of music. At a recent meeting of the club, Miss Katherine Byrne of Putnam told of the republican convention at Cleveland from her viewpoint as a delegate from Connecticut.

From seven to nine sections of the Bar harbor express are passing through Putnam nightly in the last minute rush of people wishing to get to the Maine resorts before the Fourth. During the day long trains of empty Pullmans making the return trip pass through the Putnam railroad yard.

Notice of the death in Pascoag, Mass., of Paul Swartz, has been received in Putnam. Mr. Swartz for five years was the designer for the Waterman Worsted company on Pomfret street. While employed in Putnam Mr. Swartz made his home in Pascoag where he spent the week ends. On account of ill health of Mrs. Swartz Mr. Swartz returned to Pascoag. Mrs. Swartz died some months ago. Mr. Swartz was in the early sixties. He was a member of the Arcanum club of Putnam and had a large circle of friends and acquaintances in the city who were attracted to him by his manly qualities. The funeral was held from the home Wednesday afternoon. A married daughter of Kennicuit, N. H., and a brother in Pascoag, survive.

Putnam's city government is intact. The personnel that goes to make up the municipal executive organization remains as is, or, as has been, since the fall election and the January appointments. This notwithstanding that the resignation of two city officials were in the hands of the common council were brought up for action at the council meeting, Tuesday night. The resignations read were those of Prosecuting Attorney J. P. Carpenter and Alderman Simeon LaRose, the democratic member from Ward 4.

This is the prosecutor's second resignation within a few months. The chief reason stated for his action was that the growing demands of the office take nearly half his time and that this is more than he can afford to give the city to the detriment of his private practice.

While no mention was made of the salary attached to the important office by Attorney Carpenter, the inconsistency of the remuneration paid city court officers was brought out when the monthly bills were read and was remarked upon outside the council chamber rail. The city janitor's monthly pay envelope contains $40 while the amount paid to the judge of the city court and prosecutor is $41.67, cut down to $41.25 every other month. In other words the city pays its janitor $480 a year and its court officials $500 or only $20 more than the janitor.

When Mr. Carpenter's resignation was read Alderman M. C. Ivers made a motion that the resignation be laid on the table indefinitely. The motion was unanimously voted.

Alderman LaRose did not state the reason for his resignation. It is, however, not due to any inadequacy in salary, for no member of the common council receives a salary to be inadequate. Alderman LaRose has recently been appointed a member of the police force and he therefore felt that he should resign his aldermanic job. When this resignation was read Alderman Pigeon, democratic alderman from ward 2, stated that as Alderman LaRose was only doing temporary police duty he moved that the resignation be laid on the table until the next meeting.

Mayor Victor Chandelaine is enjoying the ocean breezes from the porch of his summer cottage at Oakland beach. In the mayor's absence Alderman-at-large Richards, presided and for some time it looked as if there would be no business transacted for lack of a quorum. City Clerk Thomas P. Ryan disappeared from the chamber and returned with Alderman LaRose, who was in the police station in the basement of the municipal building. With Aldermen Rogers, Lalor and Pigeon occupying their chairs a sufficient number to hold the session was present.

The report of the captain of police showed a total of 72 arrests during June, that 4 prisoners were taken to jail; fines and costs collected amounted to a total of $429.40; 14 tramps had been lodged and that two store doors had been found unlocked at night and secured.

George Potvin appeared on behalf of St. John Baptist society. Mr. Potvin stated that the society had discovered that seven years ago the city had appropriated some of the society's land near Providence street. The matter will be investigated by the highway committee.

A Bonneville, A Dufie and A. Lizotte asked the council to take steps so that surface water would no longer flow upon their land. They stated that they had sought legal advice and that the city had no right, in the opinion of their counsel, to burden their property with the overflow from the street. The highway committee will investigate.

Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston stated that two permits had been granted to sell fireworks and that any others selling were doing so without permits. He said that no explosives were allowed to be sold in stores. In the two cases where permits have been granted small buildings have been erected for the purpose of selling explosives for the Fourth.

The election of the following members of the Hook and Ladder company No. 1, to fill vacancies, was ratified by the council: Joseph Delisle, Charles Ryan, Wyman E. Richardson, Charles Gagne, Elzear Guertin.

An American flag has been raised on the flagpole recently placed in position on the Broad street front of the new Washington Trust building, at the junction of Main and Broad streets.

Infantile paralysis was the diagnosis of the authorities at the City Hospital, Providence, in the case of Clarence Wilson Gray, a member of the graduating class of 1924, Westerly High school, which agreed with that of Westerly medical authorities, who had previously looked into the case. This conclusion was arrived at in Providence Tuesday and the notification was received in Westerly Wednesday.

Clarence Gray took part in the prize speaking contest Monday evening of Commencement week, June 23rd, winning first prize. He was taken ill following the programme and the next day was carried in the ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary Corps to Providence. As infantile paralysis is a contagious disease, the symptoms of a party who is ill in the vicinity to that in which the high school senior resided, are being carefully watched with an idea of preventing an epidemic.

Connecticut state policeman, state troopers, three in number, caused a stir in Pawcatuck late Tuesday night and the early hours of Wednesday morning. Two of the men were stationed at the narrow opening of West Broad street and under the railroad bridge. One of the troopers carried a flash light, which he swung in front of automobiles. Every automobile going in either direction was brought to a complete standstill and the flash light thrown on the registration number and the occupants of each machine and curt orders were given to go ahead. At times a whistle was blown if the driver did not stop as promptly as the Connecticut officer wished. One of the officers was seated in a small automobile which made frequent trips and it was said that the bridge at Stillmanville was under guard, and a detail stationed on Hinckley Hill. It was the current rumor that a booze car was the object of the state troopers' search and there were those who went as far as to detail and make and type. So far as could be learned the long hours' search for this particular law-breaker was without avail. A bystander reports that a car with a Rhode Island registration, among those stopped, had its tonneau inspected and there was found a case of home brew, which was taken by the state policemen, but the machine was allowed to proceed.

The Pawcatuck patrolmen, apparently were not taken into the confidence of the state troopers as there seemed to be no cooperation between them, although Patrolman Connors, when the state troopers first began operations, sought their identity and satisfied himself that they were state policemen.

ENTERTAINING VACATIONERS.

This is the season of the year when those of the cities who can are moving to the seashore for the next two months, when others are going to the seashore or the mountains for a lesser time, when many are going to camps and when efforts are made to relieve the distress that is experienced by so many in the crowded and unhealthy regions of the congested big cities by sending the children into the country.

This is one of the states into which many have been sent on previous years. Camps that are maintained by various organizations accommodate several hundred during the course of the season while there are others who have to be found in the numerous country boarding houses which have long since proved to be more profitable than working the farm.

Eastern Connecticut will entertain its usual quota this summer. It will also entertain not a few of the poor children from New York who are sent out by fresh air funds. These representing those whose families are unable to provide any vacation for them. The streets of the big city is their recreation ground under ordinary conditions. Green grass, trees, good air, hills, brooks and the common things of the country are a revelation to them. From a health standpoint their needs could not be better served.

It is a case of course where the success of the effort depends to a large degree upon the finding of homes wherein they will be entertained, not for pay, but for the satisfaction of doing something for the needy.

As a vacation ground of this character there couldn't be a finer section chosen for placing such children than eastern Connecticut. Many are the homes that will take one, two or three, and there are many, which developed much interest in the children which they have previously entertained, which will be anxious to extend the same benefits to others. It involves no little care and some expense but the satisfaction of doing something for the unfortunate is a recompense.

RECONSTRUCTION IN OHIO.

Considering the losses which have been caused to Ohio cities, the job of reconstruction is no small one. Rebuilding the structures which have been leveled, twisted, partly demolished or moved from their foundations is going to mean a much larger expense than was involved at the time of their construction. This makes the havoc wrought by the storm all the greater, but without spending any unnecessary time dwelling upon the situation the people of Ohio are setting about the necessary task.

Because of the storm the cities where the most trouble was caused are not going to be abandoned. They are going to spring back into activity quite the same as San Francisco did after its devastating earthquake. It requires courage and determination, but the manner in which they are adjusting themselves to their task shows that they have them.

Some idea of what the extent of the wreckage is can be gained from the claim that it will require $30,000,000 to replace the damaged property. Thirty million isn't a prohibitive sum. There are buildings which run well up to such a total but they do not grow on bushes. It will be no small job to finance such a reconstruction task, but it is a cause for which there is ample justification, and what cannot be advanced from other sections of the country

Reconstruction work has been underway on a big scale in France as the result of the war. The situation has aroused the sympathy of the world and extensive outside assistance has been given. The situation in Ohio does not come anywhere near matching the devastation that was caused by the war, but those in need of assistance in Ohio can depend upon receiving the necessary aid from their fellow citizens quite as much as did those in distress across the water. Enterprising Ohio hasn't as yet considered it necessary to make an appeal to the country, but if that time arises there is no question as to what the answer will be.

THE CHANGED QUOTAS.

The new immigration law has gone into effect with the coming of July. Immigration restriction which has prevailed is not abandoned but is increased. The other countries can continue to send their subjects here but in reduced numbers the quota to be admitted from each country being based upon the number of different nationals in this country according to the census of 1890. This upsets the quotas which have hitherto prevailed and means that fewer from southern and eastern Europe will be admitted. Under the quotas which have been worked out and just announced Germany can send the largest number to this country, its quota being just over 51,000. If the British Isles were lumped their quota would be the largest but as it is divided there are 34,000 from Great Britain and Northern Ireland entitled to admission each year and just over 28,500 from the Irish Free State. These are by far the largest quotas. Sweden has a quota of 9,561, Norway 6,453, Poland 5,982, France 3,954, Italy 3,845, Denmark 2,789, Russia 2,248 and that group of states consisting of Austria, Hungary, Czechoslovakia and Jugoslavia have a total of 5,000. Greece will be permitted to send in 100.

This means a marked reduction from the numbers which have been coming from Russia, Italy and other countries in that part of Europe, but while there is a big cut in the direct quotas there are provisions under the law whereby wives of American citizens will be admitted as well as children under 18. This means that a considerable number in excess of the fixed quotas will come in each year.

The new law marks a decided change from the days when there were no restrictions save meeting the requirements of the immigration laws as to desirability and health standards. It means the placing of a check upon the wholesale flocking to America and unquestionably establishes a restriction that will prove beneficial. There yet remain some needed additions to the law as now in effect but it is not improbable that they will come in time.

RHODE ISLAND SENTIMENT.

While those outside of Rhode Island have been looking on with disgust at the manner in which its senate has been trying to do business, there are reasons to believe that indignation among the people of that state is running high. Not only do they deplore the spectacle that is being made by that branch of the state legislature but they recognize the manner in which the state's business is being sacrificed to indefensible politics.

One bit of evidence that gives indication of the feeling is to be gained from the registration which ended Monday in that state. There are those without property qualifications who are obliged to register in order to participate in elections. Lack of interest is accompanied by a small registration. With interest aroused the registration increases. How it stands at this time is shown by the fact that over 154,500 persons registered, a total that exceeded the record breaking registration of four years ago by over 12,500.

These registrants do not represent all who can vote at the election next November, but it represents a greater number of those who are obliged to register in order to vote than ever sought the privilege at a single election before. That tells its own story. It gives pretty good evidence of what could be expected to happen if the election in Rhode Island concerning state officials was to be held tomorrow. It indicates what the attitude now is concerning voting next November. The only question is whether between now and that time interest will abate. Conditions in Rhode Island's senate are such, however, that there ought to be no chance of any such thing. Rhode Island voters indicate that it is time to take an interest in their own affairs and go to the polls.

AIR MAIL SERVICE.

Sending mail across country in the air may seem revolutionary but it is only the natural outcome of the progress that has been made in the past decades in aviation. It marks a recognition of the success attained in flying and the application of such a rapid means of delivery to the postal service.

Carrying the mails by airplane is not exactly new. Such a service was previously inaugurated, but at a time when the machines had not been brought to the present stage of perfection and it will be remembered that it was attended by the burning up of much mail matter, the wreckage of a number of machines and the deaths of the aviators.

The time hasn't come when it can be said that there is absolute safety in the air, but it is manifestly much safer to fly today than it ever was before, and the benefit of that is now being obtained for the quick delivery of mail matter.

It was mail that was handed to him in the morning that Lieutenant Maughan delivered in San Francisco the same day on his dawn to dusk flight. Not such rapid crossing of the country is undertaken by the air mail service. There are more stops and somewhat less speed but mail leaving New York this morning will get to San Francisco the evening of the next day. The reduction in hours has been considered desirable in connection with the delivery of mail but this means a reduction by days and the first test gives promise of the permanent establishment of such a service. The air mail service hasn't quite equalled the telegraph and the telephone but it is making a wonderful showing in the cutting down of time and the elimination of distance.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Are you doing your part to keep the Fourth fireless?

Lieutenant Maughan is to fly back to New York, but don't expect him to fly backward.

When President Coolidge talked to the government heads of departments the rest of the country heard and approved.

Former Secretary Houston has the honor of being nominated for the presidency but thus far not getting any votes.

The man on the corner says: The pennant race is for the time being overshadowed by the New York guessing contest.

There will be plenty hustling to clinch onto the bandwagon just as soon as the time is ripe and the wagon has been selected.

Hayti wants the league to help it shake the American marines out of the republic. Hayti is never satisfied unless involved in trouble.

J. Hamilton Lewis says the New York convention is ruled by a mob. Is that why there are those who say New York will never get another convention?

When it concerned the planks of the platform William Jennings Bryan did some praying. When it came to candidates he did some preaching. What next?

Wretched is the condition of Laurel Hill road within the city limits. The filling of the holes would afford some relief and possibly prevent some expense bills.

HELPFUL ADVICE

"Gee!" said the small boy at the family dinner table. "It was awful funny the way Mr. Hashbrown fell out on the street just now. I nearly died laughing and everybody laughed except Mr. Hashbrown. He had a big bundle under one arm and he had a satchel in the other hand and when his feet struck the piece of ice he just slid around in a regular circle and his feet went right back over his head until they hit the ground just as easy. It looked so funny!"

"If I ever catch you laughing over an accident like that I'll take you out into the woodshed and tan your hide. If I can find a woodshed," promised the small boy's father severly. "Did you try to help him?"

"Oh, no!" the small boy admitted wide-eyed. "You see, I was laughing so hard I couldn't get my breath even if I had wanted to help to him! His satchel spilled open and his bundle broke and—"

"This gets worse all the time!" declared the father of the small boy in despair. "I had no idea you were such a young savage. If I neglected to nip this tendency in the bud you would grow up to be like lots of grown persons who are tickled to death at the sufferings of other people."

"Gee!" the small boy broke in, trying to suppress a grin, "I'll bet Mr. Hashbrown had a lotta suffering, the way he hit the sidewalk! His face got red and—"

"I don't want to hear any more about it!" ordered the father of the small boy. "I want you to stop thinking how funny it was and consider how hard-hearted you are! It is a remarkable thing to me that humanity has progressed no farther than it has!

"I remember to this day the disgraceful mirth and jollity which prevailed back home on the occasion when old Jeph Boots stepped in the molasses on Main street. Jeph was not at all popular. He was the kind of man who always was taking his cane to small boys and stray dogs, and who consistently hated everything that other people liked. No matter what happened in that town there were always two parties—the population of the village on one side and Jeph on the other. He had neither a smile nor a kind word for any human being, and if he hadn't owned most of the town I guess they would have ridden him out on a rail.

"It happedel one day that the town truck was hauling a load of stuff and a barrel of molasses fell off the end, right at the postoffice crossing, and split. They gathered up the barrel, but there was a large pool of molasses left, and when Jeph came along his eyesight was rather poor, and, besides, six persons yelled at him, to stop, so, of course, he had to keep right on. Jeph carried a cane, his bundle of shirts from the Chinaman, a five-pound sack of flour and a vocabulary.

"One foot stuck and then the other. He yanked one up hard and left his shoe in the sticky sea and when he put that foot down he lost his balance and landed with both hands in the stuff and on his knees. The shirts fell upon its oozing surface and the bag of flour burst and sprinkled around and Jeph stuck again trying to get up and rolled over in the mess. All business stopped on the street and the curbs were lined with people with their mouths wide open and holding their sides. People came running for blocks and fought to get a better view.

"There Jeph was in the center of the stage, all by himself, using his complete vocabulary, struggling in the molasses and flour. If he got one hand loose he dropped in a foot and the hardware store man fractured a rib when he twisted about suddenly to grab a telegraph pole to support his heaving form, Jeph—"

"I sh'd think," said the interested small boy, still wide eyed, "that by this time you would a got Jeph up and his things picked up! You were there, wasn't you, papa?"

The father of the small boy stopped so suddenly he bit his tongue. He coughed hard behind his napkin and looked at his watch. "You hurry right on now and get those lessons," he said very sternly. "You've wasted enough time as it is! There's just no use talking to you."—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Texts to Refute Statement.

Mr. Editor: In the issue of The Bulletin this morning these words form a sermon by Mr. Rice of The Bible Students association, met my eye: "The truth is Jesus is not God nor a third part of God."

Now I do not pretend to be a great scholar or theologian, but in a few minutes' time there was sufficient Scripture came surging into my mind to refute this statement, both in regard to Christ as God and also in regard to the Trinity. First, let us look at a few texts to show that Jesus is God. John's Gospel 1:1 reads: In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

Verse 2. The same was in the beginning with God (two persons, both God).

Verse 3. All things were made by him; and without him—the Word—was not any thing made that was made.

Now by referring to Genesis we find that God created the heaven and the earth and by following through the chapter find God created everything that was created at that time. But in referring to the 26th verse we find there were two persons, but one God. Now remember the statement in John 1: The Word (Jesus) was with God. Now turn to the first chapter of Hebrews and read the first ten verses. The last clause of the second verse reads "by whom (Christ) also he made the worlds. In verse three we find (God the speaker) Jesus the express image of his—the Father's—person. Now this makes plain the 26th verse of Genesis one, "Let us make man in our image."

Now as you read the tender loving words which the Father addresses to his beloved son you come to the eighth verse and read these amazing lines, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom. Read also verses 9 and 10 and remember God is addressing his son Jesus. How beautiful those words of the Father to the Son whom He delivered up for all mankind.

In Isa. 7:14 are these words: Behold a virgin shall conceive and bear a son and call his name Immanuel. In refering to Matt. 1:23, we find the name Emmanuel being interpreted is, God with us. In Isaiah 9:6, the prophet in referring to Jesus says: His name shall be called Wonderful, Counseller, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace.

Now in regard to the Trinity we will say just a little, for we have taken up so much space already.

In 2nd Peter 1:21, we read, Holy men of old (prophets) spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost."

In Hebrews 1:1, we find God spake through the prophets. Read also 2nd Tim. 3:16.

In 1st Peter 1: 10, 11, we find that it was the Spirit of Christ which testified in the prophets. So we find that God, the Holy Ghost and Christ were one, speaking through the prophets.

These texts of scripture do not exhaust the proofs but are. I think sufficient for this letter for I fear it is already too long.

The Salvation Army Appeal.

Mr. Editor: With the Salvation Army appeal short only $500 to the fulfilment of its complete quota it may not be amiss to say a word about the man and woman who have been a very important factor in raising the Salvation Army home service fund in our city, and on whom devolves the carrying on of the charitable work of this institution during the coming year.

Commandant E. W. Wilbur and Mrs. Wilbur are in charge of the Salvation Army in our city for the third time, having been in charge here for a period of four years about 13 years ago, with the rank of captain. In 1916 Commandant and Mrs. Wilbur again took charge in our city for a period of nine months after which time they were transferred to the Boston district. With the building of the fine Salvation Army quarters of our city, by the public spirited contributions of our people, the officials of the Salvation Army felt that the proper leaders were needed to carry out the spiritual and charitable work in that building and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur were again put in charge in Norwich with the rank of Commandant and Mrs. Wilbur.

Both Commandant and Mrs. Wilbur possess an unbounded faith in the good work which they are doing. In performing their duty they are true to God and to the unfortunate who are in need of their assistance. They are possessed of a divine patience and untiring perseverance in their work, being ready to answer to any call at all hours of the day and night. No hardship dampens their ardor in their constancy to their faith and their loving kindness for their fellow man. These characteristics assure the people of our city that the sacrifices which they have made first in raising the building towards its cost and now in contributing maintenance is money the noblest kind of civic invested for good, and for the assistance of those whom their offering will reclaim to manhood and womanhood and to good citizenship.

Many of our citizens interested in seeing the home service fund go over the top, stop Commandant Wilbur on the street, inquiring about the prospects of raising the additional $500 needed to complete the quota and many encouraging promises are made to see the drive brought to a consummation.

George Finn, the chairman of the appeal, is untiring in his effort to fulfill his promise and bring the drive over the top. Mr. Finn's sincerity knows no bounds and all his friends are fired by his enthusiasm and will surely give a strong pull and a pull all together to help him fulfill his promise.

Captain Wilbur relates an incident that happened yesterday which made a great impression upon his heart. A poor lady very much crippled walking with the assistance of two canes, came to the Salvation Army headquarters on Cliff street, and with tears in her eyes offered her dollar bill to help the Army go over the top. The captain was loath to accept this kind sacrifice but the poor lady insisted that her little mite should also go towards this good cause. She expressed the sentiment that she was only sorry that she could not make her contributions much larger. This noble spirit of sacrifice by the people of our town has made its impression upon the soul of our good captain and his wife and they feel that no amount of sacrifice on their part is too much for the very fine citizens of Norwich.

Commandant Wilbur expresses himself as being a man of faith and that he trusts to the nobleness of those of our people who have not contributed to bring in their belated contributions to the army headquarters on Cliff street, or to George Finn, Bankers Trust Co., Norwich, Conn.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Joseph Caillaux, who has again become a conspicuous figure in French politics, thanks to the influence gained through the votes of the radical socialists, has had a stormy career since he first entered public life as a member of the chamber of deputies some 25 years ago. The honor and power that go with the premiership have been his. Likewise, he has been accused as a traitor, convicted and exiled on a charge of having plotted against the external security of the state. M. Caillaux is a native of Mons. Revenue inspector and professor in the Ecole des Sciences Politiques, he became a deputy for Mamers in 1898. He held the finance portfolio in the Waldeck Rousseau, Clemenceau, and Monis cabinets and became president of the Council in 1911. Later in the same year he was made premier. During the war he paid visits to Argentina and to Italy, where he was accused of communicating with German agents. For two years he was imprisoned in Paris awaiting trial. The charge of treason was finally dismissed and he was tried and convicted on a charge of communicating with the enemy.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

RHODES

"Rhodes—the city and island of the Colossus."

"So," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society, "ideas follow one another in most minds whenever Rhodes is mentioned; proving that one of the greatest of modern industries, advertising, has its roots in antiquity. For this 'civic monument' of Rhodes stood only 56 years, yet it advertised the city so well that it has identified Rhodes for twenty centuries since it fell."

"The bulletin goes on to describe this island in the eastern Mediterranean Sea, scene of a recent concentration of Italian troops.

"One way of orienting Rhodes geographically is to describe it as the largest of the Lodecanese Islands. It is the most eastward of the great group of isles and islets that peppers the Aegean Sea. Farther eastward in the Mediterranean lie only tiny coastal islets, like Kasteloriso, and the one big island, Cyprus. Of all the islands east of the Grecian peninsula only Cyprus and Crete exceed Rhodes in size.

"Rhodes was in the favored location of its day, at the crossing of the marine highways between Byzantium, Greece and Italy on the one hand, and on the other Egypt, southeastern Asia Minor and Syria, gateway to the east. Inevitably a great maritime and commercial community grew up on Rhodes; it took the torch of Mediterranean commerce from Phoenicia to pass it on later to Byzantium, Rome, Genoa and Venice. It seems natural enough to find old Greek and Roman historians referring literally to the Rhodes of the third and second centuries before Christ as 'the distributing center of the Levant. It would hardly be surprising in view of this familiar phraseology to find 'letterheads' of the Rhodian Chamber of Commerce of that day with the truthful enough slogan: 'Rhodes' trade territory is the world.' Rhodes was a world center in still another way, for in the days of Ptolemy the geographer, it was taken as the initial point for longitude as Greenwich is today.

"As a result of Rhodes' dominant commercial position, its laws and coinage were the standards of their day throughout the Mediterranean. The Rhodians, too, were colonizers and planted their stations on the shores of Asia Minor, Africa, Greece, Italy and even Spain.

"Incident after incident crops up in Rhodian history to tie Rhodes to the ways to today. Like Washington, the city of Rhodes was laid out on its establishment in 408 B. C. according to an ordered plan, by an architectural engineer—Hippodamus of Miletus. The the new city was given a sort of 'commission form' of government consisting of a group of six executives. When Rhodes was destroyed by earthquake in 227 B. C., it received the practical sympathy of its world as Tokyo did in 1923; relief funds were sent from all the Hellenic states to repair the damage. Even the Great Colossus was a 'victory statue,' made of enemy catapults and other war engines—the 'gun-metal' of the day.

"Perhaps the most picturesque era in Rhodes' history was from 1309 to 1523 when it was the stronghold of the crusading Knights of St. John and the bulwark of Christendom against the Moslems. The old Greek city had practically disappeared when the Knights came and they built anew: great moats and walls, bastions and towers, and staunch stone dwellings. They evacuated the city to the Turks in 1523, but the deep marks their two centuries of occupancy left remain today. It is doubtful if in all Europe is to be found a more perfect example of a European fortified city of the 15th century than is to be seen in Rhodes, geographically and climatically the quintessence of the Near East.

In the city's main thoroughfare, the Street of the Knights, are the same fine old windows, even if most of them are disfigured by superimposed lattices to shield harem ladies from unauthorized view. Built into the walls of the old knights' residences are the coats-of-arms of some of the most famous noble families of Europe.

"No trace of Rhodes' famous Colossus remains today. This bronze statue, more than a hundred feet high, which ranked as one of the seven wonders of the world, was toppled over by an earthquake in 224 B. C. The pieces lay where they had fallen for nearly 900 years when a more ignominous fate overtook them. They were sold to a junk dealer."

Stories That Recall Others

Thanks, Judge!

A young man sat in a room where the justice was holding court, fingering the lapel of his coat collar waiting for the judge to sentence him for speeding. After a brief deliberation the justice said, "Ten dollars."

"Thanks, judge," said the young man, "I've got that right in my pocket."

"And ninety days," continued the justice. "Perhaps you've got that in your pocket."

Why Don't They

She is a business woman and in the spinster class too. And, she resents the pitying way people have of saying "old maid" when they speak of some in her class.

The other evening the man before her was introduced as "the town's most popular bachelor."

Then she arose. "I'm not married either," she said, "but when you speak of me as an old maid I want you to give it the same spicy twist as you do 'bachelor' when you speak of that unmarried man."

A girl isn't necessarily an angel because she is flighty.

Hergesheimer's Years of Failure.

Handicapped by illness in boyhood and then by "an incurable aversion to study," Joseph Hergesheimer suddenly conceived a burning ambition to be a novelist and paid the penalty of his unpreparedness by fourteen years of effort before he was able to sell a single story.

Philadelphia was his birthplace in 1880. He attended the Quaker school and the Pennsylvania academy of Fine Arts, doing "one day's work in fifteen," as he confesses. At 21 he inherited "a satisfactory sum" and spent much of it in Italy. He fitted out a gondola and let life slip away luxuriously on the canals of Venice. When he landed in New York a year or two later he had no plans for the future.

At a summer resort he met a "lady novelist," who persuaded him to correct her proofs. She superintended the work and smoked cigarettes. It looked easy; he thought he could do as well, and he secluded himself in the country, armed only with a typewriter and some reams of white paper. He wrote to suit himself, and his story came back with a formal rejection slip. That was the beginning of countless refusals. The editors demanded "more optimism, more vitality, more action." With little education, he had to learn the literary art as he went along, and it baffled him at every turn.

Finally one of his books was published. One thousand copies were to be exempt from royalties—and just 900 were sold. It was a hard blow, but the very fact that at last he had a publisher gave him hope. "The Lay Anthony" made its bow to a callous public when he was 34. "Mountain Blood," out in 1915, found the world still indifferent. "The Three Black Pennys" made a stir in 1917, and "Gold and Iron," the next year, won him many readers. "Java Head," in 1919, gained him world-wide fame and the long-sought popularity. Since then he has written four novels, the most famous being "Linda Condon," which the critics call his best.

POETRY

JULY.

When the scarlet cardinal tells
Her dreams to the dragon fly,
And the lazy breeze makes a nest in the trees
And murmurs a lullaby,
It is July.

When the tangled cobweb pulls
The cornflower's cap away,
And the lilies tall lean over the wall,
To bow to the butterfly,
It is July.

When the heat like a mist veil floats
And popies flame in the rye,
And the silver note in the streamlet's throat
Has softened almost to a sigh,
It is July.

When the hours are so still that time
Forgets them and lets them lie
'Neath petals pink till the night stars wink
At the sunset in the sky,
It is July.

—Susan Hartley Swett.

SPRING BALM.

Blame old winter time's a-leavin'
An' I'm glad to see it go
Tired a-sittin' by the fireside
Lookin' out at frost an' snow;
Tired a-plannin' for the future;
Tired a-dreamin' of the past;
Want to get out by the river
There to soothe my weary soul
With the health' balm that's hidin'
In my good old fishin' pole.

There's a tonic in a fishpole
That no doctor's pillbags hold;
O, I thrill through all my bein'
Like a song that angels sing
An' I'm pretty close to heaven
With my fishpole in the spring;
So I'm glad when winter's leavin'
I can doctor up my soul
With the health' balm that's hidin'
In my good old fishin' pole.

The Kaibab national forest, on the northern rim of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, is threatened by a small beetle. Just about a quarter of an inch long. This creature is known only by his scientific name of Dendroctonus ponderosa, but he is famous as a destroyer of trees. The Kaibab forest contains 3,000,000,000 feet of standing timber, and is one of the greatest game preserves in the country, extending 25 miles along the canyon rim. The United States forest service has declared war on the beetle, and with the bureau of entomology proposes to spend $35,000 this summer in a campaign of extermination.

Don't blame Larry. He's hiding out with a real Orange-Crush.

Here are six reasons why Orange-Crush is so utterly delicious: (1) The natural fruit oil of oranges—for that delicate and delightful flavor; (2) The natural acid of citrus fruits (oranges, lemons and limes)—to give the tang; (3) Orange juice—which everybody likes; (4) Carbonated water—for "life," sparkle, purity; (5) U. S. Certified food color—to make it as appealing to the eye as to the taste; (6) Pure cane sugar.

COMEDY MADE FEATURE FOR CHAUTAUQUA PROGRAM

A three act comedy, Their Honor The Mayor, made a feature attraction Wednesday night at the Chautauqua tent on the Academy campus where the large audience gave the clever presentation plenty of well deserved applause. The plot is built around the unusual situation of a woman running against her husband as candidate for mayor and the vote coming out a tie. The lines discuss some of the new angles presented by woman's entrance into politics, touching both community issues and the home relations of the woman in politics, with a pretty love story woven into the play, and the whole was very acceptably presented by the following cast, directed by Maroni Olsen.

Lucy, an indispensible domestic ..... Gretchen Comegys
Patricia Cochrane, The Mayor's daughter ..... Dorothy Adams
Norman Parker, Pat's shadow ..... Sumner Chase Cobb
Mrs. Cochrane, The Mayor's wife ..... Janet Young
Mr. Cochrane, The Mayor ..... Maroni Olsen
Dawson, a politician ..... Byron Fouiger
Mrs. Smith-Taylor, a feminene "Webster" ..... Leora Thatcher

The Russian Cathedral Sextette will be on the programme for tonight (Thursday) which closes the Chautauqua here this year.

RAIDERS FIND STORE OF LIQUOR IN SHED AT TAFTVILLE PLACE

A stock of liquor, estimated to have a value of about $3,000, was seized in a raid made Wednesday morning about 11 o'clock on the Le Barre premises of the Rock Spring Soda Water company on Hunter's avenue, Taftville, by Federal Prohibition Agent Joseph C. Fitzpatrick, County Detective William Lewis of New London, County Detective W. E. Jackson of Willimantic and Constable George Hoxie of Lebanon, who worked with a search warrant.

The liquor was found in a small barn or shed on the premises and two men were arrested. Napoleon Le Barre, 32, and Alfred Le Barre, 33, brothers, charged with violation of the liquor law. It is understood that the father of the two men got into an automobile and escaped, driving off into the woods through Mohegan park.

The two men arrested were brought to Norwich police headquarters, where they gave bonds for their appearance in the city court this (Thursday) morning. One of the men denied ownership in the liquor.

The liquor seized by the officers comprised: One quart Bourbon whiskey, one quart Sherwood whiskey, one quart Lewis Hunter rye whiskey, 48 quarts Gordon gin, five quarts Black and White whiskey, two cases of Canadian Club whiskey, 11 quarts old Hyland whiskey, 10 quarts Canadian Club whiskey, one gallon wine, 40 gallons of alcohol.

FINE FOR TRUCK DRIVER IN STONINGTON COURT

Before Judge William A. Wilcox on Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock, in a special session of the Stonington town court appeared Edward J. Gilchrist, 717 Boswell avenue, Norwich, driver of truck 23280 Conn. of the Federal Tea company of Springfield, Mass. Gilchrist was presented on the complaint of Prosecuting Attorney George R. McKenna of the town of Stonington and the warrant alleged the operation of an automobile in a reckless manner, when the width, traffic and use of the highway were taken into consideration, having regard to the width, intersection of highways and condition of the roadbed.

Attorney McKenna stated that the accused was coming down Liberty street driving a heavy car, used for the distribution of tea, just as a car came out of Morgan street, driven by Capt. Louis S. Toutray of Main street, Stonington. At the intersection of the highway the cars were in collision, the car driven by the Stonington man being so badly damaged as to entail a considerable expense for repairs. He said that the accused admitted going a little over 20 miles per hour. After the accident the accused stopped and did what he could to aid the other party. The solicitor recommended a small fine in view of the expense which had been incurred to pay for damage done.

Judge Wilcox, on the defendant's plea of guilty, so found him and sentenced him to pay the minimum fine of $25 and costs of $14.50, amounting to $39.50, which was paid and the defendant discharged. Patrolman Francis McMahon, who served the summons, acted as court officer.

WILL KEEP FIREWORKS OFF THE STATE ROADS

As a means of safeguarding travel on the highways on the Fourth of July, a warning was issued Wednesday by the state highway department that no bonfires or use of fireworks of any kind would be tolerated on or adjoining the state roads on that day. This step is taken to prevent unnecessary hazards being placed in the path of the heavy automobile traffic that is expected on the roads on the holiday.

The department feels that with large numbers of families using the highways during the holiday period, it is necessary to curb the activities of celebrators who select the roads or the property adjoining them for their activities with fireworks. Otherwise, it is felt that the lives of many would be placed in jeopardy, chiefly through the danger of gasoline explosions.

All efforts will be made to prevent such occurrences, and particular attention will be paid to those who attempt to carry on fireworks demonstrations from automobiles traversing the roadways. The department wishes to emphasize the need for co-operating by all motorists in this connection, as the danger is one that can be avoided.

GREENEVILLE RECTOR ORDAINED AT BETHEL

Ordination to priesthood in the Episcopal church was conferred upon Rev. Leonard E. W. Mitchell, of St. Andrew's church, Norwich, a former Bethel man, in St. Thomas' church in Bethel, Fairfield county, Monday. There was a large attendance, including parishioners from St. Andrew's church in Norwich.

The ordination of Mr. Mitchell to the deaconhood took place in the Bethel church last June. Monday's service admitting him to the priesthood is said to be the first of its kind ever held in that church.

The service opened with morning prayer said by the rector, Rev. Donald W. Greene, assisted by Mr. Mitchell. The ordination service followed. The litany was said by Rev. Alexander Hamilton of Norwalk. Rev. Kenneth Mackenzie of Westport, read the epistle, and Rev. M. George Thompson, D. D., of Greenwich, read the gospel. These clergymen, in addition to the Ven. F. S. Morehouse, of Shelton, Rev. H. C. Dyer, of Bridgeport, and Rev. D. W. Greene, of Bethel, assisted Rt. Rev. Chauncey B. Brewster, D. D., bishop of the diocese of Connecticut, in the laying on of hands. The bishop's personal attendant during the service was Rev. L. M. Bruestar, of New Haven.

The ordination sermon was delivered by Rev. John J. Skene, of Norwalk.

Luncheon was served to sixty guests in the parish house at 1 o'clock. Bishop Brewster was toastmaster and, following the luncheon, called upon Rev. Mr. Mitchell, the Ven. F. S. Morehouse, Rev. Dr. M. George Thompson, Rev. Kenneth Mackenzie and Rev. D. W. Greene; all responded with brief addresses. A number of Mr. Mitchell's parishioners from Greeneville were present and presented him a substantial purse.

Rev. Mr. Mitchell will celebrate his first communion at St. Thomas' church, Bethel, next Sunday morning.

ZEMKE PITCHES BRILLIANT GAME AS RIVERVIEW BEATS SUB BASE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, July 2.—The Submarine Base opened its baseball season this afternoon at the Base grounds opposing the fast Riverview baseball club of the State Hospital. For nine innings one of the prettiest pitching duels was on and only for an error the game would have gone into extra innings. The Base lost, the final score being 2 to 1 count against them. But while going down in defeat they showed those who attended the game that this team will have to be reckoned with in the near future.

With all the necessary pomp and ceremony that usually travels hand in hand with opening games, Commander King of the Submarine Base threw out the opening ball. The duel was on and Lefty Harrell occupied the mound for the subs while for the Hospital, Roy started but was yanked in the sixth in favor of Zemke after he had filled the bases on two walks and an infielder hit. Both the Riverview twirlers allowed four hits, the Riverview batters touching up Lefty Harrell to the same numbed. Those hits made by the visitors were bunched to more advantage than those made by the sailors.

Brilliant work in the field behind the masterly pitching of the rival twirlers, had the fans on edge at times. Probably the most talked of individual this evening is Wee Eddie Burns. Eddie was here there and everywhere cutting off hits and in other ways making himself useful to the State Hospital cause. He made two stops of balls in back of second base, but could not get his man either time or he was off balance. His stickwork was also good, making two safe blows in four trips to the plate, half of the Riverview total. Mills drove in the tying run with a single in the third, while Keel's double in the fifth brought in the winning score.

There is room for little doubt in the minds of the fans who attended the contest, that it was a lucky thing that the Riverview manager switched pitchers in the sixth inning after the bases were populated due to a sudden streak of wildness by Roy. Zemke toed the slab with this trying situation confronting him and immediately after taking possession of the mound, he broke up an attempt squeeze play and then struck out the next two batters to face him. He was master of the situation for the remainder of the contest and no more trouble was caused for the visiting outfit. Credit for winning this game is really due him.

The Base scored first on a base on balls to Orsi, a sacrifice and Crompton's single to right. In the third the visitors tied up the contest after Couillard had been given two bases on an overthrow of his grounder to Moore. A sacrifice by Noel and Mills' single brought in the run that deadlocked the two teams at one run all. The fifth inning brought the second and winning run on C. Moore's error of D. Moore's throw, a sacrifice by Couillard and Keel's double.

In the eighth inning, Dinty Moore of the Base pulled the trapped ball trick upon Noel and Mills. Couillard was on third as a result of an error of his hit by D. Moore, and Noel reached first when his grounder was juggled by Moore. On the first ball pitched Mills hit a short fly to D. Moore who trapped it and threw to Hawes at second, who threw to first completing a double play.

Hawes and D. Burnes both had busy day of it. Hawes accepted ten chances with out an error, while Burns accepted the same amount of chances but slipped up twice. The Score:

STRIBLING-GREB FIGHT NOT TO BE HELD AT MICHIGAN CITY

Michigan City, Ind., July 2.—William F. C. Dall, mayor of Michigan City, today notified the Arena Boxing and Athletic club, Inc., that the Young Stribling-Harry Greb boxing contest and other matches scheduled for July 4 in the open air arena here cannot be held until the ban is lifted on the smallpox quarantine in the adjacent state of Michigan, which he said will be two weeks at least.

MISS WILLS TO BATTLE MISS McKANE FOR TITLE

Wimbledon, England, July, 2.—(By the Associated Press)—All of the events in the Wimbledon Tennis championship tournament reached the semi-final stage today and the woman's singles were carried up to the finals through the retirement of Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, world's champion, because of illness, and the victory of Miss Helen M. Wills, the American star, over Mrs. Phyllis Satterthwaite of Great Britain 6-2, 6-1 in the last but one match which the American champion must win in order to capture the title which has been held since the war by the superb Frenchwoman.

When Mlle. Lenglen's resignation upon doctor's orders was announced last night, it was added that her physician had told her to go to bed and stay there, but she bobbed up in the competitor's stand this afternoon, remaining there watching the play on the center court from first match to almost the last one.

As a result of the French player's retirement, the long hearided encounter between Mlle. Lenglen and Miss Wills will not take place at Wimbledon and the American girl will meet Miss Kathleen McKane in the final encounter Friday.

Two American teams reached the semi-finals in the men's doubles this afternoon. In the upper half R. Norris Williams II, and Watson M. Washburn defeated Charles H. Kingsley and J. C. Masterman and will meet the Alonso Brothers of Spain in the next to the last round. In the lower half Vincent Richards and Francis T. Hunter beat Max Woosman and J. D. P. Wheatley of Great Britain and will meet Louis Raymond and P. D. B. Spence of South Africa in the semi-finals. Thus, there is a possibility that the final round will be an all-American affair.

There is no such possibility in any of the other events, however, as Williams is the sole surviving American in the men's singles and both of the American teams remaining in the ladies' double are in the lower half of the draw and will oppose each other in the semi-final round.

Sterling Wins Game From Hardigs

Sterling journeyed to Norwich last Sunday and they defeated the Hardigs 8 to 5, at the fairgrounds. Sterling put the game on ice in the early innings. The Hardigs never stood a chance. Shippee on shortstop for Sterling was the shining light of both teams his 4 hits out of 5 trips to the plate and his fielding was a feature. In all Sterling played rings around the Hardigs. The Sterling team has a few open dates which they would like to book with any team in the surrounding towns.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch, Fordham, New York Giants

There is a fast runner on third base. What player should advise the pitcher if this man attempts to steal home?

The majority of teams have their captain, as he is usually an infielder, walk up to the pitcher when such a man is on third base and tell him to be careful and not let the runner take too big a lead off third. It also helps if the catcher occasionally throws the ball down to third base, as that will tend to keep the runner close to the bag. The infielders should watch such a runner and shout to the pitcher if he shows an inclination to take a lead when the pitcher is unable to watch him.

TOLLEY WINS FROM HAGEN IN CLOSE MATCH FOR FRENCH OPEN CROWN

La Boulie, France, July 2.—(By the Associated Press)—Outplaying a fine international field including the pick of French and American professional stars, Cyril Tolley, former British amateur titleholder, sprang one of the biggest sensations of the season today by capturing the French open golf championship with the brilliant score of 290 for the 72-hole test over the difficult La Boulie course.

Shooting his best golf today in the finals 36 holes despite a rainstorm which deluged the links, the long hitting British crack decisively conquered his professional rivals, finishing three strokes ahead of Walter Hagen, the American professional and newly crowned British open champion whose remarkable 69 of the last round was not able to overcome Tolley's lead.

Hagen's spectacular bid to capture two open crowns in a row contrasted with the debacle of his countryman, Gene Sarazen who, after leading the field in the first day's play with a score of 144, collapsed this morning, taking 88 which included a total of 9 for the first hole, and finishing fourteenth with a total of 307 although he made a good finish this afternoon with a round of 75.

Hagen tossed away his chance for victory on the outward nine holes this morning, taking 40 to the turn, including sixes at the first, fourth and seventh holes and losing eight strokes on this stretch to Tolley.

The American's final round, typical of his fighting finishes, was one under par and the best round of the tournament, but it came too late to save the day for him. Hagen's score was made and it was only four strokes short of the course record held by Aubrey Boomer, the 1923 open champion, who finished fourth today with 297, two strokes behind his countryman, Lafitte.

WHITEHILL WINS PITCHING DUEL FROM CONNOLLY

RAIN HALTS WORK OF OLYMPIC ATHLETES

Paris, July 2.—(By The A. P.)—Rain and official functions combined today to put the training of the American Olympic athletes into the background temporarily. The first bad weather encountered since the team left the United States kept all but the swimmers idle most of the day, while a formal luncheon tendered by the American Olympic committee to a notable assemblage of international Olympic authorities and other prominent personages, including Marshal Foch, at Rocquencourt gave the social activities precedence over the athletic preparations.

So completely did the formal gathering occupy the scene at Rocquencourt that the team's dining quarters were taken over to provide for 250 guests, the athletes being sent to Versailles for luncheon. Colonel Thompson welcomed Marshal Foch and the Olympic officials of all nations, including Baron De Coubertin, president of the International committee.

The track and field squad appeared in excellent condition after yesterday's hard workout, and Coach Robertson was satisfied to give the men only light exercise, to avoid stiffness. He plans to resume hard training tomorrow, taking most of the men for practice to a track just out side the Colombes stadium, where the Finns, who evidently believe in the theory of interrupted hard work, again went through their paces today.

The Americans are not the only team to be handicapped by injuries. According to information reaching the American heads coach, the British distance runner Cottrell, who was counted on the score in the 5,000 and 10,000 metre events, was badly hurt in an acident just before the British trials and was therefore eliminated from competition, while Guy Butler, of Oxford a 400-metre star, is suffering from an injured tedon. A further misfortune has happened to the Britons, Coach Robertson says he has been informed, through the disqualification as an amateur of Griffiths, a half-miler because he had accepted compensation for a race eight year ago.

The swimmers at Les Tourelles held trials to determine the entries in the several events, which close tomorrow. Mariechen Wehselau, the young Hawaiian girl, sprang a surprise by conquering Gertrude Ederle, the world's record holder, at 100 metres, free style. Miss Ederle finished third, being beaten also by Ethel Laskie of Chicago. The time of the winner was 1 minute 12 4-5 seconds, which bettered the Olympic record by two 2-5 seconds and was only 3-5 seconds short of Miss Ederle's world mark.

Elizabeth Becker, Atlantic City, clinched a place in the women's high diving, beating out Aima Mann of Panama in competition for the third entry place.

BELMAR WINS FEATURT IN STRAIGHT HEATS

North Randall, Cleveland, July 2.—(By the A. P.)—For the second consecutive year the Ohio stake, for 2.08 trotters, goes to Memphis, Tennessee. It was won today by Belmar, owned by Taylor and Bowman, and driven by "Sandy" Taylor of that city. Last year Fred Edman drove his Favonian to the front in the $5,000 classic.

Belmar was almost overlooked by the bettors, Tom Murphy's highly touted Trumpet being a heavily played favorite, but he could do nothing. Belmar raced in the front ranks in both heats and withstood all challengers' rushes. Marmaduke, a half-brother of Belmar, won the consolation mile. Close finishes featured the racing.

2.16 class pacing, purse $1200 (elimination pl.)—(two divisions, all except first five in each eliminated from third heat. Only heat winners started in fourth):

FRANK A. COMSTOCK'S HORSES KILLED IN MYSTERIOUS WAY AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, July 3—A pair of heavy team horses owned by Frank A. Comstock, 730 Williams street, was either driven to their death or were accidentally killed last night or early this morning. This afternoon the animals were found dead at the foot of Evergreen mountain, in the vicinity of Gallows lane.

Mr. Comstock had the horses put out to pasture last evening and shortly before noon he discovered the animals missing. Being unable to locate them, he reported the horses as having been stolen to the New London police and to the state police at the Groton barracks. About 4 o'clock, while Comstock and two state police officers were searching in the vicinity of the foot of the mountain, the two animals were found dead, side by side, the beasts having either been driven over the 45-foot precipice or else they strayed there in the darkness and fell down the incline to their death. The state police are inclined to the belief that the horses strayed to their death, but horsemen in general believe that the animals would have detected the danger spot if they approached it either than by being driven, for horses are keen of scent, and it is contended would have scented the opening at the top. An investigation will be started tomorrow in an endeavor to determine whether the animals came to their death through a malicious and wanton act or whether they strayed over the mountain top while walking about.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Farren, 340 Montauk avenue, are entertaining Miss Barbara Penfield from Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Brunner, Washington, D. C., formerly of New London, at which time Mr. Brunner was employed on New London newspapers, are visiting Mrs. Brunner's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Hammond, of Stonington.

The wedding of Robert W. Young of Waltham, Mass., and Miss Florence Tourjee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Tourjee, 86 Blydenburg avenue, will take place at the home of Miss Tourjee's parents next Tuesday evening.

Pioneer Hose company of Groton was called out last night to subdue a grass blaze in one of the coal sheds of the Groton Coal company, off Thames street. The fire is believed to have originated through youths discharging firecrackers.

Jacob Decker of West Mystic and Mrs. Raymond Peabody of Waterford were patients discharged at Home Memorial hospital today.

Edwin F. Steward, 75, of Waterford, died last night at a New London private hospital. He had been in ill health many months. Mr. Steward was a lifelong resident of Waterford and had been employed many years as caretaker of cottages at Pleasure Beach. He is survived by a brother, Marcus M. Steward.

Funeral services for James N. Watrous were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at his residence, Station 20, Waterford. Rev. George H. Strouse officiated. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

The funeral of Mrs. Alice R. Westfall, widow of John W. Westfall, was held this morning at 9:45 o'clock at her home, 177 Pequot avenue. The services were conducted by Rev. Myron E. Genter, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. The body was forwarded to Mrs. Westfall's former home in America, N. Y., where burial will take place tomorrow.

Miss Hannah Fitzgerald has returned to her home in Waterbury, concluding a month's visit with friends in this city.

George E. Batting, Crystal avenue, is in Plymouth, Mass., where he is being entertained by his brother, John Batting.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac S. Browne have completed a week's visit with relatives and friends in New York for several days.

Rocco Mazur, a peddler, and his son Nannie, aged about 13, residing at 164 Main street, were painfully injured late this afternoon when thrown from a wagon when the horse ran away and crashed into a hydrant on Bliss street. Mazur and his son sustained considerable bruises and are now under treatment at Home Memorial hospital. They were driving through Hempstead street when boys exploding firecrackers caused the animal to take fright. Turning into Bliss street, the animal did not reduce its speed and at the corner of Colt street the cart collided with a fire hydrant. Mazur and the boy were thrown from the wagon and the animal was knocked down.

Sunday night a party of Elks will go to Boston to attend the grand lodge session. New London has seventeen past exalted rulers who are entitled to seats in the lodge session. Probably more than half that number will be in attendance. Many other members of New London lodge will be in Boston during the week the lodge is holding its meeting.

Patrolman Hammond in making his rounds on the east side of Bank street this evening had occasion to go to the rear of the buildings behind the Cheney-Packer market. He discovered a lot of fire traps that are a menace to all surrounding property. Officer Hammond found the rear windows of buildings covered simply by wire screens that might be pushed out of place or torn out with the hands, and conditions generally were such as to attract burglars. Even the entrances to the rear of these places were not protected with gates.

Because of the large number of sailors given liberty every night, the navy authorities are maintaining a patrol about the principal streets and at places of amusement until midnight each night. To date there has not been any disorder, but with payday occurring the 5th inst., and also a holiday on the Fourth, the naval authorities are determined to prevent any disorders that might arise.

It has not been determined the exact amount of money which New London lodge of Elks will realize from its charity bazaar, which was conducted at Plant field last week. The committee in charge of the affair, it is expected, will announce the figures early next week and it is probable that the profits will exceed $10,000.

The lease of the stores, 68 and 70 State street, occupied at present by the Liberty restaurant and Sinclair & Little company, respectively, by the Kresge company, has not been filed in the office of the city clerk. The lease, it is known, is in the course of preparation and will be filed for record within a few days at which time the duration of the lease, together with the annual rental of the property will be made known. These facts would be obtainable at this time but for the fact that Belton A. Cobb, Groton, agent of the property, gave assurance to the representative of the Kresge company that no details of the lease would be made known to the public by the agent.

There is no change today in the condition of Mrs. Hilda Kallstrom, 40 Gorton street, aged woman, who was struck by a public service automobile Sunday night at the corner of Blydenburg and Ocean avenue. But little hope is entertained for her recovery.

Revenue cutter Walter Q. Gresham, which has been scouring Block Island, Fishers Island and Long Island sounds many weeks in an endeavor to round up the great number of launches that are constantly receiving supplies of liquor from the fleet of foreign craft off "Rum Row" put into the harbor last night and will remain here a day or two before returning to the location of the operations of the rum-runners. Since the cutter Seminole was withdrawn from duty several weeks ago for repairs the rum-runners have not been molested although New York patrol launches are still on duty in the sound, but are not making any captures.

George Congdon, 53, employed by the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Wrecking company, Pequot avenue, and residing in Niantic, suffered a painful injury this morning when he lost the little toe of his right foot. Congdon was hewing a large piece of lumber and was using a broadaxe. The implement slipped from his grasp and landed in such a manner as to amputate the toe. He was given emergency treatment and then removed to Lawrence hospital.

Edwin Keeney, one of the oldest residents of New London, is seriously ill from infirmities attending old age, at his residence, 28 Pearl street. Mr. Keeney is 93.

The funeral of John Young was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at his residence, 21 Pearl street. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Members of Mohegan lodge, I. O. O. F., acted as bearers and members of the organization conducted the committal ritual in Jordan cemetery.

David B. Clark has sold a dwelling on Avery court to Raymond D. Smith.

Viggo E. Bird, manager of the Connecticut Power company, operated his automobile to the parking space on Meridian street last night and while the owner absented himself a thief ransacked the car, stealing five golf sticks. The theft was reported to the police this morning.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Stoeckel today caused the operators' licenses of Alfred Braro, Navy street, Edward Schinman, 78 West Colt street and Ernest Husman, 546 Main street, to be suspended. There is no such name as "Braro" in the New London city directors, nor is there such a street as "Navy" street. It is believed that Braro is either an enlisted man at the submarine base or that he resides in some other city than New London.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Donohue, superintendent and matron, respectively at Hillside home, returned to New London late yesterday, having spent several weeks in Ireland and England.

Last Sunday Ralph Harris, a barber, shaved a patron of his shop who could not get into the shop the night before, and though he did not accept any pay for the job, jealous competitors in the business, passing the barber establishment saw the work going on and complained to the police. Harris was reported to appear in the police station, but the prosecutor, when he heard the facts, did not deem the offense one that should be punished and did not present the case in court. Barber competitors of Harris have made life miserable fo rhim through jealousy. They have induced barbers who were in his employ to quit their work and have prevented him from getting other workmen for some time. He was driven from the union by the same men who are still pursuing him, but he seems to be more prosperous than ever. The same barbers who are pursuing Harris have entered complaint against another barber because he is alleged to have done some work on Sunday at his home or elsewhere. The barbers who have been annoyed claim that there is abundant reason for complaining of offenses against the laws of the city, but they hold that there are no officials whose duty it is to attend to violators and they refuse to mix into such matters.

A couple of residents of John street were in the police court today where one accused the other of having stolen $7 from him. There was no evidence whatever to show that the accusation was based on fact. Indeed the evidence was such that both men were prosecuted for intoxication and each was convicted and fined $3. In one other case of intoxication a fine of $10 was imposed, but the execution of judgment was suspended for six months and the probation officer will see that the convicted man reports regularly. A fine of $3 was imposed on the operator of an automobile who did not have a license in his possession when asked to show it. A sailor from one of the U. S. ships in the harbor, accused of breach of peace some days ago was presented today, but the case was nolled, as witnesses to what occurred are aboard ship and to get them would be a tedious task and little could be shown probably by them. Several alleged violators of the parking laws were in court, but were not prosecuted. They were chiefly out of town operators.

After a heavy thunderstorm the water on the surface of salt water lagoons along the coast becomes nearly fresh.

JEWETT CITY

The second day of Chautauqua provided as excellent a programme as did the first. Supt. Russell gave an instructive talk on Japan in the afternoon. The Bornschein Recital company gave a fine rendition of beautiful Russian folk songs, ranging from the wild fantastic Russian dances through the most exquisite and difficult arias. Frans Bornschein is a member of the faculty of the Peabody Conservatory of Music, and as a composer of ability. Hazel Bornschein is a teacher of singing in the same conservatory and also a talented elocutionist. Aldeson Morobray, the accompanist was one of the best that has ever been heard at a Jewett City Chautauqua. In the evening Alton Packard's cartoons and songs proved his unique skill. He drew not only the funniest cartoons, but also scenes of rare national beauty. He was a clever comedian, also a composer of songs. The junior Chautauqua has for its mayor, Alston Eagin, town clerk, Claire Shea, reporter, Myrtle Stetson, law and order commissioners, John Orapello, William Dearnley and Donald Buckingham. ADVISES SAFE PLAY IN SUMMER SEASON

The holiday season is fast approaching and with it a tendency to slacken one's normal vigilance of the rules of safety. To play with abandon is to release all the enthusiasm pent up during the week—to play safe is the wiser course, says the weekly bulletin of the state board of health.

It is often learned by sad experience. Already the news columns have carried stories of premature Fourth of July accidents. "One child burned to death." Life is too precious to lose even one child by such an accident, which was no more to be deplored because it was premature than had it happened in the full glory of a Fourth of July celebration. On such a day, however, carelessness is rampant; children are daring, vying with each other in the risks they will take—playing with fire of which they know not the danger. Fireworks look so innocent—how can children be impressed with their danger unless they are sufficiently warned by adults who have already learned the wisdom of safety. The loss of eyesight for a lifetime or a disfiguring scar is too much to pay for a little fun—and yet every year some pay this penalty; if not death.

But the fun may take another form and lead one to the seashore. Already the line of travel moves that way. There is no better sport than swimming but to be led out on a dare to depths unknown may result in an unnecessary loss of life. It is the holiday spirit with its abandon of rules of safety that lead to many an accident on the water. To play safe is to investigate the shore which is yet unfamiliar before venturing too far—as there may be strong undertow to contend with or unusual depth in certain spots. Swimming beyond one's poor judgment, and may lead to serious consequences such as cramps, and a drowning accident.

Canoeing is delightful sport but the art must be learned. To the unexperienced such a delicately balanced craft is unknown and the bravado of taking friends out in a canoe without learning to master it first, is taking a long chance with life. Many accidents and fatal endings might have been averted had canoes not been entrusted to inexperienced hands.

On the highways there is great need for playing safe. The holiday brings out all sorts of drivers—those who would be careful but are at the mercy of the speeders—those who, with holiday enthusiasm challenge others to race—and those who forget all rules of the road so engrossed are they in the spirit of their immediate party.

So play safe when you play. Do not take chances. Remember you are not the only one—by your daring you may endanger the lives of others.

In 1923 there was an average of 95 deaths in Connecticut during each of the dummer months with a total of 99 in July.

How many of these might have been avoided if everyone played safe.

WOMEN WHO LOOK OLD

In many cases they are not old in years, but because they are overworked, overtired, nervous and run-down, ailments have developed peculiar to their sex and this condition makes them look years older than they actually are. Such women should consider the remarkable record held by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a recent canvass among over one hundred and twenty-one thousand women who had used it, ninety-eight out of every one hundred women reported benefit from its use.

Makes Important Discoveries In Jerusalem

Prof. Stewart MacAlister, well known British explorer, now in the Holy Land, who has broadcasted to the world of his latest discoveries which dates back from 2000 to 3000 years, B. C. He has unearthed walls which show the first outpost bastions of the city of Jerusalem of Biblical times, and also a vast amount of weapons and utensils which show a siege of the city before the time of Abraham, of which there is no mention in the Bible.

Noted Woman Explorer

Lady Melville Richmond Brown, wife of the well known English baronet, and one of the greatest of woman explorers, fisherwoman and hunters, who has arrived home in London from her exploration of uncharted British Honduras. She claims that every other step in that country was one of anxiety, if not walking into a den of wild animals or swamps, it was into the center of a revolution, which seem to be prevalent down there. She brought back with her the head of a sea serpent, which she says is the missing link between the giant reptiles of land and of the sea.

UPWARD MOVEMENT STOCKS TEMPORARILY CHECKED

New York, July 2.—Profit-taking sales, combined with a renewal of short selling in certain vulnerable sections of the list, temporarily checked the upward movement of prices in today's stock market after two dozen issues had soared to new peak prices for the year. Recessions were relatively light in view of the fact that the upward swing has been under-way for nearly four weeks with only minor interreptions.

Call money renewed at 2 1-2 per cent., the highest in nearly a month, and then advanced to 3 per cent but opinion was divided as to whether the higher rate influenced any appreciable amount of liquidation.

Chief speculative interest again centered in the specialties with the Wilson company issues, S. S. Kresge, American Water Works common, Julius Kayser and Phillips Jones recording net gains ranging from 3 to 10 points.

Standard industrials all showed losses on the day. United States Steel common, after touching a new high on the movement at 109 7-8, fell back to 99 3-4 for a net loss of 5-8. Baldwin closed 1-4 lower at 114 3-4 and American Can slipped 3-4 to 114.

Rails were again mixed, an early advanced in the low and medium priced issues being led by Southern Railway, which hit a record-breaking high of 66 3-8. Nickel Plate established a new year's maximum at 95 3-4 and Louisville and Nashville and Western Pacific preferred also at their best prices of the year.

BOND PRICES FLUCTUATE

New York, July 2.—Bond prices fluctuated unevenly in today's trading which was featured by the strength and activity of foreign issues and an extension of recent gains by Wilson and compayn obligations.

Selling at 103, the French 5's established a new high level for the year, but later receded fractionally. Various French municipal liens also registered moderate improvement several issues duplicating recent high prices.

The advance of the Wilson mortgages was attributed mainly to speculative buying based on expectations that the new re-financing plan would be favorable to bond holders. Net gain for the day ranged from 1 3-8 to 3 1-8 points with the 7 1-2's advancing at one time more than 5 points.

Mixed price movements prevailed in the railroad list, gains of about a point in Canadian Pacific fours and Iowa Central 5's being offset by losses in Erie and other low priced liens.

WHEAT MARKET BULLISH

Chicago, July 2.—Unfavorable crop conditions in the Canadian northwest had a distinctly bullish effect today on the wheat market here. Largely as a result Chicago closing prices for wheat were unsettled, 1-8 to 3-4 net higher, Sept. 1.16 3-4 to 1.17 and Dec. 1.19 7-8 to 1.20. Corn finished at 7-8c net lower to 1c gain, oats 3-4c to 1 1-8c down, and provisions ranging from 2c decline to 7c advance.

Sharp upturns in quotations from Winnipeg and Liverpool were taken here as chiefly reflecting news of hit dry weather in Canada, where rain was much needed. In this connection, talk was current that the Canadian iyeld might be greatly reduced as compared with the output last year. Bullish talk was current that the Canadian yield might be greatly reduced as compared with the output last year. Bullish European crop estimates and unusual strength of Argentine markets were also a subject of comment, and so too were reports from the Dakotas indicating spread of Hessian fly. On the other hand, weakness of corn and oats today counted at times as a weight on the wheat market.

Improved weather tended to ease down prices of the more important deliveries of corn. July delivery, however, continued in demand owing to smallness of receipts.

Oats were depressed by reports that Canadian oat, duty paid, were offered in New England at 5c under oats from Chicago.

Some investment buying lard gave firmness to the provision market.

THE CURB MARKET

New York, July 2.—Mixed price movements in today's curb market reflected the readjustment of speculative accounts. Trading was under reduced scale.

Gains of approximately a point by Standard Oil of New York, and Prairie Oil and Gas were offset by losses of a point each in Humble Oil, Vacuum and Salt Creek Producers, the declaration of an extra dividend of thirty cents on the last named having no effect on the market price of the stock.

Interest in the industrial list centanered largely on the trading in the new Omnibus issue, the common selling around 19 and the preferred around 38. National Leather new soared twenty points to a record high of 228, or 108 points above the initial quitations a few weeks ago.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Prickly Porcupine

Let me see, you and me, little reader, although I should have said, "You and I," but teacher isn't near, so why should we care this time? In the future we'll be more careful, yes, indeedy.

Let me see where we left off in the last story. Oh yes, now I remember, having placed my Memory Cap on my head and closed my left eye. Prickly Porcupine had just come up to see Little Jack Rabbit and Professor Jim Crow.

And what a clumsy looking fellow Prickly Porcupine was his heavy thick-set body humped up like an arch, his head too dull and his hairs almost hidden in hair. His legs were stout and short and on his front feet were four toes and on his hind ones five. On each toe was a long stout claw. But his front teeth: My goodness! You'll be surprised when I tell you they were the color of a bright orange. As for his coat, well, it almost looked like a coat of mail, the kind warriors wore in days of old. Hidden among the long brownish-black hair, which was white at the tips, were many little spears, sharply pointed, about four inches long. Those on his head were only an inch long and those on his tail about the same length.

"Why did you kill that hemlock tree?" asked Professor Crow, all of a sudden, just like that, quick as the wind that blows off your hat.

"Couldn't find anything to eat except hemlock bark," answered Prickly Porcupine. "I like lily pads, but the Old Duck Pond is too far away. Besides, it's risky going there. The Miller's Boy might see me."

"I should think you'd have little fear of anyone," laughed the bunny boy. "Goodness me. The spears on your back would frighten anybody."

"So they do," answered Prickly Porcupine. "But once in a while somebody finds out that there are no spears on the under side of me. Mr. Wicked Wolf once turned me on my back and almost got the better of me."

"How do you make those spears stand up on end?" asked Little Jack Rabbit.

"Easy enough," answered Prickly Porcupine. "I have a set of muscles for that very purpose."

"Stick them up for us," cried Little Jack Rabbit, with a wink at Professor Jim Crow. "I want to see how you look. Maybe I'll mistake you for a big pin cushion."

Tucking his head down between his front paws, Prickly Porcupine gave a twitch to his muscles and the next minute he was bristly with spurs like a tremendous chestnut burr.

"Ha, ha," laughed the bunny boy. "You look like a cushion full of needles and pins." And tomorrow I'll tell you what happened after that.

NOTICE

TO PROPERTY OWNERS AND TENANTS

All persons are earnestly requested to clean their premises of all old papers, excelsior, straw, old wood and rubbish, and see that it is carted away to the dumping ground, or destroyed before 6 p. m., July 3, 1924.

If all property owners will assist the fire department in this matter of removing rubbish, a large fire may be prevented and small fires reduced to the minimum.

The following suggestions, if carried out, may prevent a conflagration:

Take in under cover all barrels, boxes, etc., or any inflammable material that is liable to add to the danger.

Close all cellars, windows and airways where a match or crackers could be carelessly dropped.

See that all old papers, hay, excelsior, etc., is removed from under the gratings in your sidewalks.

Learn your nearest fire alarm box and ask someone to teach you how to send in an alarm, if you have not been instructed, and use it if necessary.

If you have a telephone in your home or place of business, it may be quicker to telephone to some fire station, being careful to give the correct locality and number of house.

Place the numbers of the fire department telephones on your instrument, so as to be ready. These should always be there ready for any emergency.

Connect your garden hose and have it ready. Also bring your ladder from its usual place and have it ready to get to the roof of your house, where most of the trouble will be, as Norwich is a city of shingled roofs.

GEN. AIKEN GIVES REMINISCENCES OF LINCOLN BEFORE ROTARIANS

General William A. Aiken, one of Norwich's oldest residents, was the speaker at the noonday luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club on Wednesday. General Aiken was in a reminiscent mood and vividly recalled incidents in the life of Lincoln of which he had personal knowledge. His talk was exceptionally interesting and held the attention of the members of the club throughout his talk, and at the conclusion he was given three cheers of appreciation.

Gen. Aiken said in part:

"Abraham Lincoln" is the subject assigned to me for presentation to you today. A subject so big, that more books have been written upon it than any other human subject, that I know of. How can I do it justice on this brief occasion?

I shall only attempt, in three brief episodes, to present him to you as I came into touch with him.

1st—At his first nomination for the presidency.

2d—At the first of eight interviews I had with him during his presidency, as the representative of our noble war governor, William A. Buckingham, his close friend.

3d—At the funeral in the East Room of the White House.

The structure in which he was nominated was no grand "Auditorium" or "Madison Square Garden." Comparatively a rude shack with a tarred roof. On one corner of this roof had been placed a brass cannon, on the quiet, by some of Lincoln's friends.

Being a resident of Chicago, I determined to be a spectator of what might happen with in that "Wigwam" as it was called.

I saw and heard the proceedings, from beginning to end.

No crazy demonstrations as nowadays. But plenty of "pep," eloquence and earnestness; for everybody felt that the nation was on the brink of a volcano.

Favorite sons there were, as now; only fewer of them and stronger. New York's was William H. Seward; Ohio's Salmon P. Chase; Pennsylvania's Simon Cameron; Illinois', Abraham Lincoln, a man comparatively little known east of the Alleghanies. Later, every one of them served in Lincoln's war cabinet.

Three ballots were taken. Seward led in the first two, but not by enough to give him a majority. On the third ballot one of the New England states (I think, Vermont), changed her vote from Seward to Lincoln. That swung the balance for Lincoln and a rush for the band wagon ensued.

Quick as thought, that cannon on the roof proclaimed the glad news to Chicago and, inside, one of Lincoln's close friends mounted his chair and swung in his uplifted hand, a large, framed lithograph of "Our Abe." By this time the "band wagon" had gotten pretty full and, from the shouts, you would think that the riders had always been for Lincoln.

It was a sight to stir a fellow, my friends; and the fellow who addresses you was stirred to his boots.

The date of my second episode was about the 24th of April, 1861. The scene, President Lincoln's office in the White House.

The gun, fired on Major Anderson and his gallant band in Fort Sumter, Charleston harbor, on April 12, had not ceased its reverberations in every body's ears, north, south, east and west.

Massachusetts and New York had started their prepared militia in the persons of the 6th and 8th regiments of Massachusetts and the famous 7th of New York city. Other states, including Connecticut, were organized and arming their regiments with feverish rapidity.

Washington was isolated as never before—or since, for Baltimore was, at that moment, apparently as hot for secession as South Carolina. In their passage through Baltimore for the defense of Washington, the Massachusetts 6th was violently attacked, with some killed and wounded. The 8th and New York 7th, avoiding Baltimore, sought entrance to Washington, via Annapolis; but there they were met by enemies who, as far as possible tore up the rails leading to the capital.

You could not imagine the situation unless you had seen it, as I did, to my momently astonishment and education.

This, Rotarians, will give you a skeleton picture of the situation when I presented myself at the door of the White House, armed with a written communication from Governor Buckingham to President Lincoln, detailing his preparations as to Connecticut reinforcements and pledging him the loyalty of the state.

I found no difficulty in getting admission. No office seekers about, just then. Washington seemed almost deserted—everybody getting out and nobody coming in. The president's office was then a large corner room on the second floor, overlooking the Potomac and the Virginia heights at Arlington, with a clear view of the Long Bridge connecting the North and South—as Virginia had just then seceded formally from the Union.

The day was soft and clear. By the open window, stood a long spy glass which I fancied was in frequent use by the president to observe any demonstrations that might be visible between shore and shore.

For the first time in my life I now beheld my beloved president as we were alone together for half an hour, more or less; and during which he diligently perused the governor's dispatches and then asked me many searching questions as to what I had seen en route from Connecticut to Washington.

Not wishing to trespass on his precious time, after finishing my business, I rose, and, pulling out of my pocket an apparently well filled pocket book I said, "Mr. President, this pocket book contains two hundred and fifty dollars of the best bills the north can furnish; your city is just at this moment too isolated and apparently panic stricken, that I fear I cannot pay for my last night's lodging with the whole of them."

For the first time a smile lighted the face of the president as I added, "If you can see your way to furnish me with two hundred and fifty in gold coin, I'll guarantee to get your messages to the governor with the utmost alacrity."

He replied, "I think I can fix you!" and writing a few lines on a small sheet, he handed it to me, saying, "Take that to Seward. He has a bit of secret service fund which may avail you."

Then, standing, and holding my hand in the kindest hand in mine, he gave some parting messages for the governor—but not one word of writing.

On the way to the state department, I met a body of armed civilian guards headed by Cassius M. Clay. I tell you, it was a pathetic sight, as I had information from the highest force then in Washington was the official source, that the only military Massachusetts 6th and a battery of U. S. field artillery.

On presentation to Mr. Seward of my line from the president he immediately honored the draft in ten and twenty dollar gold coins, saying to me, "We all have felt depressed, but hear encouraging rumors. When you leave this building, keep your eye on the senate window of the capitol. If you see a little white flag hoisted there you may know that the troops from Annapolis are in sight." I had been out ten minutes when I saw the little white flag go up. In almost as many more minutes, I saw the blue coats of the Massachusetts 8th and the grey coats of the New York 7th as they descended from the train. I was, for the moment, a happy man. So may end this episode.

I shall not detain you long with my third episode. Upon the shocking news of the murder of the president, Governor Buckingham summoned a few friends to accompany him from Norwich to Washington, in response to an invitation from Washington, to attend the funeral.

The scene in the great East Room of the White House, was most impressive. In the center lay the casket containing the body, white, banked around the sides of the room were rows of seats one above another, reaching almost to the ceiling. The great crystal chandeliers shed a subdued light upon the whole. The services were short—a prayer and brief eulogy—no music, that I remember. The body was then removed to the capitol and lay in state under the great dome, while the multitude paid their last respects.

I could not bear to return without taking a last look at the scene of this historic tragedy; the fronts of Ford's theatre where the fatal shot was fired, and the homely brick tenement across the street in one of the rooms of which he passed the night, surrounded by a few devoted friends. His physicians, watching every heartbeat; his son, Robert, his ever devoted secretary of war, Edwin M. Stanton and others.

"He passed that long, long night away
In statue like repose;
But, ere the sun, in all his state
Illuminated the eastern skies,
He'd passed through glory's morning gate,
And walked—in Paradise!"

Business Taken Up.

President Campbell presided at the meeting and Arthur M. Thompson acted as song leader. The musical numbers of the luncheon included a delightful solo by Henry J. LaFontaine, assisted by Charles R. Butts. A pleasing duet was rendered by Joseph C. Worth and F. Russell Smith. The announcement that the club would be the guests of William H. Oat at his Ludlow Farm on July 23rd was heartily received.

William G. Park, reporting for the golf committee, said that the Hartford golf team would play against the Norwich team next Wednesday afternoon at the Norwich Golf club course. Mr. Park also said that a match with Meriden was under way and would take place later in the month.

E. LaRue Bliven said that the baseball team would clash with the Lions club next week in the second game of the series.

President Campbell, previous to introducing General Aiken, said that seated at the table with him were three guests whose combined ages totaled 263 years. The guests were General Aiken 91, Hugh Campbell 82 and Rev. George C. Pollock 90.

DEAF MUTES HOME WILL CONDUCT CAMPAIGN

An interesting study of the deaf mutes of New England is being made in connection with the project recently announced, of increasing the accommodations provided by the New England Home for Deaf Mutes, (aged, blind or infirm) which is located on Mt. Washington at Everett, Mass.

There were in 1920 in the United States, according to the corrected U. S. census report, 35,026 deaf mutes or an average of 425 per million of the population. In New England the average is only 418 per million of the population, or one to each 2,352 persons. There are in the New England states 2,655 deaf mutes distributed as follows:

Maine 554; New Hampshire 131, Vermont 124; Massachusetts 1,377; Rhode Island 166; Connecticut 503.

Contrary to popular belief, the larger proportion of deaf mutes have acquired their deafness, instead of being born thus afflicted. Only 15.3% or about 40 per cent. of the 35,026 deaf mutes in the United States were born deaf while 21,513 or 60 per cent. have become deaf after birth due to accident or disease. In New England only 36 per cent., of 966, were born deaf while 1,689 acquired deafness. Among the causes of the acquired deafness, scarlet fever figures most prominently while meningitis, brain fever, measles, whooping cough and pneumonia also play a large part.

Some interesting conditions are revealed in the questionnaire as to the percentage of the deaf. In the United States, out of the 35,026 deaf mutes, 700 were reported in the United States census as born of parents both deaf, while 443 had one parent who was deaf, but 33,203 were children of parents of whom neither was deaf.

Ten per cent. of the deaf mutes in New England are over 60 years of age, and the majority of these are between 65 and 85.

The New England Home for Deaf Mutes (aged, blind or infirm) was established in 1901 in a modest building on Cambridge street, in Allston. In 1905 the trustees secured a large residential property on Mt. Washington in Everett, Mass., which has since been occupied by the home, and which is the only institution of its kind in New England which receives the aged, deaf and infirm from all of the New England states.

The present building contains 15 rooms and is seriously overcrowded by the 16 inmates who are there. In two instances 3 persons occupy two rooms and in several instances two occupy one room adequate comfortably for only one.

During the past five years not less than 50 applicants have been denied admission owing to the limited accommodations. Seventeen aged persons are now on the waiting list. The trustees of the home, of which Rev. A. Z. Conrad is president, Rev. Geo. S. Fiske, vice president, and Phineas Hubbard, treasurer, after several years of necessary delay, have announced their purpose of appealing to the people of New England in the early autumn for $70,000 for a building fund with which to erect an annext building which will provide for about 50 persons as well as for an imperatively needed infirmary, and other special rooms needed to administer to the comfort of the aged.

Those who are most familiar with the deaf mutes, realize that as a class they are more than usually industrious and thrifty but that owing to their infirmities, their earning power is less than normal and their working years are usually fewer. When old age comes the deaf person is more than a usual care in family life. Among themselves the deaf mutes are happy, but isolated among hearing people they are ill at ease and oftentimes miserable.

To provide for this worthy class of men and women, the trustees of the New England Home for Deaf Mutes will appeal not only for a building fund, but for $30,000 to be invested as a part of the permanent fund, interest upon which will provide for the upkeep of the new building.

Governor Channing Cox of Massachusetts has agreed to serve as honorary chairman of the campaign committee, Richard M. Everett, director of the Webster & Atlas National bank, will be the treasurer of the campaign fund. A hearty expression of interest and sympathy has been received by the trustees from many representative citizens of the New England states.

During the past 12 years, $49,451.43 has been accumulated from bequests and subscriptions toward a permanent fund. The operating expenses of the fiscal year were $3,727.97. Of this budget only $820 was received from payments for board of inmates while $6,798.80 were received in donations and subscriptions from several hundred contributors resident in various parts of New England.

Fitchville Prepared for Fourth

Preparations are now completed for the Fourth in Fitchville. Everything possible has been arranged for the community picnic and if Friday is pleasant the success of the affair is assured.

A new feautre of the program is the recitation of The Legend Beautiful, by Miss Natalie Waterman, the prize speaker of the Lebanon schools.

There is to be a large parade at ten o'clock, accompanied by the brass band of the village. This promises to be most original. The leader of the parade is the well known soldier whose noble figure and immaculate uniform has attracted so many passersby.

Through the courtesy of Palmer Bros. booths have been erected and lights installed.

The event has very promise of being one of the most enjoyable occasions that the town has ever experienced.

ALL-NIGHT PARKING IN BUSINESS STREETS TABOO

Habitual all-night parking on streets in the business section of the city, which has been a practice on the part of a number of people as it saved them garage hire, is to be taboo from now on—in fact is taboo already—as a number of automobile owners have found when thy discovered red police tags on their machines the last few mornings.

Besides the strictly business streets, the prohibition has been extended to cover lower Washington street, Church street and Cliff street and the police have been tagging cars which were evidently parked all night on the street in lieu of a garage.

This move is made on the part of the police department on the ground that cars parked all night on the business streets constitute an obstruction to traffic that cannot be allowed.

HELD BUICK DEMONSTRATION AT WILLIAMS' SHOWROOMS

When the attractive show room at the plant of Julian L. Williams, 25 Town street, Norwich Town, was thrown open to the public Tuesday evening, for the purpose of demonstrating the (1925) Buick car, 350 people attended the demonstration on the opening night.

Mr. Williams and his two salesmen, William Bottomley and Kenneth Webb, were on hand to explain the merits of the twenty-three models, interest being centered chiefly in the Standard-six model. The show room which has a frontage of 65 feet, with 30 feet in width, and lighted with 1200 candle power lights, made a magnificent sight through the five mammoth plate glass windows as visitors approached the building, as well as for the many who passed over this thoroughfare during the evening.

The interior decorations are white ceiling with cream color side walls, the cement flooring being painted tile red. In the center of the room a section was reserved for recreation purposes where visitors could rest and inspect the attractive new Buick's catalogues, etc.

The furnishings here comprise a large floor rug 10x12 in size with a mission table and chairs to match. On the side walls are large posters explaining the distinctive features of the numerous open and closed models. Mr. Williams has a radio installed for this special week, for the pleasure of his patrons. On the first evening in question the demonstrators were kept busy until 11 o'clock.

The entire plant of Mr. Williams which is one of the finest equipped service stations in Eastern Connecticut, is 300 feet long, and 100 feet deep, and is surpassed by none for satisfactory service by competent men in the mechanical department.

The office in an adjourning building is under the supervision of Mr. Williams assisted by his wife and Miss Dorothy Harvey. The furnishings here are in oak with green side walls. In the rear is a large stock room in charge of William McKelvey, where a complete line of Buick supplies are carried.

In another building is the battery equipment in charge of the ignition man, James Way. Lloyd Ames is the capable foreman of the large force of men in the mechanical department.

DEM. CONVENTION AGAIN FAILS TO BREAK DEAD LOCK

Late Night Session Adjourns After 61st Ballot Until 1 P. M. Today—Party Record for Continuous Balloting Surpassed and Deadlock is Tighter Than Ever—McAdoo Holds His Lines Despite Signs of Impending Break Early in Day—Bewildered Party Chiefs Unable to Agree on Solution of Situation—61st Ballot Gives McAdoo 469.5 Smith 335.5 and Davis 60.

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 3.—Even by surpassing the party record for continuous balloting, the democratic national convention has failed to nominate a candidate for the presidency.

At the close of the 61st ballot the convention adjourned after midnight until 1 p. m., July 4, with the deadlock tighter than ever, and the grip of both principal contenders unshaken.

The McAdoo management placed the blame on the favorite sons who, they said, by remaining in the balloting when they should have withdrawn, had prevented the real strength of both Governor Smith and Mr. McAdoo to be shown.

Plodding steadily through a day and night session, the convention had rolled off a total of 61 ballots, two more than the previous high record of the party, made in 1860, when Stephen Douglas was nominated for the presidency after taking 59.

At the adjournment the situation appeared to be almost precisely where it had been 24 hours before. McAdoo remained in the lead, with Smith holding second place, and all the others trailing far behind.

Fearful that many of the delegates, embarrassed financially by their unexpectedly long visit to New York, might go home before there is a nomination, William Jennings Bryan today brought forward a proposal to raise a general expense fund out of which to pay the expenses of those who are in distress. He submitted his plan to David Ladd Rockwell, the McAdoo campaign manager, who approved it, and prepared to lay it before the national committee. Mr. Bryan did not announce how the money would be raised, but he said he would guarantee it would be forthcoming if his suggestion were adopted.

Four hours of fruitless conference intervened between the afternoon adjournment and the reassembling of the delegates.

The McAdoo leaders who had lost ground during the day's voting, still were struggling to keep together enough of their strength to stem a rising tide of dissatisfaction which already had sent two McAdoo delegations over to the cause of Senator Ralston, of Indiana, and one to the standard of Senator Robinson of Arkansas.

Thomas Taggart, pilot of the Ralston boom, declared he was not preparing to urge on the growing total of his candidate as long as the McAdoo and Smith forces still were determined to keep their candidates in the race. The Smith cohorts like wise were sitting tight.

A new hint of restlessness of the delegates was given convention officials as soon as the night session began when John A. Lusk of the Alabama delegation presented a resolution proposing that the convention remain in session without recess until a nomination for president was made. J. J. Fitzgerald, of Brooklyn, immediately made a point of order against the proposal and Chairman Walsh sustained it and ordered the secretary to proceed with the next ballot.

The night session opened with prayer by the Rev. Henry Clay Risner, a Baptist minister of New York.

Chairman Walsh announced that should the business of the convention not be completed tonight, tomorrow's session would take due notice of the significance of Independence day by listening to a concert of patriotic airs.

The standing of the leaders on the fifty-fifth ballot follows: McAdoo 466½; Smith 320.5; Davis 62½; Ralston 97.

On this ballot McAdoo lost half a vote, Smith was unchanged, Davis gained 3 1-2 and Ralston gained 6.

The poll of the Nevada delegation showed four for McAdoo and two for Smith.

Chairman Walsh ruled that under the instructions of the Nevada delegation its entire six votes must go to McAdoo.

On the opening roll call of the night session—the 56th since the voting began Monday morning—Ralston kept picking up one or two here and there, but there was no decided trend in any direction. The Indiana senator got one in Arizona that had gone on the previous ballot to Franklin Roosevelt, and two in Illinois that had been cast before for Governor Bryan of Nebraska.

The missionaries of the McAdoo cause had been at work during the recess, and the lines of the McAdoo states again were holding under the combined attack of the opposition. The chairman of the Georgia delegation, going to respond to the call of his state, shouted up defiantly to the chairman to "record Georgia as voting on the next five hundred ballots for William Gibbs McAdoo."

When Nevada was reached, however, there appeared a threat of trouble. The state has been voting continuously for McAdoo, but it asked that it be passed while the members of the delegation consulted as to their future course.

Meanwhile Ralston was given another two votes in Pennsylvania. They previously had been cast for Governor Bryan.

The fifty-sixth roll call went all the way down the list of states to North Carolina before there was a single change from the previous ballot. Then the Tarheel delegation, which had been giving a few scattering votes to Underwood and Davis and the balance to McAdoo, created a moment's diversion by throwing its entire vote of 24 into the McAdoo column. The net result was a gain of three and a half for McAdoo.

Pennsylvania took one away from Davis and gave it to Glass of Virginia.

The leaders stood this way at the end of the 56th ballot:

McAdoo 430; Smith 320.5; Ralston 97; Davis 58.5.

It was a gain for McAdoo of 2 1-2 and a loss for Davis of 4, with Ralston and Smith unchanged.

The banners of the Smith states were clustered about that of New York in the center of the hall, and once more the vast assemblage was swept by a tempest of cheering.

It was several minutes before the chairman got the convention under control again and ordered the secretary to continue the roll call.

The leaders stood as follows on the 57th ballot:

McAdoo 430; Smith 320.5; Ralston 97; Davis 58.5.

There was not a single change in the totals for the four contenders.

The first important break of the night session came on the 58th ballot, when Louisiana left John W. Davis and voted her full strength of twenty for Mayor Martin Behrman of New Orleans.

A moment later Michigan, which had been casting 15 votes for McAdoo and 15 for Smith, voted 25 for Smith and five for McAdoo.

The Michigan shift set off another demonstration by the Smith forces, who had sat silent throughout the last decade of ballots while their candidate was barely maintaining his standing.

There was another long sweep of cheering when Missouri, standing next to Mississippi on the roll call, announced its reversion to McAdoo.

Mississippi and Missouri, with fifty-six votes between them, returned to McAdoo on the fifty-eighth ballot, restoring much of the strength he had lost during the day's balloting and almost wiping out the sudden accretion of strength that had been cast to Ralston of Indiana.

Both of the states had been casting their votes for the Indiana senator, along with the thirty votes of Indiana. The McAdoo people hailed the change as the beginning a new climb in the McAdoo vote, while Thomas Taggart, the Ralston manager said he expected both states to return to his candidate later.

When the democratic national convention reached the fifty-ninth ballot tonight tonight it tied the record of party history, and as no nomination was reached, the convention began setting a new record.

The greatest number of ballots heretofore cast in a convention was in that of 1860 when nominated Douglas. That convention began at Charleston, S. C., where fifty-seven ballots were taken; it then adjourned and reconvened in Baltimore where two more ballots were taken —fifty-nine in all and Douglas was nominated.

As the see saw of the balloting went on without decisive result, agitation for a change in the rules to end the deadlock reached a point wher Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska drafted a resolution calling for the elimination on each ballot of the low man. The senator said he would introduce it tomorrow unless tonight's session brought some indication of a break.

The vote on the 59th ballot went along about as usual, until Louisiana was reached. After giving a complimentary vote to Mayor Behrman on the previous ballot, the Louisiana delegation swung back to John W. Davis.

Despite the advice of the Smith managers, Michigan continued to vote twenty-five for Smith and five for McAdoo.

There was another outburst of cheering and a near-demonstration by the McAdoo delegates when the vote for Georgia, a stalwart McAdoo state from the start, was announced for him by Miss Margaret Wilson, daughter of Woodrow Wilson and a sister of Mrs. McAdoo.

The leaders stood as follows on the

FINDS SON AFTER FIVE YEAR SEARCH

Chicago, July 3.—A five year search by Mrs. Florence Smith, Taunton, Mass., for her son, Russell, kidnapped from their home near Boston, has ended here with the finding of the child, now eight years old.

A year ago the boy was picked up in a dazed condition by a policeman and turned over by the juvenile authorities to Mrs. L. D. Heinzelman. His frequent repeating of the word "Tonton" led the foster mother and authorities to communicate with the Boston police who communicated with the Boston police who communicated with Mrs. Smith.

Though Mrs. Smith established the identity of the boy, he did not recognize her.

Secretary Hughes announced the appointment of Wilbur J. Carr, director of the consular service, to the grade of assistant secretary of state.

CORCORAN AND COAKLEY ARE FOUND NOT GUILTY

Cambridge, Mass., July 3.—A verdict of not guilty on every count of the indictments against them was returned shortly after 9 o'clock tonight by the jury trying William J. Corcoran, former district attorney of Middlesex county, and Daniel H. Coakley, disbarred Boston attorney, on charges of extortion. The jury had deliberated nearly 27 hours.

The verdict, rendered by a jury which appeared nearly exhausted by its lengthy deliberations, ended a trial which was begun on May 21 in superior court, investigating various charges of conspiracy to extort. After the defendants had shaken hands with the jurors, Coakley was lifted to the shoulders of friends in the corridor and carried to the court yard where a crowd of 200 cheered him as he announced that he had never feared the outcome.

THREW CORDON OF POLICE AROUND COURTHOUSE

Cambridge, Mass., July 3.—A cordon of state and city police was drawn about Middlesex county court house late today when District Attorney Arthur K. Reading received information that persons in the street were signalling to the jury trying William J. Corcoran, former district attorney, and Daniel H. Coakley, disbarred Boston attorney, who are charged with conspiracy to extort.

Throughout the day crowds assembled about the building in an upper room of which the jury had been deliberating since 6.30 o'clock Wednesday evening. A detail of Cambridge police was summoned to keep the crowds on the move, but late today the district attorney summoned 15 state detectives to reinforce this guard, and the police lines were drawn about the court house. Early tonight District Attorney Reading issued a statement in which he said:

"My attention as well as the attention of the court was called to the crowds outside the court house and to groups standing opposite the window of the room where the jury is deliberating. We received information that signals were being made from persons outside the building to the jurors within.

"We intend to keep all crowds away from the court house. Nobody will be permitted to stand outside the building tonight. We have given ample warning. We will not tolerate such signalling."

The district attorney personally supervised the placing of police sentries at points visible from the windows of the jury room. Several automobiles parked in the street adjoining the building were ordered removed.

The state has charged that Coakley and Corcoran conspired with others to extort money from various persons by threats of prosecution and exposure. One of the witnesses for the state at the trial was Harry E. Levenson, Boston lawyer, who said that he was formerly a member of a group of attorneys engaged in extortion, but who turned state's evidence when he was on trial with Corcoran in Suffolk county on blackmail charges. On that occasion Levenson testified that the jury trying the case had been tampered with by Coakley and a mistrial was declared.

LIEUT. MAUGHAN HAS COMPLETED RETURN TRIP

Mitchel Field, N. Y., July 3.—Lieut. Russell L. Maughan, who flew from here to San Francisco between the dawn and dusk of one day, completed his return journey tonight. He arrived at 8.26 o'clock, daylight saving time, having flown from Dayton, O., in 4 hours and 6 minutes.

'Had a fine trip," Lieutenant Maughan said on alighting. "Wasn't sick, wasn't hungry. Wind was against me both ways, but the machine worked like a bird. I am glad it is over, but I wouldn't mind doing it over again. The kindness shown me everywhere made it worth while."

Lieutenant Maughan had planned to leave tonight for Washington, where he was to have been received by the president and Secretary Weeks, but these arrangements were postponed in favor of the air circus to be staged on the flying field tomorrow for the benefit of the Army Relief society. Lieutenant Maughan will give exhibitions of stunt flying.

HOOVER ADDRESSES WORLD POWER CONFERENCE

London, July 3.—Demands for federal control of power development came from a lack of understanding of the problem, Herbert Hoover declared today before the world power conference.

"Federal regulation is not the road to the solution of the problem of interstate movement of power," he said. "The best solution should be found in co-ordinating regulations between groups and states with, perhaps, voluntary assistance from the federal government in securing this co-ordination."

Super-power, he continued, did not represent a gigantic tand grilling trust but co-operation between utilities.

Arthur T. Hadley, former president of Yale university, said that as an industry became more progressive the dangers of government ownership became great and that regulation rather than direct operation had been successful as a solution.

Effort to End R. I. Senate Deadlock

Governor Flynn Calls Conference of Citizens Committee and Legislative Leaders of Both Major Parties.

Providence, R. I., July 3.—In accordance with a request from a special committee of citizens for steps to end the deadlock in the state senate, Governor William P. Flynn today invited the members of the committee through its chairman, T. F. McDonnel, to confer with him and legislative leaders of both major parties at the state house next Tuesday.

Governor Flynn said he had also invited Lieutenant Governor Felix A. Toupin, presiding officer of the senate, Philip C. Joslin, speaker and Harold B. Andrews, deputy speaker of the house of representatives Representatives Lavender, Condon and McCoy, and Senators Barry, McCrane, Quinn, Sanderson and Sherman and Evers. Sherman is the republican floor leaders and Barry the democratic leader of the senate.

POSITION OF SENATORS IS STILL UNCHANGED

Rutland, Mass., July 3.—Senator Arthur A. Sherman of Portsmouth, R. I., republican floor leader of the Rhode Island senate and spokesman of the group of republican senators from Rhode Island, now here, declared that "it was out of the question" for him and Senator Henry S. Evers of Cranston to attend a conference at Providence next Tuesday called by Gov. William S. Flynn with a view to ending the deadlock in the state senate.

In a statement made after a conference of the group here Senator Sherman said that the position of the republican senators still was unchanged, and that they would not return to Rhode Island until they were guaranteed personal safety, cessation of the democratic filibuster in the senate, and right of way for the republican calendar of business.

The republican floor leader said that Senator Harry A. Sanderson, republican, who remained in Rhode Island to call attention to the lack of a quorum in the senate, and republican leaders in the state house of representatives could represent the view of the group here at the proposed conference to which have been invited several democratic senators and representatives and members of a special committee of citizens which proposed the meeting to the governor.

AIR MAIL PLANES MAKE REGULAR TRIPS

Chicago, July 3.—Transcontinental mail planes were rushing through the air with businesslike regularity today, the third day of the new coast to coast, day and night air mail.

The heavy run of air mail continued, satisfying Colonel Paul Henderson, assistant postmaster-general, that business had found the new service helpful.

The mail planes today were keeping close to schedules although the eastbound mail was delayed 35 minutes at Iowa City by a loose control.

GAME WARDEN KILLS DISABLED BUCK DEER

Derby, July 3.—A young buck deer was discovered swimming in Lake Zoar, two miles above the dam in Stevenson this afternoon by William Keaton and Charles Plummer, both of Devon, who were camping at the lake. The animal came to the shore but could not climb up on the bank because of a broken leg. It was found that a bone in the upper part of the leg had been shattered by a bullet. Deputy Game Warden Healey of Derby was notified and he killed the animal which weighed about 175 pounds.

SEEK RECEIVERSHIP FOR HOUSE OF DAVID

St. Joseph, Mich., July 3.—Charging fraud, deceit and immorality a petition seeking a receivership for the House of David at Benton Harbor, was filed in circuit court here today. The petition brands "King" Benjamin Purnell, fugitive colony leader, as "a religious imposter, pious fraud and a bigamist," and charges that he taught gross immorality, encouraged immorality and practiced revolting rites.

The Fourth of July

To the sages who spoke, to the heroes who bled,
To the day and the deed, strike the harp-strings of glory!
Let the song of the ransomed remember the dead,
And the tongue of the eloquent hallow the story!
O'er the bones of the bold
Be the story long told,
And on Fame's golden tablets their triumphs enrolled
Who on freedom's green hills freedom's banner unfurled,
And the beacon fire raised that gave light to the world!

They are gone—mighty men!—and they sleep in their fame:
Shall we ever forget them? Oh, never! no, never!
Let our sons learn from us to emblaim each great name,
And the anthem send down—"Independence forever!"
Wake, wake, heart and tongue!
Keep the theme ever young;
Let their deeds through the long line of ages be sung
Who on freedom's green hills freedom's banner unfurled,
And the beacon fire raised that gave light to the world!

—CHARLES SPRAGUE.

Those named in the indictments are Osman Cowell, Oscar Tanguay, R. Boutin and Miss Hazel Huntoon, all of Berlin, and M. Brideau of Island Pond, Vt.

The body of Mrs. Wallace was found in the Ammonoosuc river on June 24. An autopsy showed that although death was caused by drowning the skull had been fractured either by a blow or by striking a rock in the river.

Mrs. Wallace was a member of an automobile party with Miss Huntoon, Cowell, Tanguay and Boutin, according to the police, a week before her body was found. While the party was returning from Beecher Falls, Vt., to Berlin, the authorities allege, the two women left the automobile to settle a dispute, and Miss Huntoon returned to the car alone.

Members of the family and friends who yesterday reported his disappearance to the police said he was on the verge of a nervous breakdown when he vanished and believe he may have entered a sanitarium and either forgotten his identity or neglected to notify his relatives.

Coincidental with his disappearance it was learned that Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson had issued a subpoena for Bradley to explain what had become of $4,000 in rents collected by him on an estate in the hands of a receiver. Friends of Bradley said they were certain he was solvent.

REFUSED INJUNCTION TO RESTRAIN BANKRUPT FIRM

Authorities expressed a belief that the decision would effectually retard the attorney general's campaign to wipe out a long list of alleged cotton bucketeering brokers under the Martin act entitled "fraudulent practices relating to stocks, bonds and securities."

LA FOLLETTE LOOMS UP AS THIRD PARTY CANDIDATE

Wisconsin Senator is Expected to Signify His Willingness to Accept Presidential Nomination in Message to Be Delivered at National Conference for Political Action—Conference Will Get Underway at Cleveland Today—National Committee of Third Party Sends LaFollette Telegram Urging Him to Make Known His Position and to Comment on Political Situation.

Washington, July 3.—Secluded in his home but in continuous contact with the democratic convention proceedings at New York by wire and by personal representative, Senator La Follett of Wisconsin, prepared today his message to the third party convention at Cleveland.

None of his friends doubted that the document, along with exoneration of the republican and democratic party platforms and conduct would be a notification that he intended to accept a presidential nomination.

At the same time the senator intended to withhold the document until it could be given to the delegate assembled at Cleveland.

In spite of a desire on the part of the La Follette supporters to synchronize his nomination with the July 4 holiday, it was said the senator saw reason for delay especially with the democratic convention unfinished. Among the few visitors admitted to conference with him today were those who came straight from New York. It was declared that in addition to the actual showing of the delegate ballots there, the visitors gave Senator La Follette their views as to the conditions swaying the decision of delegates, and that this would come in for comment in the campaign promulgation to the Cleveland gathering.

LEADERS ARE CONFIDENT LAFOLLETTE WILL RUN

Cleveland, O., July 3.—"By the A. P.)—The national conference for political action will get under way tomorrow with leaders confident that Senator LaFollette, of Wisconsin, will send word that he intends to become an independent candidate for president. Such an expression is expected in response to a telegram sent to the senator today by the national committee of the conference urging him to make known his position and to comment on the political situation.

"Recognizing you as outstanding leader of the progressive forces of the United States," said the telegram, "we ask you whether you will under present conditions become a candidate for president of the United States. We should also appreciate a message from you setting forth your view of the present political situation."

The belief was expressed by those in touch with the situation here and the views of Mr. La Follette, who is in Washington, that a personal representative probably will arrive here tomorrow or Saturday with a statement from the senator, prepared for presentation to the conference. Robert M. La Follette, Jr., it is expected will come to the convention, as well as Donald Richberg, a Chicago attorney a close confidant of the senator.

Indications continued that Senator La Follette will advise the conference of his willingness to become an independent presidential candidate, and that the conference will endorse his candidacy on a platform substantially the same as that rejected by the republican national convention after it had been presented by the Wisconsin delegation. That platform was silent on the Ku Klux Klan prohibition questions.

There were indications that there might be a demand on the part of some of the delegates that La Follette end a third party movement, but the segment appeared as a minority.

At meetings today of the national committee, which were devoted mainly to preliminaries, the third party argument was advanced, reportedly by some of the socialist delegates, but it was indicated there would be no split on the issue.

The word comes from Washington that Senator La Follette prefers to run as an independent and would accept the support of the conference here only upon that ground. As an independent, it was contended, by his friends, his name could be placed upon the ballots in every state without the necessity of building up additional state organizations.

Convinced that before the end of the week the Wisconsin senator be in the field definitely, his political lieutenants here observing and directing the conference proceedings said their fight would be carried into Africa and that the senator intended to conduct a vigorous personal campaign.

So far as the conference itself is concerned, La Follette managers are remaining out of the picture as far as possible, so it cannot be charged that they were attempting to control the meeting. It was recognized, however, that there is practically unanimous demand for La Follette to come out as a candidate.

The continued deadlock in the democratic convention and the uncertainty as to the nominee of that party had the effect here today of retarding developments. Leaders admitted they were hoping the New York convention atmosphere would be clarified before the gathering here gets down to serious work.

Tomorrow's session will be devoted mainly to preliminaries. William H. Johnson, head of the Machinists' union and chairman of the conference, will sound the keynote.

TO SECURE RULING ON STATE VACCINATION LAW

Hartford, July 3.—Determined to get a ruling on the state vaccination law so that its meaning may be made clear, the state education department may cause a case of non-attendance at school because of failure to be vaccinated in counties other than Hartford county to be tried in the higher court for the purpose of testing the law, George R. Sturges, director of attendance and employment work, has indicated.

Two such cases, that of Henry Ahlgren, of Avon and that of Mr. and Mrs. James G. Brown, of Hartford, had gone to the superior court on appeals, but State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn had nolled them on the ground that the parents had committed no crime in failing to have their children vaccinated.

The unwillingness of the state's attorney to prosecute the cases in the superior court has brought about an impasse in the vaccination controversy. With the vacation season on no further inconvenience will be occasioned by the deadlock during the next few months, but unless the controversy is settled before the opening of the school term, the children affected will lose much valuable time, it was said.

Paul J. Ziglatzki, president of the Connecticut Medical Liberty League Inc., said the league, which is giving its support to the opponents of the vaccination law, would welcome a test case in another county, but said the case decided upon should not be a weak one from the standpoint of the anti-vaccinationists.

Mr. Sturges, however, made it clear that the state education department is only concerned with seeing to it that a child gets schooling as required by law. The department, he added, would not care how the decision went so long as the meaning of the law was made clear.

Today, under cross examination in a liquor case the man admitted he had been sentenced for highway robbery and burglary, and that in the six months' period he had mentioned he was part of the time in the jail at New Haven.

WILLIMANTIC

The population of Willimantic will remain at home today, Independence day. There will be plenty to do and plenty to see within the city limits. The long list of events was ushered in at 8:30 o'clock Thursday evening, the night before—with public dancing on the pavement at Lincoln square until midnight. Old and young merged as the crowd of dancers whose steps were quickened at intervals by the explosions of firecrackers thrown into the ring by some premature celebrator. Delightful music was furnished by the B. P. O. E. band. The entire square from Railroad street had been roped off and during the afternoon was flushed by members of Engine Company No. 1 of the fire department. The flooring was a little hard on shoe leather but not so bad for ordinary pavement and [illegible] ed. Shortly before midnight there was a grand rush to Recreation park and at the stroke of 12 a match was touched to a mammoth pyramid of wood. Flames shot into the air and an entire section of the park was illuminated. The spirit of the Fourth gripped the surging crowd. Amid shouting, the blowing of horns and noisy merriment several hundred congregated about the bonfire and received Independence day with cheers.

The condition of Gregorie Vertefeuille is considered serious. All but Mrs. Vertefeuille are confined to their beds.

It is believed that the poisoning was caused by eating creamed beef as the other food eaten by the family within the past few days consisted mainly of fresh fruit and vegetables. The beef was eaten Wednesday noon and all ate heartily of it except Mrs. Vertefeuille, who is on a diet. All felt slightly upset after dinner, but worked during the afternoon and apparently had recovered by evening, but after a breakfast of pancakes with syrup and butter and coffee Thursday morning, the two young ladies and the Richards brothers started for work but were forced to return home. WESTERLY

Fourth of July, Independence day for 1924, today (Friday) will lack official observance in Westerly. The attraction which will draw the most patronage will undoubtedly be the seashore. It was not so many years ago that the Fourth marked the formal opening of the summer seashore business, but now in line with present day tendencies the 15th of June, providing weather conditions are propitious, shows activity in that line.

At Watch Hill on Fourth of July the Yacht club has two boat races scheduled:

For one design (Herishoff class) a cup has been offered by Mrs. C. Bal Libme, a cottager at the Hill.

The second race will be a handicap one, for which a prize is offered by the [illegible]

The races are over a six to nine miles course in Little Narragansett bay. The warnnig gun is to be fired at 2.55 and for the start of the first race the gun booms at 3.

Entrants for the handicap are:

Skipper.	Boat.	Handicap.
Gutterson	Heron	4 min.
Sloan E.		3 min.
Watts	High Geer	2 min.
Clark	Sweet Marie	1 min.
Spencer	Eugene	Scratch

The officials of the Westerly Yacht club are: Commodore, George L. Babcock; vice commodore, Harvey D. Cowee; rear commodore, John G. Goetchius; treasurer, Daniel F. Larkin; secretary, Robert Barle; fleet surgeon, Dr. Raynhan Townshend; fleet captain, Wilder Gutterson.

Regatta committee — Harvey D. Cowee, chairman; Reginald Peck, W. J. Battey.

House committee—Mrs. C. Bal Libme, Mrs. Henry B. Joy, and Mrs. Edward A. Newall.

On the following Saturday will be started the series of Saturday races, which will be continued during the summer months.

The usual popular sea bathing, golf and sailing parties will be added attractions for the day.

Atlantic Beach will be the rendezvous of many automobile parties and the new parking space at the rear of the casino building will be available. All the attractions near the casino, including a brand new military band piano, which plays continuously twenty numbers without a skip, and then twenty more, will entertain visitors. Beach and house parties are planned from Watch Hill point to Weekapaug. Westerly dealers report a better than average sale of all kinds of fire works, and some parties at the beach plan a regular display.

It is anticipated that the automobile traffic through Westerly on the Fourth will exceed all previous records.

Public buildings, manufacturing and mercantile establishments as well as the banks will be closed all day. Holiday hours will be observed at the Westerly postoffice.

Real estate, tangible and intangible personal property may be taxed for sewer betterment in Westerly, under an act passed in 1916, according to an opinion handed down Wednesday by the supreme court. The court held, however, that proper notice was not given when the tax was assessed in 1923.

Henry L. Burdick and Everett A. Kingsley, in behalf of themselves and others having a common interest, brought a bill of complaint against James M. Pendleton, collector of taxes, and the town of Westerly, seeking an injunction to restrain the tax collector from collecting a tax assessed upon the property of the complainants and others similarly situated.

The case was certified to the supreme court on agreed statement of facts and three questions were propounded: First, can the following classes of property within said first drainage district be taxed under section 14 of chapter 1449 of the public laws of 1916: (1) Real estate not abutting on a sewer. (2) Tangible personal property. (3) Intangible personal property?

The supreme court in its opinion, prepared by Judge Vincent, answered the first question: That all three classes of property mentioned may be taxed, including real estate, tangible and intangible personal property.

The second question was: "Did the action of said town council in fixing the rate of said sewer tax of 1923 instead of the pro rata amount by it found reasonable and necessary, as provided by said Section 14, invalidate the tax?" The court's answer was in the negative.

The third question was: "Is the tax for want of specific notice?" The assessed under said Section 14 illegal court's answer was in the affirmative. The court held that notice given of the general tax failed to serve as sufficient notice for the sewer tax.

The complainants appeared as their own counsel, while John Ferguson, Jr., appeared for the respondents.

Hundreds of automobiles with registration plates of fully a dozen states were parked in the yard of the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad Thursday afternoon and late into the evening in readiness to convey their passenger consignments from express trains, east and west-bound. The neighboring shore resorts of Watch Hill, Pleasant View, Atlantic Beach, Weekapaug, Quonochontaug and Shelter Harbor, as well as the inland environs of Westerly, were the objectives of the automobiles. Evidently the Fourth of July, Saturday and Sunday week end holiday will be improved by many hundreds.

Miss Katherine D. Bennett, a former teacher in Westerly, died in Providence Tuesday morning at her home, 114 Elm Grove avenue. Her funeral was held Thursday morning with requiem high mass at St. Sebastian's church, Providence, after which the body was brought to Westerly on the noon train. Burial was in St. Michael's old cemetery.

The committal service was read by Rev. Daniel F. Sullivan, S. M., of the Church of the Immaculate Conception. The bearers were Charles J. Butler, Richard J. Butler, John J. Dunn, James A. Dunn, Dr. J. M. O'Connell and Eugene Sweeney.

Miss Bennett suffered a shock several months ago.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Bennett. For a number of years she was a teacher at Pleasant street and Elm street schools and is affectionately remembered by the many pupils she instructed. During her term as teacher she went to Germany, where she studied for a year. While a resident here she lived with her family at the corner of High and Dixon streets.

She left Westerly several years ago to make hre home in Providence with Judge and Mrs. John W. Sweeney, also former residents of Westerly. For several years she had been a teacher in the Cranston schools.

She is survived by two sisters, Mrs John W. Sweenye and Mrs. Elizabeth Fitzpatrick, and a brother, Dr. Joseph Bennett, all of Providence.

Miss Winifred Clancy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Clancy, and William Greene, son of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] George Greene, were united in marriage Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception by Rev. D. F. Sullivan. The bride's sister, Miss Mary Clancy, was bridesmaid and Edward D. Greene was best man.

The bride wore white crepe de chine with hat to match and carried bridal roses. Her bridesmaid wore orchid crepe de chine with hat to match.

After the ceremony a breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents on Chester avenue. The bride received many beautiful presents.

After a wedding trip to Atlantic City, Mr. and Mrs. Greene will be at home at 68 Cross street, where a newly furnished home awaits them.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bell opened [illegible] ing their summer home at the Worcester house, Quonochontaug.

Mrs. Frank Nugro and son returned to Westerly from New London, having been dismissed from Home Memorial hospital.

Arriving at The Breakers, Quonochontaug, today (Friday) from Westerly will be the Misses Lawson of Providence.

At Pleasant View recently from Norwich were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Thompson and Emma Thompson, registered at the Wigwam; at Weekapaug, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Bishop and Miss Marion L. Bishop, registered at the Weekapaug inn, from Norwich Town was Mrs. Marie Wilson, from Taftville, F. B. Ricketson and from Wauregan, J. A. Atwood and Miss Dorothy Atwood, registered at the Ocean house. At the Narragansett, Watch Hill, have been Mrs. Jessies Robinson and son, Stanley, formerly of Norwich, now of Hartford.

The Westerly Granite Manufacturing Association will entertain representatives of the largest granite quarries of the country July 17, when the convention of the International Monumental Granite Producers' Association, Inc., will be held at the Plympton house, Watch Hill. The convention is expected to last for a couple of days. Frank A. Sullivan of the Westerly granite men is chairman of the committee of arrangements.

At the Plympton hotel from June 28 to 30 were forty-five members of the convention session of the Warren Publication, New York, and among the Connecticut representatives were from Hartford, B. E. Callihan and R. J. Gray, C. H. Merrill; from New Haven, E. B. Foskett and S. B. Warren and the vice president of the company, Keith F. Warren, of New Canaan.

Michael J. Burke of Westerly, was day patrolman at Watch Hill Thursday.

Westerly friends of Jack Anderson, Jr., formerly of Franklin street, Westerly, who moved with his parents a year ago to Santa Maria, Cal., are interested in learning of his marriage last month. June 16th he was united in marriage at Ventura, Cal., with Miss Gladys Glenn, of Geneso, Ill. Mr. Anderson at present is stock manager and buyer for an automobile agency at the latter named place.

Lillian J. Tiziani of Hopkinton, operator and owner of a Chevrolet touring car crashed into a truck owned by Peter L. Priore and driven by his brother, Robert Priore, at the junction of Broad and Union streets at about 11 o'clock. The Priore truck was headed toward Dixon square on the extreme right hand side of the highway when the Chevrolet car came down [illegible] street and crashed into it broadside.

The windshield on the touring car was smashed and Miss Victoria Tiziani, an occupant of the machine, was struck in the forehead by a piece of glass. She was taken to the office of Dr. Charles P. Crandall by Joseph Pickering and the physician dressed the wound.

The accident happened on the driver's first trip out with the new machine. Officer George H. Champlin, who made an investigation, found that the driver of the Chevrolet car did not have an operator's license. She was summoned to appear in court one week next Friday on a charge of operating a car without a license. She came to Westerly Wednesday to get a license, believing that representatives of the state roads were to be at the town hall. As a matter of fact, they will not be here until next Wednesday.

Another reason is that it's pure and wholesome. You can give the children all they want and they simply adore its delightful flavor of the fresh ripe fruit.

Why Men Leave Home is entertainment par excellence. Not only does it contain a story that for speed and humor cannot be excelled, being from the pen of that master farceur, Avery Hopwood, but it possesses lavish and tasteful settings and a cast that for all round capability cannot be equalled. Headed by the magnetic Lewis Stone and the fascinating Helene Chadwick, the cast numbers Mary Carr, William V. Mong, Alma Bennett, Hedda Hopper, Sidney Bracy, Lila Leslie, E. H. Calvert and Howard Truesdell.

If you want to find out why men leave home go to the Palace theatre. You'll enjoy every foot of the picture.

THIS WEEK'S NEW RECORDS

A fitting subject for Renee Chemet's bow is this emotional violin setting of Liteurance's tragic Indian love song —By the Waters of Minnetonka. The ghostly drip of paddles and the double moan of the winds is in it. Softer in effect is its companion number—Under the Leaves (Sons la feuillee) a gracious pastourelle.

Another study in mood contrasts is Schipa's regarding of two impassioned tenor songs, Neapolitan in source. Napulitanata (Fair Maiden of Naples) has cloud-and-sun alternations of minor and major, with their peculiar, moody charm. Chi se nne scorda (Ahchu! (Oh, How Can I Forget) is merrily rhythmic, abetted by the "little orchestra" of violin, mandolin, guitar, flute and piano.

The path of the tomboy is none so smooth, to judge from the Duncan Sisters' record of Tom Boy Blues this week. Bull Frog Patrol which they sing on the other side is equally droll and in character with these two most original young ladies.

For a combination of all that is lovely in the arts it is hard to conceive one more lovely than the duets sung by Anna Howard and Laura Littlefield this week. Every child knows fair Luna as Lady Moon and with this Rossetti lyric is paired a Hungarian Dance, while the other side is occupied by Shakespeare's I Know a Bank Where the Wild Thyme Blows, sung by clear, pure, even soprano voices against a delicate orchestral background.

Henry Burr as soloist sings this week Face to Face, his first sacred record for some time. To pair with it is a tenor and bass duet of Pass Me Not, O Gentle Saviour by Charles Harrison and Clifford Cairns.

We may not all be of an age to remember The Sunshine of Paradise Alley, but Paul Whiteman's latest dance record quotes from it. Stirred into his record are a vocal duet refrain, four-hand piano passages and equally surprising ingredients. Where the Rainbow Ends on the other side is a reward in itself.

International Novelty Orchestra presents a novelty in two waltzes this week. A Thousand Kisses is a superb number, chiefly Oriental in effect. Apache Dance on the other side has a Montmartre flavor.

Back to the bread-and-butter fox trot Charles Dornberger swings his orchestra. I'm On My Way Back Home has two-toned whistling effects and a vocal refrain and travel stains. Just To Be Held In Your Arms sounds like [illegible]

Broadway Theatre.

Real vaudeville acts made a lasting impression with the "fans" that came out 100 per cent. strong at the Broadway theatre yesterday.

Bob, Bobby and Bob, who were one of the hits at the New York Hippodrome last season, opened the program with a decidedly funny and novel juggling oddity with a dog playing a prominent part.

Barney Gilmore & Co. offered a comedy skit of merit entitled Two Pals and a Gal. Mr. Gilmore is credited with many famous road attractions.

The distinguished Italian soprano from Milan, Italy, Thelma Thelmare, won a great many new admirers.

Myne. Verobelle and her company closed a delightful program with "Songs and Dances of 1924." Miss Virginia, the world famous high kick dancer, is in support of the English grand opera star.

In Tiger Love we have at one and the same time the latest picture play in which those popular featured players, Estelle Taylor and Antonio Moreno, once again cover themselves with dramatic glory, and also a screen telling of that famous opera The Wildcat, from the pen of Manuel Penella. It is a Paramount picture which was directed by George Melford and which opened yesterday at the Broadway theatre.

Tiger Love is a vivid romance of colorful Spain. Here's action, thrill romance, heart appeal and all packed into a single picture, and what a picture it is. It's a George Melford production. Remember The Sheik? Melford made that also.

Strand Theatre.

The location is twelve stories above the street. Clinging to the side of the building, two-thirds of the way up, with a dozen pigeons roosting on his head, is Harold Lloyd. The crowd below, amused but frightened, watch breathlessly while the spectacled comedian continues his upward climb overcoming the most difficult and perilous objects.

This is just one of the impressions your correspondent got after viewing Harold Lloyd's seven-reel Pathe-comedy, Safety Last, at the Strand theatre today. And what a comedy! Never has an audience shrieked with such uncontrollable laughter. There have been riotous comedies produced in the past by master comedians, but never before has one been seen in seven reels that moved at such a fast pace.

How Harold Lloyd performs his thrill stunts is a mystery. It is certain that he did them himself, for his face is seen plainly in every hazardous predicament he encounters. When a young man attempts to climb the side of a twelve story building in the place of a real "human fly" and meets hilarious trouble every foot of the way up the result is a continuous run of uproarious laughter.

You really cannot afford to miss Safety Last. It's Harold's most hairable hair-raising comedy that will make you weak from laughing. See it today or Saturday.

Leo Maloney in One Hundred Per Cent. Nerve is the other main attraction.

BREED THEATRE

Few of us there are who fail to respond to a tale of the sea. There is a certain fascination about stories of men that go down to the sea in ships that is bound to get under the skin and hold the interest. This is especially true of motion pictures of this type and in the cast of Women Who Give, the new Metro picture shown at the Breed theatre it is forcibly brought out. Here is a film play that is literally packed full of genuine drama, thrills and heart appeal, exceedingly well acted, capably produced, with the famous characters of a well-known novel brought to life on the silver sheet.

Women Who Give was directed by Reginald Barker from Sarah P. McLean Greene's classic of the New England coast, Cape Cod Folks. It is a rousing tale and with the wide scope of the motion picture camera has been made into one of the most satisfactory pictures of the present season. Much of the action has been filmed in locations round about Cape Cod, providing genuine atmosphere, with the balance of the settings in perfect keeping with the nature of the story.

This interesting story and well-made production also has the distinct advantage of a cast worthy of being called all-star. Barbara Bedford and Renee Adoree share honors in the leading feminine roles. It may truthfully be said that they have never been seen to better advantage. Robert Fraser is admirably suited to the role of the young sea captain and Frank Keenan adds another to his long list of sterling characterizations. Joseph Dowling, Margaret Seddon, Joan Standing, Victor Potel, Eddie Phillips and William Eugene round out a particularly well chosen cast.

THE DECADENCE OF "POVERTY HOLLOW"

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

Sixty-five years ago, when I first began to notice men and things, they called it "Poverty Hollow." Just why I never have been able to make out. There wasn't a pauper in it. No one of its residents ever asked for or received 'town aid.' No one had ever gone from it "over the hills to the poorhouse."

It was and is a snug little valley, lying sheltered between two mountain folds.—You may have noticed that's the way with most valleys. They lie between mountains.—This one runs north and south. The also north and south ridges which wall it vary from twelve hundred to two thousand feet high. While fairly parallel, they are not accurately so. Consequently the enclosed valley varies somewhat in width, as it also does in slope. There are places where the level floor is fully half a mile wide and places where it shrinks to less. There are also occasional "bays" where the valley cuts into the mountains, and here and there "capes" which the mountains thrust out into the valley. A part of its level floor is land but the larger portion and all the slopes of the foothills are arable and fairly fertile.

At the date when I first came to know it, the valley contained fourteen cultivated and reasonably productive farms. They varied in area from sixty to three hundred acres. Each one was occupied by a self-maintaining and self-perpetuating family. Each one not only supported itself but yearly added a little something to the 'nest egg' which in those forgotten days was regarded as an honorable possession and one worthy of sacrifice to secure.

There were also about a dozen smaller houses, each in its own acre or half-acre plat, occupied by wage-workers, all employed regularly or for most of the year on the various farms. Some were hired "by the year" and got, if unusually active and trustworthy, as much as $300 a year, with house-rent and garden space free. Others worked by the month for nine or ten months each year, and usually got about $20 a month, with like house and garden privileges. A few worked by the day—of at least twelve hours,—and felt well paid with a dollar a day 'and find themselves." When there wasn't field work for these latter, they usually found something to do digging ditches, or laying stone walls or helping put up barns, or driving teams for the three small mills which still functioned beside the valley's streams.

There was the usual "little red schoolhouse" sitting bare by the side of the road, with a generous pile of cord-wood heaped at one end. It had one room and one big 'box-stove," with sloping shelves around the walls to serve as desks for the bigger scholars, and backed wooden settles on both sides and one end of the central stove for the littler and shorter-legged children. It had a "library" of some three hundred volumes, which wasn't much used, its books having been selected by a paternalistic state regency with an eye rather to their educational than to their entertaining quality. "Teacher" had her own separate table and chair, with a lock-fast drawer in which she kept hidden the awful records of our youthful misdemeanors. Also of our occasional merits. We heard from that drawer only at the end of the term when those who were considered worthy were dowered with tri-colored cards called 'Rewards of Merit," and those who weren't thus honored had to go home without them to face the probable maternal expostulation and the equally probable paternal invitation to the woodshed,—where the strap hung, you know.

"Teacher" was always a young woman of the neighborhood, who was paid about two dollars and a half a week and "boarded round," i. e. lived two weeks at a time with each of the children's families. It was a proud day for each of the little ones when it became his or her turn to walk home with teacher. For that official, usually stern and coldly impersonal in school hours, often proved to be a simply delightful companion and even playfellow in those homeward walks and during the long evenings.

She kept order during the day over tow-headed flocks numbering from thirty to fifty, and not only taught the littler ones their A B C's, but drove those older through the dreary wastes of "Colburn's Mental Arithmetic" and somebody else's English Grammar, with an occasional digression into Geography and American history. She used such text-books as the children had. Sometimes there would be no two alike in a whole class. She had to take each one's book from him, when "hearing his lesson," in order to know what his particular geography or grammar contained. Even she felt it unfair to ask Tommy Jones to "bound" Massachusetts when, perhaps, his lesson for the day was about Mississippi.

The nearest water-supply was a spring some rods down the road and back in a pasture, under a huge old maple tree. It was necessary for the thirsty tots to bring their drinking water from this in a cedar pail at least twice a day in the warmer weather. The privilege of going after the water was one extended only to such boys and girls as had earned it by their close application and their unbroken obedience to the rule which forbade whispering.

As I remember it every family in the district sent at least one child to this school. Also, as I recall it, all but one of the farm houses sent regular detachments to the church which was two miles from the upper end of the valley.

There wasn't a mowing machine nor a sulky plow nor a threshing machine nor a telephone nor even an oil lamp in the district, for the excellent reason that the machines hadn't yet been invented and kerosene hadn't been refined. All farm work was done by hand, all buildings warmed by wood fires, all lighting done with tallow candles or sperm oil lamps. Yet these fourteen farmers made wholesome livings off their farms, paid their school taxes without demur, kept up their church dues and added occasional donations to the A. B. C. F. M. and other like organizations, made good butter and such cheese as you can't buy now for love or money, adequately clothed their families, gave their children a sound training in "the three R's," at least, and, when a new barn became necessary or a desirable field fell into the market, had the money to build the one or buy the other. As a matter of record, I remember that one of them once refused $1,600, cash down, for a ten acre field which has since gone begging at $240, with no takers.

Well, that was the sixty-five-years-ago status of this so-called "Poverty Hollow,—which might more appropriately have been named "The Happy Valley." There wasn't a plutocrat in it, nor a pauper. But there was peace and industry and frugality and slow but manifest progress, and all the promise of a worthy future.

Today there are just two of those fourteen farms being farmed. Of the other twelve, one is still in possession of the former owner's descendants who have, however, grown too old to continue active farming operations and are unable to pay the wages demanded by "hired help." Five have been abandoned or absorbed into other holdings.

Six have passed into the hands of city buyers who use them solely as summer "rest-camps," or are transforming them into that absolute reverse and antipodes of a farm, a 'country estate." True, two of these city owners are making erratic and futile attempts at occasional cultivation. But what can you expect from the "farming" of a city-bred man who sees his farm only between May and September, who credously believes the high-light stories featured in certain so-called agricultural publications, and who has to hire all the actual labor performed, never knowing, from his own hard-won experience, whether it is being done wisely or even capably? Both these men are spending from five to ten times as much on their farms as they get back.

The other four aren't even trying to keep up the farms. They are remodelling the old farmhouses into bungalows or mansions, in which "city conveniences" are being installed regardless of cost and without much idea of practicality. They are grading and making lawns, laying out tennis courts and gravelling drives, setting out copices of exotic ornamental shrubbery, building garages and servants' quarters, sticking "pergolas" in wherever there is a vacancy, installing water supplies and steam-heating systems and "septic sewage disposal" plants, etc., etc.

There are less than half-a-dozen men in the valley still willing to work for wages, and these newcomers have grabbed them to the last man, paying wages such as are common in the city, but absolutely impossible for a farmer to meet. As a result the two farmers who are left are struggling along as best they can, short-handed and unaided except for such help as their wives or children can give. The old schoolhouse stands empty. There are no more children to go to it.

Just as an illustration of the way it works, I've heard that one of these new-comers, finding the grass overrunning her meadows, has hired a man and team to come on and cut it, paying him full wages for the work,—and then giving him the hay, if he'll only draw it away!

How much chance has a real honest-to-goodness farmer, dependent on farm production for his living, to compete with that sort of thing?

The farmer cares for his grass and is gladdened when it grows lank and thick, because it promises him a supply of winter forage for his stock. But this city woman, whose 'only idea of grass is something to make a lawn, was made eye-sore by the very growth which the farmer would have welcomed. What he would have appraised as a promising meadow, she condemned as unsightly trash. She throws away the most profitable crop her hand produces,——and pays for the throwing. Meantime, her neighbor, one of the two remaining farmers,—who raises hay to sell, must compete in the market with this which has cost the cutter nothing,—which he has actually been paid for taking.

This question of the effect upon agriculture of the summer influx of city campers has two sides. There is no doubt they bring money with them, and leave some of it in country pockets. At the same time, they veto the farmer's efforts at real farming by over-bidding him for the already too scant supply of rural labor. They pay men more for grading lawns and gravelling drives than any farmer can pay them for raising corn or cabbage. When, instead of selling their crops in the open market they pay whacking wages to have them cut and carted off out of sigh, they're slapping the poor farmer's other cheek and blacking his other eye.

As a rule, I've found them mighty kind-hearted people and perfectly well-disposed. They unquestionably mean well enough.

The trouble with some of them is that they don't know.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

STOCK MARKET IRREGULAR

New York, July 3.—Irregular price movements in today's stock market reflected chiefly the readjustment of speculative accounts over the holiday. Four weeks of steadily rising prices with no sharp reactions, encouraged rather extensive profit-taking particularly in some of the industrial specialties, but these were offset by a resumption of bullish operations in other quarters. Standard industrials showed little change. U. S. Steel common closed 1-4 high at par and American Can and Studebaker improved fractionally. Baldwin reacted 3-8 to 114 3-8.

Revival of speculative interest in the railroad shares resulted in Southern Railway touching 65, the highest price ever recorded, but it fell back to 64 3-4 at the close. Northern Pacific touched a new top at 69 7-8, as did "Big Four" and Union Pacific preferred.

Seven public utility issues mounted to new high levels for the year on buying undoubtedly inspired by large earnings. American Waterworks common continued its sensational advance by touching a record high of 95 3-4, but reacting later to 93 3-4 for a net gain of 3 3-4 points. This compares with the 1924 low price of 40 established on February 18. Other strong spots in this group were West Penn. Power, International Telephone and United Railway Investment common and preferred. General Motors crossed 14 for the first time in more than two months and Du Pont, the largest holder of General Motors stock, showed a net gain of about 2 points. Oils improved on reports of increased gasoline consumption. Fresh weakness cropped out in some of the textile issues, Daniel Boone Mills and Munsingwear falling to the lowest prices of the year.

French francs turned reactionary today, sagging to 5.08 cents from which the rate recovered to 5.12 1-2c at the close, or six points net lower. Sterling yielded fractionally to 4.32 5-8 and other European currencies suffered moderate recessions.

Call money was quoted at 3 1-2 per cent. all day. Time loans stiffened slightly, with rates on all maturities being advanced 1-4 of 1 per cent. Commercial Paper was quiet and unchanged at 3 1-2 to 4 per cent.

THE BOND MARKET.

New York, July 3.—Profit-taking tendencies today reduced recent gains in the bond market and prices drifted unevenly lower in dull pre-holiday trading. With money rates stiffening slightly, institutions unloaded several larger blocks of securities.

Wilson and company issues encountered realising and reacted sharply, the 7 1-2s losing 4 points. Mixed price movements were recorded in the railroad list, but losses outweighed fractional gains in both the high grade and speculative groups.

Public Service of New Jersey 5s enjoyed a short-lived burst of strength, mounting 1 1-2 points to par at one time and then declining abruptly to their previous level. The certificates, however, held their gain of a point. A widening inquiry developed for other public utility liens at rising prices. Copper and Independent Steel company obligations improved moderately.

Foreign and United States government issues were steady.

FORCE WHEAT PRICES DOWNWARD.

Chicago, July 3.—Unwillingness to retain ownership risks during a three-day stoppage of business led to considerable selling of wheat holdings today, and forced prices downward after some early gains. Closing quotations for wheat were heavy, 3-4 to 1 1-4c net lower, with September 1.15 3-4 to 1.15 7-8 and December 1.18 5-8 to 1.18 3-4. Corn finished 1 1-4@1 3-8c to 1 3-4c off, oats at 1 1-2@1 5-8 to 2 1-8c decline, and provisions unchanged to 10c higher.

At first, the wheat market was strengthened by reports of continued dry hot weather harmful to crops in the Canadian northwest. These reports, however, failed to bring in much new buying, and it became apparent that for the time being the holidays rather than the crop outlook would prove to be the major influence, meanwhile, threshing returns southwest told of gold yields, and especially as the day drew to an end the market found support inadequate. Although an elevator interest here did more or less purchasing, the close was virtually the bottom figures reached.

Better weather put corn and oats under rather extensive selling pressure. The majority of traders apparently inclined to an opinion that bullish news had been discounted.

Firmness of the provision market was ascribed to an upward tendency of hog values.

CURB MARKET FIRM.

New York July 3.—Curb securities displayed a firm tone in pre-holiday trading today, business being chiefly professional, however, on evening up of commitments. Profit-taking appeared in a few issues but offerings were easily absorbed. The majority of the oil group showed firmness on further reduction in crude oil production last week.

Activity in General Motors new stock featured the industrial list, gaining nearly two points for the day on reports that it might be placed on a $6 annual dividend basis when the plan for exchange of stock becomes effective in September. DuPont Motors shares also responded moderately on (merger) reports. National Tea which has advanced steadily recently, reacted on profit-taking for a loss of nearly 7 points on the day.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

The Fourth of July marks the anniversary of the day when those stalwart patriots back in 1776 had the courage to declare this country free in spite of the consequences they knew it would invite.

It is in recognition of that act, and the glorious results that have followed that important step, that we celebrate today. It was the beginning of a government that has become the center of interest of the whole world, a leader among nations and one that is looked to for guidance in the adjustment of world problems.

Much history has been made since the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and we must not overlook the fact that much of that which concerns this country was made possible through that stand in behalf of principles and institutions, and there can never fail to be a deep inspiration that comes from the story of the fathers, the martyrs to liberty.

Back in 1776 it was held that there was a duty to country which could not be shirked. The same spirit has been displayed on subsequent occasions. The true spirit of patriotism has never subsided, but while there are thoughts of the strife and sacrifices it cannot fail to be remembered in connection with our duty to our country that there is a responsibility in time of peace as well as in war. Patriotic service is not confined to the shouldering of arms and the rendering of service on the battlefield. It isn't measured by the shedding of blood or the creation of misery.

There is a duty that rests upon the loyal and patriotic to make the most of modern civilization and to gain through peaceful methods what in years gone by was obtained only by war. There is a service in behalf of a better American citizenship which is always needed. We rejoice today in our nation, our history and our flag. We are proud of the fact that we are Americans and we may well resolve that the standard of American citizenship shall not only be maintained but be bettered.

ENDING NUISANCE TAXES.

Such sporadic explosions as were heard on Thursday cannot be regarded as celebrating the passing of the so called nuisance taxes, and yet they might well have been for the bevy of little taxes on many things have gone. For that the taxpayers have cause to be thankful and might well feel like celebrating a bit.

Wednesday at midnight was the time when such taxes as those on admissions to theaters, entertainments and moving pictures, telegraph and telephone messages, checks, drafts, promissory notes and candy were ended. There are those to whom such taxes meant more than they did to others. To all they have meant more or less bother and additional work, and as in all cases where there is the removal of something to pay everyone is glad to see them go.

Midnight on the second of July was the time fixed for ending the collection of such taxes by the act of congress which was passed on the second of June and allowed 30 days period before it became effective. The taxes mentioned above were the ones with which most people came in contact but others which have been removed at the same time include the taxes on musical instruments, watches, silver plated flat tableware, certain jewelry, riding habits, hunting clothes, pleasure boats, hunting knives, dirks, stilettos, daggers (and brass knuckles.

The taxes on all these articles have been small but they have mounted up to large sums in the aggregate and have meant much additional work on the part of those engaged in the various lines of business to see that the collections are made and the demands of the revenue department satisfied. Now the relief is certain to be twofold. Those who have had to pay will find the burden lifted and those who have had to be responsible for the collections will rejoice over the ending of that task. Perhaps the greatest cause for gratitude will come from the realization of the fact that inasmuch as the time has come for doing away with such taxes it reflects the tendency of the national government in regard to federal taxes in general.

MEETING TRUCK COMPETITION.

Even though railroad business has shown an increase in volume the roads have nevertheless felt the effects of the auto trucks. Much material that was formerly transported by rail is now being carried by trucks. It is for the most part the lighter goods but it all helps to make an inroad into the tonnage moved by the railroads.

In view of that fact it is not surprising that the railroads, or at least some of them, are becoming interested in the trucking business themselves. The situation is not so different from that of the trolley roads which are in numerous instances putting on bus lines to increase their service and to overcome the competition so seriously experienced from that direction.

As the result of the study given to the question the Pennsylvania road meets the situation by adding trucks to its freight service, by which it collects the freight on the shipping end and distributes it on the receiving end, thus rendering the same complete service that is afforded by all truck carriers and putting itself in a position to get business which has been slipping away.

The railroad is in other words going to do with freight what the express companies have long been doing with packages. It is going to furnish the service which the auto has made some shippers feel that they cannot get along without, and it is an experiment which is certain to attract not only the attention of other roads but of many shippers, who either own their own trucks or depend upon those of trucking companies.

When such a system is available the only test lies in the matter of rates and the reliability of the service rendered. As to the latter there can be little question over what the railroad would have to offer and in the matter of rates a large well organized railroad system ought to be able to meet any competition that doesn't actually give its services away.

BRYAN AT NEW YORK.

Time and again William Jennings Bryan has been rated in political circles as a back number. It has been figured that he was too old, out of date and out of touch with his party. Repeatedly have his principles been repudiated in this as well as in previous conventions in which he has played a conspicuous part. He has displayed a leadership with a following, regardless of the evident opposition that exists.

The New York convention is no different than that at Baltimore. Bryan isn't down and out just because some give him that rating. When he endeavored to explain his vote for McAdoo and when he tried to swing the delegates to his support there was plenty of opposition encountered but it was nevertheless shown that he had a following that listened. It was following the Bryan appeal that his candidate received the highest vote that has as yet been cast for him. It is true that he fell back later, and it may not have been all because of the Bryan influence that McAdoo got over 500 for the first time, but it must be credited to his efforts until some other influence is shown.

Bryan's efforts have not been devoted entirely to the support of McAdoo. He has been voicing his opposition to John W. Davis. That in itself doesn't necessarily blast Mr. Davis' chances but it has apparently helped to stop votes for him from piling up. That the former Nebraskan is the dominating influence of the convention doesn't appear but he appears to be standing in the way of other influences and contributing in no small way to the interest as well as the prolongation of the convention. He seems to have at least disposed of such claims as those about his being too old or being powerless.

THE TOKIO INCIDENT.

That the Tokio papers should hasten to deplore the acts of some Japanese in cutting down the American flag on the embassy grounds in that city is only what might be expected. When they refer to it as a jingo demonstration and that it is the outcome of efforts which might well be calculated to lead to such results they are unquestionably right.

Those who are ready to make trouble and those who are ready to go too far in their manifestations of ill feeling give no consideration whatever to the effect of their acts upon their governments or the false position in which it places the people of the country where such fakes place.

Without a doubt there is much disappointment in Japan over the provision of our immigration bill which calls for the exclusion of the Japanese. There is a certain amount of bitter feeling, and it is unfortunate that there was such an abrupt application of the legislation. Much might have been done to relieve the feeling had another course been followed even though the same result was eventually accomplished.

The exclusion act provided the very material to cause hotheads to act in the manner that that one did at Tokio. It may be that others will try to follow suit but it doesn't follow, even though Tokio has protested our action, that such demonstrations represent the Japanese attitude toward this country. It is the act of an irresponsible, who will doubtless be caught and punished, and it cannot be permitted to be the forerunner of increased aggravation. Tokio and its press discountenance any such thought. In fact they recognize that the incident discloses reason for checking some of the levity that has been permitted.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Independence day. See that your flag is in evidence.

Young America never forgets when the Fourth of July rolls around.

It doesn't seem to be possible to get new roads without waits and detours.

Make it a safe and sane Fourth and there'll be no regrets after it is all over.

What would a democratic convention be without William Jennings Bryan?

The man on the corner says: Watch carefully to see that you don't make it a day of regrets.

The radio fans seem to be standing the convention strain much better than some of the delegates.

There are those who considered Bryan shelved long ago, but he still continues one of the captains of politics.

If the democrats ever get a presidential candidate they'll not waste much time filling the second place on the ticket.

July puts a damper on those who had begun to display home enthusiasm over the possibilities of a batting season this year.

When those indicted in connection with the oil leases say they welcome the action, that, of course, makes everybody happy.

Let there be no such handling of explosives that will recall memories of other years when doctors were kept nearly as busy as if there had been a battle.

A MANLESS WEEK

There was something very like a pout on the usually smiling countenance of young Mrs. Howells as she expostulated with her husband: "I cannot see why they have to send you," she said. "There are plenty of men in the office who haven't any wives to be left at home alone. Fancy me the wife of a traveling man!"

"Well, Roberta, one swallow does not make a summer, and one week's trip won't make me a traveling man. I'm sorry, but it is a business assignment, and in a way it shows that I am making good. Peggy said she would come and stay with you, so you need not be lonesome."

At that Roberta's smiles broke out like sun after rain. "Your sister Peggy always has something up her sleeve," she laughed "and there is no telling what we shall do to console ourselves. You'll be surprised!"

"That's my Bobby! I know you and Sis will revel in a manless house and I've left some coin in the desk for theater tickets and such. Well, I must be off. 'Voir!"

Miss Howells breezed in during the morning and caught Roberta in a boyish hug, exclaiming: "We'll show that recreant brother of mine that it isn't safe to leave his little bride too long, won't we? What can we do that he would be sure to veto if he were here?"

"Peggy, you scamp! You don't suppose I'd do anything he really disapproves, do you?"

"Not at this stage. Wait a year or two. But there are plenty of things he does not care to do, and you just let him say 'No' whenever he chooses, and don't assert your own likings. He won't be fit to live with if you keep that up too long."

"Peggy, he called me Roberta this morning. He must have been clear out of patience just because I told him his boasted business assignment sounded to me more like a junket."

"Junkets and business are interchangeable terms," said Peggy. "There seems to be some occult relation between a banquet and a contract. It demands a truly masculine mind to grasp it."

"Anyhow, we'll get our fun out of it, won't we? I remember, now you speak of it, that there have been quite a few things he did not care to do. I suggested going to see the Shakespeare revival, and he almost had a chill; then I mentioned the opening of a new exhibition at the Art Institution, and he said he was all worn out. The Bentons asked us there for a game of '500' and he actually shuddered. I don't think that game is in the same class with auction, but it isn't fatal, is it?"

"That will make a fine layout for our program. The first thing is to get some good seats for the Shakespeare matinee. Where is the paper?"

"Fred put it in his pocket to read on the train."

"Second number: the institute. We'll go and see the pictures and look up the theaters afterward. Now, the Bentons, what shall we do about them?"

"Cross them off. It would not be very nice to invite them over when Fred is away, because they'd be sure to think it was because he isn't crazy about them."

"They'd be dead right," agreed Peggy, "but there is no need of making it too pointed. All right, we're off. Further announcements to be made later."

At the end of the week Howells was rapturously welcome by both girls and both in a breath demanded a full account of his doings.

"I had a good time," he replied, "a little strenuous for a sleepy-head like me, but we got together last night at the banquet and this morning the contract went through. I got 'black on white.'"

"Hurrah for you!" exclaimed Bobby, while Peggy gave her a knowing glance.

"And what mischief were you girls up to?" asked Howells gayly.

"The fates were against us. At the institution they were just between exhibitions and the Shakespeare revival did not survive to the day we wanted to go."

"So I suppose you took in the 'Follies'?"

"No; we are waiting to have you for our escort."

"You girls can't fool me, I just know you did something where I would not be included, now didn't you?"

"You guessed it," said Peggy, and Roberta chimed in: "We had fried onions every night while you were gone."—Chicago News.

WESTINGHOUSE CALLED "FOOL"

He often was called "Crazy George," even his father did not believe in his ideas, Commodore Vanderbilt pronounced him a "fool," yet George Westinghouse did not know enough to stop.

Born at inconsequential Central Bridge, N. Y., the boy spent most of his time in his father's machine shop. When he was 10, the family moved to Schenectady, and when 14 he invented the rotary engine.

The next year he entered the navy to serve in the Civil war, then was a cavalryman and later an engineer on the United States gunboats. After peace was declared, he attended college for two years, then resumed his experimenting. After a long effort with automatic and steam control, an article in a magazine gave the idea for the airbrake.

His father, also an inventor, thought George's ideas were "wild" and would not help, so the boy started out to raise capital. Railroad men would not listen. A long campaign brought an interview with Commodore Vanderbilt of the New York Central, who listened and finally said:

"Young man, I've no time to waste on fools—good day."

Finally two men put up $5000 each, Westinghouse managed the plant to manufacture brakes, a dispute arose and he was "frozen out." Now 20 years old and married, he faced defeat and hunger.

He became salesman for Alexander & Wright of Pittsburg, they to have the right to manufacture his re-railing invention. He interested Andrew Carnegie and others, a test of the brake proved its value, a company was organized, railroads bought and success came in his early twenties.

He purchased the rights to the alternating electric current, developed electrification of railroads, harrassed natural gas for fuel in manufacturing and perfected other inventions.

At the time of his death, the air brake was in use in all parts of the world, he was rich, and was honored by institutions and governments as one of the greatest benefactors of mankind.

Stories That Recall Others

Following a Will-o'-the-wisp.

Perhaps you've had the same experience as a couple of young people who started out to visit the ruins of an old mill. Leaving their car when impassable roads were reached, they started on foot in the general direction. After a few minutes they met a man and inquired the distance to the mill. "A mile and a half" was the laconic answer.

They walked for a considerably longer time and met a second man. Again they inquired the distance. "A mile and a half" he answered.

After about 30 minutes more walking they met two men and again, this time in a spirit of mischief, inquired the distance. "Three miles" was the answer. The hikers had not been walking in the wrong direction for after a time they reached the sought for spot.

An Embarrassing Moment.

Mrs. X., a hustling housekeeper, who finds time on Saturday night to go to a dinner club with her husband, does not entrust her tresses to the scorching iron of the hairdresser, but puts up her own hair in kids, and the result is lovely. Last Saturday late in the afternoon she found it necessary to hustle overstreet without a moment's notice and she knew her hair would be utterly ruined for the evening if she took it down. So she pulled a little back hair to the fore and put her hat on over her kids and started. Hairpins, usually unnecessary, were unthought of, and when she turned one corner a sudden gust of wind sent her hat into the gutter, and she experienced, she confessed, the most embarrassing five minutes of her life!

Dad Knew

The family was considering the plans for the new home while dad was considering the finances and wondered where he could reduce expenses in the new home plans. Finally he spied the nook just off the kitchen. "What's that?" he demanded.

"A breakfast room," his daughter explained.

Dad viewed it a minute and despite his daughter's objections had cut it off the plans, for, as he said, "nobody but mother and I get up in time for breakfast and we can eat it at the kitchen as we always have done."

Joseph Hauser, Philadelphia American first baseman, was married at Philadelphia to Miss Irene A. Kaye, of Milwaukee.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Gen. James B. M. Hertzog, who has come into the premiership of the Union of South Africa as a result of the overthrow of General Smuts in the recent elections, is a leader of the element that never has become completely reconciled to British rule in South Africa. He was born at Wellington, Cape Colony, in 1866. Trained for the bar, he became a judge in the Orange Free State in 1895. He served as a general in the Boer war, although with no outstanding distinction. Nevertheless, he emerged as one of the outstanding leaders of the Free State Dutch, and was a "bitter-ender" in the negotiation of peace terms. When responsible government was given to the Orange River Colony in 1907 he became attorney-general and minister of education. With the establishment of the Union of South Africa in 1910 he took a seat in the cabinet as minister of justice.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

The Chimney Bird

"Mother, mother," shouted Little Jack Rabbit one morning from the back porch, "a little bird is building a nest in the chimney over our sitting room."

"Dear, dear," answered Lady Love, the bunny boy's pretty mother, "I'm glad he didn't choose the kitchen. I'd be afraid to keep up the fire in our little stove, and then, of course, I couldn't bake another lovely Angel Cake," and with a sigh of relief, she hopped out of the pretty white bungalow.

"There he goes," shouted the little rabbit, pointing to a small bird racing through the air, now turning, now twisting like an acrobat in Uncle Lucky's circus. The next minute he returned and, with a quick turn, darted straight down into the chimney.

"Dear, dear," again sighed the anxious little lady rabbit, "I hope he won't get all sooty," and she hopped into the kitchen to wash the breakfast dishes.

The next minute out of the chimney came the little bird and flew straight for the Shady Forest. Circling close to the tree tops, he snapped off with his claws little dead twigs.

"I'll soon have my nest finished," he twittered as he passed the bunnies overhead on his way to the chimney.

Hopping over to the Little Red Barn, the bunny boy carried out the long wooden ladder and, setting it up against the side of the white bungalow, climbed up to the roof. Peeking down the chimney he watched the Chimney Bird fasten the little sticks together with a sticky substance in his mouth. Little by little he shaped them into a tiny nest, which he fastened in the same way to the side of the chimney.

"You're a wonderful little bird," said the bunny boy, admiringly. "Aren't you afraid of getting your feathers sooty?"

"Not a bit. They are a sooty-brown color anyway, except those on my throat and breast, which are grayish," answered the chimney bird, bracing himself with his short stiff tail feathers against the side of the chimney.

"I had to climb all the way up here to talk to you," sighed the little rabbit. "It was quite a climb."

"I guess that's the only way you can talk to me," answered Chimney Bird. "I never stop to rest except inside a chimney or a hollow tree."

"Dear me," exclaimed the bunny boy, "When do you eat, and where and when do you get your food?"

"Out of the air while flying," answered Chimney Bird. "I eat nothing but insects. There are plenty of them in the air and I snatch them up while on the wing."

Just then Lady Love called, "Little Jack Rabbit! I want you to go on an errand."

At once the little bunny boy hopped down to the ground, and after putting the ladder away in the Little Red Barn, hopped into the kitchen. And in the next story you shall hear where the bunny went. Perhaps it will be to the Three-in-One Cent store in Rabbitville, the nice shop where all the bunny ladies buy;

CITY HAD BUT LITTLE NOISE ON NIGHT BEFORE THE GLORIOUS FOURTH

The night before the grand and glorious Fourth passed without anything of an exciting nature in the city although there was the usual occasional sound of salutes and blanks shot off by people not willing to await the coming of the morrow.

One gang was active along the tracks of the New Haven railroad and lined the tracks with torpedoes, placing them in such a manner as to give an effect of drums when a train passed over them. Others about Franklin square opened activities shortly after midnight and were forced to keep an eye open for the "law" for the police were active trying to hold down the premature celebrators.

Throughout the night the occasional sound of explosives was heard and as morning dawned it grew in volume. Judging from the heavy sale of fireworks it is evident that be a noisy one for many, city officially has not made any plans to celebrate the day.

In fact excepting for these occasional rounds there was little of the unusual Thursday night and people seeking excitement were forced to listen to the radio and listen to the noisy demonstration made at Madison Square Garden as McAdoo gained a vote here and there and Smith picked up a few of the floaters.

Altogether it was a mighty tame night before, as remembered by the boys of some years ago and one would need to reach the heights of imagination to tell anything exciting about July 3, 1924.

Two sections of the town are to furnish the opportunities for a public observance of the Fourth.

CHAUTAUQUA TO RETURN; RUSSIAN SEXTETTE PROGRAM

A star programme by the Russian cathedral sextette made an admirable programme Thursday night for the closing number of the successful week of Chautauqua on the Academy campus. The well filled tent was enthusiastic in its applause for the music given by the sextette, which included two sopranos, two tenors and two bassos with the pianist.

The first part of the programme comprised church music in the Russian language given by the sextette and the male quartette.

Semi-classical numbers made up the second part of the programme, which included a soprano aria, three piano numbers, the sextette from Lucia and Nevin's familiar Mighty Lak' a Rose, with soprano solo and sextette.

For the third part the singers appeared in Russian costume, including in their selections The Song of India and the Volga Boat sang, which were finely rendered.

Superintendent Harry Hibschaum announced during the evening that the required 30 guarantors had been secured to bring Chautauqua back here next year and he expressed warm appreciation of the cordial relations that had marked the 1924 season in Norwich.

Organization for next year was effected by the election of James L. Case chairman; Judge John H. Barnes, vice chairman; Gilbert S. Raymand, treasurer and Louis M. Crandall secretary and chairman of ticket committee.

CONNECTICUT TEACHERS HIGHEST SALARY AVERAGE

Connecticut, which employed the second lowest number of rural teachers during 1922-23 of any of the New England states, paid the highest average salaries with the exception of consolidated schools which was second highest, according to a report of the bureau of education of the interior department.

Connecticut employed 569 rural school teachers during 1922-23, the average salaries being $1,244 in three or more teacher schools in villages and towns; $1,168 in consolidated schools; $1,088 in two-teacher schools; $1,072 in three or more teacher schools in open country and $975 in one-teacher schools.

The bureau bases the report on 29 reports from seven of the eight counties sent by supervising agents.

The per cent. of teachers in the one-teacher schools in Connecticut was 37.1; in three or more teacher schools in villages and towns, 34.3; in two-teacher schools, 15.1; in consolidated schools, 10.0, and in three or more teacher schools in open country, 3.5.

The total number of principals in the Connecticut rural schools was 87, 45 of whom were in elementary schools only on an average salary of $2,093; 38 were in organized high schools only, the average salary being $2,413; while four were in schools having both elementary and high school pupils, the average salary being $2,050.

SHOWS ROUGH CAMPAIGN METHODS OF THE PAST

On exhibition at Madden's cigar store on Franklin square are three items of long ago that have proven of interest to many people who have stopped to read them.

One of them, a political poster of the democratic party of March 7, 1844, is somewhat of a novelty for these quieter days, for the language used in the poster is certainly of fighting quality, calling Henry Clay, the Federal Whig candidate for president, many unpleasant names and comparing him with a stinking mackerel, a Sabbath breaker and a few other complimentary terms. The poster also takes a crack at Roger S. Baldwin and boosts the candidacy of Chauncey F. Cleveland, the democratic nominee for governor.

With this poster is another of the same year which goes even more into detail in describing the merits of the democratic candidate and picturing in colorful language the bad points of the Whig candidate.

A third letter is dated April 22, 1851, and was written by James T. Pratt, at that time chairman of the democratic state committee, urging all delegates to attend an important meeting at Gilmon's saloon in Hartford.

The posters and letter are owned by local residents and are interesting because of the demonstration of campaign methods used in those days, in contrast with the methods of today.

No Stop After Hitting Car

Charles Fish of 69 Pearl street reported to the police that while he was driving up Broadway about 9.45 Thursday night his machine was run into by a small coupe that was coming in the opposite direction. The mudguards of the left side of his machine were damaged but the occupants of the other car drove off without stopping.

PROPOSE LOW CANDIDATES NAMES BE DROPPED

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 3.—So serious had become the tieup in the democratic convention today that some of the leaders were discussing a proposal under which the low man on each ballot would drop out of the running until there was a nomination by the process of elimination. Under the rules of the convention such a plan could be adopted only by unanimous consent, however, and many were skeptical over the possibility of its acceptance.

There also was talk of adjourning tonight's session soon after midnight until 1 p. m. tomorrow, in order to give the namers for the various candidates a further opportunity to continue in conference and consider the possibility of a compromise.

The proposal that the low candidate on each ballot be dropped had aroused considerable discussion among the McAdoo leaders even before the dinner recess. David Ladd Rockwell, chief of the McAdoo campaign board, had conferred with several of his subordinates and the idea had reached the point where J. Bruce Kremer, national committeeman from Maniana and a McAdoo floor leader, had started to the platform to offer such a resolution.

Kremer was intercepted, however, by William Jennings Bryan and the move was postponed and an adjournment taken. The question was discussed during the recess by the McAdoo management in all its phases, its advisability and its possibility under the rules.

The method of approaching such a solution even was in doubt. It might be brought by an amendment to the rules sought outright, or through agreement by leaders looking toward such an amendment, or in several other ways. There was no unity of opinion whatever.

Another proposal discussed on the floor during the day was that the national committee publicly call on both McAdoo and Smith to withdraw, but the suggestion ran into stubborn opposition before it really got started. Franklin D. Roosevelt, manager of the Smith forces "poo-pooed" it and it was frowned upon in other quarters.

Irrigation is an important feature of the orange growers' industry. It is particularly necessary in Arizona and California, while the Florida groves can generally depend upon the rainfall.—Nature Magazine.

Used by the Romans

Centuries ago, long before the mullein grew in this country, the Romans dipped its dried stalk in suet to burn for candle light in processions. Greeks soaked its leaves in oil to use as wicks in their lamps.

NUMBER 4

59th ballot:

McAdoo 473.5; Smith 341.5; Davis 60; Ralston 42.5.

That was a loss of 21.5 for McAdoo with Smith unchanged, Davis gained 1 1-2 and Ralston gained 2.

The leaders stood this way on the 60th ballot: McAdoo 469.5; Smith 320.5; Davis 60; Ralston 42.5.

This was a loss of four for McAdoo and one for Smith, with Davis and Ralston unchanged.

Then, between ballots, the whole convention and the galleries were given opportunity to cheer together when Chairman Walsh introduced Lieutenant Maughan, who recently made the dusk-to-dawn flight across the continent. For five minutes he stood in the glare of the spotlights at the speaker's stand, bowing his acknowledgment of the reception given him.

After the result of the 60th ballot had been announced, C. M. Bryan of Memphis, Tenn., moved that the convention adjourn until 10 a. m. The viva voce vote on the motion appeared inconclusive, the volume of "Ayes" about equally that of the "Noes," and Chairman Walsh finally decided that the motion had been lost.

On the 61st ballot the leaders stood as follows:

McAdoo 469.5; Smith 335.5; Davis 60; Ralston 37.5.

McAdoo and Davis were unchanged, Smith gained five and Ralston lost five.

On the 61st ballot Smith took five votes from Ralston in Illinois, and the Smith delegates whooped it up again. It gave the New York governor a total of 25 of the 58 Illinois votes.

EAST ENDS WHITE WASH MILLERS IN INTERESTING BATTLE AT DUWELL FIELD

In a well played game at the Duwell Athletic Field Thursday evening, the league-leading East Ends shutout the Yantic Grain, 6 to 0. But two errors were made throughout seven exciting innings, the Millers being guilty of both occasions.

Harry Mills pitched his usual good game, holding his opponents to six hits and fanning the same number. He was master of the situation at all times, especially when hits meant runs. Twelve of the Grain team were stranded on the base paths, three men being on in one occasion, when the third man was retired.

The East Ends went out and won the game in the first inning, when Walz walked, went to third on a single by Leonard and scored on Riley's long hit to right field for two bases. But this was but a drop in the bucket. Ten of the East Siders went to bat in the second pounded out three singles and three doubles and scored five runs. It looked like the showers for Kegler, the Yantic Grain's star twirler, but he settled down thereafter, and held his opponents scoreless for the rest of the game.

The league-leaders' sensational fielding featured the game, Gabby Riley the human dynamo, performing especially well behind the bat. The East End outfielder also played in faultless style, gathering in five long flies which were labeled for extra bases. For the losers, Milton with six chances at short without an error and Kegler with two doubles and a single featured. The Score:

Echoes From the Stands
(By Matt)

Another good game.

It was the first shut out game of the season.

More games like these would assure the league of good attendances.

Coleman umpired his usual good game on balls and strikes and Hippo James showed marked improvement on his work on the bases.

Whacko Riley, the pride of the East Side, sent home the first run with a pretty double to right.

Milton played short and he should be kept there as his playing was sensational. He also hit well and was the star of his team and he could hardly be recognized as the Milton that had played third base.

A bright remark by one of the leading lights of the East Side was made when the Yankees first sacker jumped for a wild throw and the ump called the runner safe. The fan yelled: "He was up in the air when he came down."

It would have been a better game even though Joe Belair the regular catcher could not play. Whacko Riley took his place and caught a nice game. Whacko is a handy kid around the East Side.

Buzz Boyens acted as official scorer and Monk Williamson acted as cheer leader in his place.

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Captain New York Giants

Any inning. Two men out. Score 3 to 2. A fast runner is on first base. Is it advisable for the pitcher to throw the ball to first under such conditions to prevent this runner taking too big a lead?

When the score is tie, or the game very close, the situation in a ball game is critical. In such a situation, the pitcher should always throw to first base in order to prevent a runner on that bag stealing second, as a successful steal to second, followed by a base hit is likely to cost his team the game.

It is a good plan, in this situation, for the pitcher to throw to first, three or four times. That may sometimes tire his ambition about stealing second.

FIRPO LEAVES FOR U. S. TO PREPARE FOR BOUT

Buenos Aires, July 3.—Luis Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, sailed for New York today aboard the American legion to prepare for his fight with Harry Wills. Several hundred admirers were at the dock to bid the battler farewell. Firpo is accompanied by a retinue consisting of a secretary, private cook, sparring partner, business agent and publicity man. Juan Homs, the agent here for Tex Rickard who spent nearly three months persuading Firpo to return to the ring also sailed.

The Argentine heavyweight declares he did not propose to engage a trainer in the United States. He was not sure that he would even engage American sparring partners, relying upon his own ring-mate who is popularly known here as "Firpito", owing to his resemblance to Luis Angel. Firpo's private cook, who is also a good boxer, will be used as sparring material.

Firpo said that he was taking his own cook along to insure that his food will be prepared in the Argentine style to which he is accustomed. American cooking, he said, caused him indigestion.

American battler, "I am not going to "This time," declared the South accept advice from anybody but myself. I am going to be the architect of my own fortunes. Knocking out Wills will be the least of my trouble. What'll trouble me more will be people who want to tell me what to do and how to do it."

Boston, July 3.—Grimes pitched the hard hitting Brooklyn team to a 6 to 5 victory over Boston today. Cooney was knocked out of the box in the third inning and Lucas then finished the game well. Johnson's play was brilliant. Score:

BASEBALL AND ATHLETIC MEET WILL FEATURE THE HOLIDAY PROGRAMME

The Fourth, is usually a day when there are ball games galore and other athletic events throughout the eastern section of the state. This year there is a noticeable falling off in these events especilly in Norwich. Only three ball games are booked for the day in Norwich and one athletic meet. Of course in New London there will be several games, both morning and afternoon. There will be games in Jewett City, Danielson, Willimantic and Baltic during the day.

The Morning Game.

The game in the morning will be at the Providence Street grounds in Taftville when the Taftville A. A. team will clash with the New London Independents. This game is an annual event and always one well worth seeing. The game will be called after the parade in the morning or probably about 10 o'clock (d. s. t.). In the afternoon the Taftville team will play a return game in New London.

Riverview-Corbin Red Sox Game.

The real baseball attraction for the afternoon will be at the Riverview diamond when Riverview, fresh from a victory over the Sub Base, will take on their old rivals, the Corbin Red Sox of New Britain. There has always been keen rivalry between these two clubs and always a good game is played. The Riverview team will present a much changed appearance to local fans. Lefty Corcoran will do the pitching with Allard, Plainfield High school boy, doing the catching. Allard is a snappy little backstop and an exceptionally good hitter. Couillard will play first, Eddie Burns will be at second, and Joey Kendricks, former Ware Allegator, will be the Riverview short stop, taking the place of Dinty Moore. Harry Mills will play third, in the outfield will be Joe Belair, Harry Noel and Pop O'Neil. Paul Zemlic, the veteran who covered himself in all kinds of glory in the game with the Base on Wednesday will umpire. The game will be called at 2.45 o'clock.

Game at the Sub Base.

After losing its opening game to the State Hospital players on Wednesday afternoon at the Base diamond, the Sub Base coaches are grooming the team for two strenuous contests over the week end. The first of the two games comes on Fourth of July and the Worcester A. C. of Worcester will be the opposing nine. On the following day, Saturday, the Base will oppose another fast outfit in the St. Mary's baseball club of Stamford. Both games will furnish the gobs with plenty of opposition and in order to win the sailors will have to play better ball than they did against the Riverview nine in the opening game.

The problem of pitchers confronts the Sub Base and this problem can not be solved with the shrug of the shoulders. As far as can be seen, the Base depends upon Lefty Harrell to take the lion's share of the twirling assignments and unless another good hurler is unearthed in a short time, the Base will lose the majority of its games scheduled in successive days. Lefty Harrell can only occupy the mound but one game in about four or five days and he will be saved for the game with St. Mary's of Stamford on Saturday. The pitcher to be used for Friday's holiday game with the aggregation from Worcester is unknown at the present writing but it is understood that a marine stationed at the Base has shown a world of stuff and he may receive the chance to try his luck.

Athletic Meet and Ball Game.

In connection with the Fourth of July celebration of the West Side there will be an athletic meet and ball game at the Fairgrounds in the afternoon. In the morning there will be the two-mile road race. The road race will start after the parade from the corner of Connell and West Main streets and will go to the Fairgrounds and around the track for the finish. The entries for the marathon are Forest Lewis, Aubrey Brown, O. Berberick, Raymond Royce, D. Parsons, C. Robinson and L. R. Browning. Keen competition is expected in this event.

The athletic events in the afternoon are creating quite some talk among the West Siders and will be well worth seeing. E. J. Fritz of the local Y. M. C. A. will have charge of the events.

The ball game between the Benedicts and the Single men is going to be one of the outstanding features of the day's programme. The game, while not of the calibre of the semi-pro games scheduled for other parts of the county will be just as interesting and maybe more so. The Benedicts will have the following in their lineup: Irving Drake, former N. F. A. catcher; Gaudrow, Battery B player, pitch or third base; Jackie Kane, pitch or third base; Johnny Crowe, former N. F. A. player, first base; Kid Huntington, second base; John Griffith, short. In the outfield will be Gene Caulkins, Tom Dougherty and Pete Lasonde. Sam Slosberg and Paul Brown will be utility men.

The single men will lineup as follows: Harold Higgins c, O. Berberick p, Claude Robinson 1b, Aubrey Brown 2b, Arthur Armstrong 3b, Jim Kelly ss, Ray Royce lf, Fenton cf, Eddie Fedell rf.

BALTIC A. A. TO PLAY DUWELLS ON SUNDAY

The Baltic A. A. will oppose the Duwell team at the Duwell field on Sunday afternoon. The Baltic boys have been traveling at a fast clip during the season and should make the local boys extend themselves to the limit if they expect to add another win to the fast growing string of victories that they have credited to them already. Out of four starts Baltic has only been defeated once this season and that was only after a hard ten innings setto with Ashland of Jewett City at the opening of the season. Since then they have defeated Jewett City 9 to 5 and have turned back Groton and Danielson and are coming to Norwich Sunday expecting to repeat over the Duwells.

The local team suffered their first defeat last Sunday from Moosup after a hard battle by the score of 5 to 4, and showed the large group of fans that accompanied them to Moosup that they can play real baseball and are capable of meeting the best of them.

The Baltic team will lineup in the following order: Taylor at 1st base, Masse second, Roy at short, Shaw at third with Charon, Sullivan and Allard in the outfield. Papineau will toe the rubber, and Peloquin will do the receiving with Ridgway, Brief Steward and Despathey in reserve.

The Duwells will lineup the same as they have for the last three games, Whitney at third, McInness at short, Barry on second and Tim Coughlin at first, Smith, Shellott and Ringland will cover the outfield and Ellsworth, Nullholland, and Simcox will be held in reserve. Tillie Daniels, High school wonder will do the twirling and Joe Belair the catching. Nearly all the boys on both teams are well known and their names alone should speak for them.

BOROTRA AND LA COSTE REACH WIMBLEDON FINALS

Wimbledon, Eng., July 3 (By the A. P.)—Two dashing young Frenchmen, Jean Borotra and Rene La Coste, will fight out the finals for the Wimbledon lawn tennis championship in the men's singles. Both came through the semi-finals this afternoon.

In becoming a finalist La Coste put R. Norris Williams II, the only American survivor in the men's singles, out of the running, 6-1, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, while Borotra downed Louis Raymond of South Africa, 6-2, 6-4, 7-5.

The other notable match of the afternoon was in the women's doubles in which Miss Helen Wills, the youthful American champion, and her countrywoman, Mrs. George Wightman, took a well-played match from the other American pair, Miss Eleanor Goss and Mrs. Marion Z. Jessup, 8-6, 6-4.

Miss Wills played splendidly, especially toward the end, and the command which she and Mrs. Wightman were able to attain was enough to give them the slight advantage by which they won each of their points in a hard-fought match.

In the semi-final of the women's doubles Miss Kathleen McKane and Mrs. Phyliss Covell defeated Mrs. Lambert Chambers and Mrs. Shepherd-Barron 6-4, 6-4. The winners will meet Miss Wills and Mrs. Wightman in the finals.

Williams, last of America's big four to fall by the wayside in the men's singles, was put out of the running partly because of his own inability to control his strokes.

MURPHY HAS BIG DAY AT NORTH RANDALL

North Randall, Cleveland, O., July 3. (By the A. P.)—Tommy Murphy, the Syracuse reinsman, had a field day here today, winning two of the three "trophy" events on the Grand Circuit program.

He drove Erla Guy owned by Richard Baird, Hamilton, Ont., to a straight heat victory in the Fasig sweepstake, purse $2,000 and then won the trotting sweepstake with his own Czar Worthy, after Favonian won the first heat in 2.04 1-5, fastest time trotted this year.

Fred Edman let Murphy take Czar Worthy out too far in front in the second heat and could not overtake him with Favonian, but in the third heat he was handicapped when a tire blew out shortly after the start.

Erla Guy was one of four horses trained by Ben F. White which started in the Fasig as the White entry.

The Experiment, for three-year-old pacers, went into a fourth heat before it was decided. It went to Theodore Guy, owned by Fred Eschmidt, Chicago, after Bob McIver, owned by the Candler stables, Atlanta, won the first heat. Marion C. of the same stable, the second.

The judges took Doc Vail off Milton Wood and C. Lacey off L. D. in the second heat of the 2.12 pace, but put them back in the next for scoring ahead of the pole horses.

Yantic Makes Reply

Sporting Editor:

With your kind permission would like to reply to Bill McManus' article appearing in the sporting columns of your paper this morning. As usual Fitchville's reply is couched in such language as to be misleading to those who are not familiar with the make-up of this aggregation. As a matter of fact Fitchville as a baseball town went out of existence several years ago and even today is living on the splendid reputation gained by such old times as John Fields, Jerry Fields, Tim Fields, Dan Mara, Charlie Phillips, Francis Gribbins, Ernest Smith and Charles Kingberger. There men were real sportsmen and as good players as ever crossed a diamond but those days are gone as far as the present generation is concerned.

Yantic has been hearing considerable about the Fitchville team's ability as ball players but has not seen them display any real ability this season. While we dislike to start any rivalry between the two villages yet we cannot stand by and have our splendid team assailed, the best which take severe defeat from Colchester, it has been able to do has been to Lebanon and Gilmantown. Yantic has always backed up anything it has undertaken and with this backing we are going into the game with good clean sportsmanship, confident that Fitchville will return to its bed quite in a very sick and dejected manner. No, Fitchville, you cannot trim us and we will not kiss the $50 goodbye. Furthermore we are going to play our regular lineup which is fully capable of upholding Yantic's honor and reputation. It has already been rumored that the Fitchville team is looking to the state league for a battery, while we had an agreement that the teams would be made up of home talent. Of course we look for this sort of stuff from them.

Yours for clean sports
R. H. LYON.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

This being the day of all the days of the year when the mind is fixed on patriotic matters, attention is being called this morning to a summary of the United States army regulations for the display of the flag of the country. Many have noticed the carelessness with which the colors are sometimes displayed and it is to offset this carelessness insofar as may be possible that the summary is presented:

The national flag represents the living country and is considered as a living thing, the union being the honor point. The right arm is the sword arm and, therefore, the point of danger; hence, the right is the place of honor. The edge of the flag which is toward the staff is the heraldic dexter or right edge. The union of the flag itself, when in company with other flags, is always given the honor point—the marching right, the flag's own right, or an observer's left.

When the national flag is hung either horizontally or vertically against a wall the union will be uppermost and to the flag's own right and to the observer's left.

No lettering or emblems of any kind should be placed on the national flag.

No flag or pannant will be flown above the national flag.

When the flag is lowered to the ground from the staff no portion of it will be allowed to touch the ground, either in lowing or folding. Before being completely detached from the halyards the flag should be folded in the shape of a cocked hat.

In general the flag should be displayed flat. It should not be festooned over doorways, tied into a bow knot or fashioned into a rosette. When used on a rostrum it should be displayed above and behind the speaker's desk. It should never be used to cover the speaker's desk or draped over the front of a platform. For the latter purpose, as well as for decoration in general, bunting should be used, and since the union of the flag will always have the honor point, the colors should be arranged with the blue above, the white in the middle and the red below.

Old or wornout flags should not be used either for banners or any secondary purpose. When a flag is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, it should not be cast aside nor used in any way that might be viewed as disrespectful. If not, preserved, it should be destroyed as a whole, privately, preferably by burning or by some other method lacking any suggestion of irreverance or disrespect to it as a national emblem.

Those who are interested in the proper and respectful display of the flag will be curious to see today all flags displayed in Danielson and vicinity are properly displayed, it being an easy to make such display in proper manner as in any slip shod way.

Opening entertainments in Danielson's Chautauqua program for this summer were presented Thursday—the Fourth, opening with a parade at 9 o'clock this morning and continuing through the day and evening. It invites all who like patriotic demonstrations to be present. East Killingly has a reputation for splendid observances of the holiday, and the promise that this reputation shall be lived up to today. The more present, the greater the demonstration.

Dr. W. H. Judson, health officer, has issued a general vaccination order, effective at once, and to be complied with forthwith.

Exceptionally heavy motor traffic through Danielson was an evidence that holiday journeyers had started early.

A fish—a black bass—displayed in the window of a store here was caught out of Alexander's lake by William L. Smith, Jr. The fish weighed two pounds.

Local horsemen were at Windsor Thursday to attend races being held in that place.

John C. Lupes of New Bedford is spending the holiday with friends in Danielson.

Borough subscribers to telephone service are pleased that the war tax on toll line has been removed.

The holiday will find practically all the summer cottages on the shore of Alexander's lake occupied for the season.

Scores of Danielson automobiles were run over to Goodyear Thursday evening to witness the display of fireworks and to hear the concert.

A large dance crowd was at Wildwood park Thursday night when music was by the Century orchestra of Worcester.

Banks in Danielson will be closed today (Friday) in observance of the national holiday, and as has been mentioned, a holiday schedule of service will be in force at the post office.

Interest in the balloting at the democratic national convention had waned here Thursday morning, the show being too long to hold attention as it did earlier in the week.

PUTNAM

Attorney General Frank E. Healy, in an opinion given to State Health Commissioner Osborn, upholding the commissioner's action in forbidding bathing in Roseland Lake, South Woodstock, the source of the city of Putnam's water supply, apparently settles the question of bathing for this summer at least, as any further action by the trustees of the park will have to be by appeal to the courts.

William Edison, a Webster horse dealer, was found guilty by Justice Thomas Ryan of Thompson, of bringing a horse from Massachusetts into Connecticut without having the necessary permit. The state was represented by Attorney Howard C. Bradford of the State's attorney's office, Putnam, and the defendant by Attorney Joseph Love of Webster. A fine of $10 and costs was imposed. An appeal was taken to the superior court.

Dr. F. T. Baldwin, a veterinarian of Putnam and a representative of the state department, saw Edison driving a horse and leading another between North Woodstock and Quinebaug. The doctor knew the man as a dealer and notified the department of domestic animals at Hartford and also notified Officer Neri Coderre at North Grosvenordale. Coderre caught the man when he was returning through Quinebaug and detaining him until Howard Elliott, deputy commissioner of domestic animals arrived from Hartford and Edison was placed under arrest.

Edison claimed that the horse had bad feet and that he took it to a blacksmith in North Woodstock for treatment, but that the blacksmith had an injured hand and could not do the work, so he was taking the horse home again when apprehended.

It was claimed by counsel for the defense that the horse was being worked in Connecticut, but the state claimed that while being led it was not being worked. The court upon the latter view, or else did not wholly credit the defendant's story in finding him guilty.

Thursday afternoon, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Brown, Sawyer district, at 1.30 o'clock, their daughter, Miss Florence M. Brown, became the bride of Thaddeus Pitkin, of Putnam. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James Brown of Minneapolis, an uncle of the bride, and a former Putnam boy who was graduated from the Putnam High school.

As the wedding march was played by Mrs. Arthur Tourtellotte the bridal party came down the stairs and, passing through the living room and under an arch of flowers into the front room, were met by Rev. Mr. Brown under a bower of roses. The whole lower floor of the home had been decorated with roses, peonies and other summer flowers. The only guests were relatives and intimate friends of the two families.

Miss Lillian Nuttall of Danielson, was bridesmaid; the best man was Winne Brown of New York, a brother of the bride.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine, wore a bridal veil caught with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. The bridesmaid wore blue satin trimmed with ecru lace.

Following the ceremony a luncheon was served after which Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin left by automobile for Derby Line, Vt. The bride received many presents, including gold pieces, cut glass, silver, linen and household furniture.

The bride is a graduate nurse and was recently on the nursing staff of the Day Kimball hospital. She was graduated from the high school in 1909. The bridegroom came to Putnam some time ago from New Hampshire and was employed as a farm manager. He is now connected with the Putnam Foundry & Machine Corporation. Upon their return from a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Pitkin will reside in Putnam.

Twenty-two babies were examined at the well baby conference held at the high school, Wednesday afternoon. Dr. A. E. Ingraham, of the state bureau of child hygiene, was assisted in the examinations by Miss Viola Snyder, local school nurse, and Miss Clara Larned of Putnam. Some of the babies were examined for the first time, while others were present for observation or re-examination. The next conference will be held in August.

Fifty employes of the Southern New England Telephone company, including employes from the Norwich, Danielson and Putnam divisions, gathered in Odd Fellows' hall, Pomfret street, Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Alice Sherman, chief operator of the Putnam division, who was presented a 25-year service pin. The presentation was made by A. L. Osborn, traffic superintendent of the New London division. The employes of the local change presented Miss Sherman 25 beautiful roses. Dancing followed and during the evening refreshments were served.

The fine July morning, Thursday, brought together a large number of fruit growers from this section to attend the field trip under arrangement for some weeks. The growers met at the farm of Harold Easterbrooks, Dudley, Mass., where Prof. W. R. Cole of the Massachusetts Agricultural College discussed storage problems and the principles set forth in the address were applied to various farms visited. Leaving the Massachusetts farm, the party invaded Connecticut. The morning visits were paid to the farms of L. H. Lindeman, East Woodstock, and William Childs, Woodstock, where a stop was made for luncheon.

In the afternoon, stops were made at Dr. George B. McClelland's and Herbert Woodbury's, Woodstock Hill. The last stop was made at the home of Henry E. Buell, president of the Quinebaug association.

Word has been received that Allen Thayer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Thayer and grandson of Colonel and Mrs. H. J. Thayer of Putnam, that he has successfully passed the physical test and has been enrolled as a student in the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Young Thayer was graduated from Putnam high school last month. His grandfather was a colonel in the Connecticut National Guard and his father a captain in the Rhode Island National Guard, so the boy comes naturally by his liking for the life of a soldier.

Luke E. White, another Putnam boy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. White, has passed both mental and physical examinations and has entered the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis. Putnam has had a number of boys at the naval academy in recent years but Thayer is the first Putnam boy in many years to enter West Point.

Miss Elizabeth Rafferty is entertaining Miss Natalie Arnold of Bridgeport, a school friend at Laureleton Hall, Milford. Ensign William Rafferty, whose ship, the Utah, is in dry dock in Boston, is at home for the Fourth.

Miss Helen Higgerman of Providence is the guest of Mrs. C. W. Chase and family.

Miss Sybil Gilman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gilman, has returned from Springfield, where she recently was graduated from Bay Path Institute.

Charles Chamberlin of Genesco, Ill., is the guest of his cousin, Elbert Kinney, Center street.

State Treasurer G. Harold Gilpatric, Mrs. Gilpatric and children, and Mr. and Mrs. George W. Gilpatric, left Putnam by automobile at 9 o'clock Wednesday night, for their summer cottage at Juniper Point, Me., driving as far as Newburyport Wednesday night and finishing the trip Thursday. The family will remain at the cottage for the summer, but Mr. Gilpatric will return home next week.

Mrs. Annie C. Keith, and daughter, Miss Marguerite Keith, are at Oakland beach for a month.

Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Pease have as guests, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Madden, of Seneca Falls, N. Y.

Dr. and Mrs. Karl T. Phillips have returned home and are entertaining Mrs. Kendall and son Edward, of Newburyport, Mass.

Woodstock officers are working on a break and burglary that occurred at the store of Edgar Trask in the North village when a quantity of cigars, cigarettes and candy was stolen. The thieves ate their fill of ice cream before departing. Entrance was gained through a window.

Elbert Kinney and his sister, Miss Emma Kinney, have returned from a three weeks' trip to the middle west, where they visited their sister, Mrs. W. L. Beard at Oberlin, Ohio. In Cleveland Mr. Kinney purchased a new automobile through a local agency and the return trip was made in the new car.

Once upon a time a young man named Joseph had a coat of many colors. The coat was made by Jacob's pater. But this happened a long time ago in a land that we know not of.

But right here in Putnam, in a land whereof we do know, and at a time that is instant, a young man named Jacob has a hat given Jacob not by his pater, who lives in the other end of the commonwealth, but his partner, whose domicile is in the Bay State.

Whether Joseph was given his coat of many colors as a birthday present we do not know but we do know that Jake was given his hat of many colors for his birthday which was Wednesday. Nor is it known whether Joseph made any agreement to wear his varied-hued coat but it is known that Jake agreed to wear his many-hued hat for twenty-four hours, time out for time in bed.

The agreement and understanding between Hyde and Jake, Putnam's sole theatrical managerical combination, was that each should give the other a birthday present and whatever was given the other should wear. A short time ago Hyde's natal day arrived and he was presented a necktie. He donned it and wore it and it made a noise like colored fireworks but for twenty-four hours, time out in bed, he kept it on.

Wednesday Hyde was ready with a present for his partner. At the meeting of the Rotary club at noon, Wednesday, the presentation was duly made. From an innocent looking hat box was taken a hat, the birthday present Hyde had selected for Jake. The hat was of generous proportions. Light green predominated but this interspersed with chrome yellow, baby blue, African black, Florida orange and we have no banana. The decoration in artistic harmony with the various other colors was a bright fireman's red feather.

There is a man about town, he wishes he wasn't, and his name is Jake but his friends will not allow him to be still. He is under the hat and will be until relieved from wearing Hyde's colors when the whistles blow for noon, standard time. There will be no more birthdays for Hyde and Jake until next year so for twelve months horses can again go without blinkers.

Following are the pupils in Putnam schools who had a perfect attendance record, being neither absent nor tardy during the term just ended.

NEW LONDON MAN SOLD BOOZE IN ROOM IS HELD UNDER BONDS OF $1,000

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, July 3.—George La Brizzi was before the police court today and was held in bonds of $1,000 for appearance in the court a week from next Saturday to answer for selling liquor contrary to law. There are two charges against La Brizzi—selling and keeping for sale on the 23d of June and on another date not specifically stated in the complaint. He furnished a surety on his bond in the person of his mother, who has real estate on Jefferson avenue.

La Brizzi was implicated in the sale of liquor on testimony brought out on the prosecution of Dave Palitz already bound over for the selling of liquor in his room in the Ideal apartments, Bank street. Agents of the state's attorney's office declared that they bought liquor there from Palitz and from another man, though they did not know the other man. Palitz disclosed that the room he occupied was shared with La Brizzi and Pinky Burns and a fellow known as "Plimp." This gave the authorities a clue to the occupants of the room. La Brizzi had business in New York immediately after the agents called there. Indeed he is said to have departed from the city by boat the night of the day the liquor is alleged to have been sold. He came back and the police hailed him into court on a warrant. No testimony was presented today by either the state or the accused, so the defense La Brizzi will make is unknown.

Three motorists were charged with violation of the parking laws of the city. Fred Romanoff, ordered to appear for parking in the restricted section of Bank street, gave a bond of $5 to insure his appearance in the court this morning, but he failed to show up and his bond was forfeited to the city treasurer. Augustus Goodwin was fined $5 for parking on State street. Accused said he was consulting a lawyer when he made his long tarry but he denied that he remained as long as the arresting officer, Clyde Murphy, said he was tarrying. The court accepted the statement of the officer and Mr. Goodwin paid his money.

Fred Benvenuti, with an office on Main street, remained a few minutes overtime and he was charged with a violation of the laws of the city. Officer Murphy ordered him to court also, but he told the court of the effort of Mr. Benvenuti to avoid violation of the ordinance always in the past and said that he would not have ordered him into court today had he understood that Benvenuti was the owner of the automobile. Mr. Benvenuti was delayed a few minutes writing a letter. Judgment was suspended 24 hours. A complaint against Clifford Chamberlain, for violation of the parking ordinance was nolled.

The Title Guaranty & Trust Company, New York, executors of the will of James D. Lynch, has sold a building lot on Ocean avenue to L. Tracy Sheffield.

William Salering has sold a parcel of land on Alewife avenue, Ocean Beach, to Michael L. O'Connell.

Bindloss H. Hilliar has sold a building lot, corner of Crystal avenue and Fourth street, to Stephen and Helen Kalinowska.

Harold Pinney, Howard street, son of Captain of Police and Mrs. Chas. A. Pinney, has a clerical position with the Winthrop Trust Company.

Arthur H. Rudd, proprietor of the bathing concession at Ocean Beach, complained to the police this forenoon when a resident at the beach solicited patronage along the boardwalk by offering bathing suits for hire and agreeing to provide dressing rooms at the residence of the solicitor. Patrolman Frank Philopena took the fellow into custody because the latter did not possess a license to peddle. At the police station the man was not held as he signified his intention of respecting his offense.

There was a slight improvement noted today in the condition of Mrs. Hilda Kallstrom, 40 Gorton street, who was seriously injured last Sunday when knocked down by a public service automobile.

James O'Donnell, Darrow street, a former member of the New London police force, is watchman at the estate of Edward C. Hammond in Waterford.

The funeral of Edward F. Steward, of Waterford, was held this afternoon at 4 o'clock at 48 Shapley street. The services were conducted by Rev. George W. Bowden, of Quaker Hill. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Ross Burrows, night clerk at the Y. M. C. A., complained to the police early this morning that George Barclay was at the association rooms, intoxicated, and was creating a disturbance and annoying the clerk. Burrows asked for the arrest of Barclay, but when Sergeant John Cavanaugh arrived at the building Barclay had disappeared.

Leslie Morans, 74 Huntington street, Meriden, was taken into custody this morning by Motorcycle Officer William Babcock, charged with violation of the automobile law in passing intersecting streets without reducing the speed of his machine or sounding a signal. Morans will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

John Quinn was arrested at his home, 690 Bank street, this morning, charged with violation of the liquor law. The evidence consisted of three one-gallon glass containers, an empty one gallon alcohol can, a quantity of corks and two bottles partially filled with hooch. Besides Quinn the raiding officers took into custody Anna Bennett Kennedy Erickson, charged with conducting a disorderly house and Albert Erickson, who claims to be the husband of the woman, charged with intoxication. All three were held in default of a surety on their respective bonds for appearance in the police court tomorrow morning.

The arrests were made by Sergeant Nelson Smith and Acting Sergeant Edward Daniels, who had been watching Quinn's place some time.

Quinn has been arrested before charged with violation of the liquor law, the last time being on the night of May 25th when a series of raids were conducted by County Detective William Lewis and Prohibition Enforcement Agent Joseph Fitzpatrick. In the police court the following day a fine of $200 on each of two counts and a jail sentence of 10 days on each of the two charges were imposed by Judge Victor Prince. Quinn gave notice of an appeal and furnished a surety on his bond of $1,000 for his appearance at the next term of the court to common pleas in Frank Scialabba, owner of the property where Quinn is alleged to have dispensed his liquor.

John Stock, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was owner of the speed launch Vereign, captured under gun-fire several weeks ago by the revenue cutter Seminole when the speed boat was found off this port with a cargo of 2,000 cases of Scotch and rye whiskey. Stack sustained a bullet wound in the groin, which had since kept him under treatment at Lawrence hospital. He was able to leave the institution today and return to his home. The Vereign is at a moorage at the customs house pier and the valuable cargo is in storage in the sub-cellar of the customs house. The master of the Vereign is at liberty on bonds of $15,000, pending his trial in the United States district court in Hartford, the crew of 11 have been discharged.

Mrs. Frank Nugro and infant son, of Westerly, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were able to go to their home today.

Building Inspector Benjamin R. Lincus is of the opinion that the east wall of the building 106 State street, is in a dangerous condition because of the removal of the Garfield block. The Schnare Construction Corporation, Springfield, Mass., who are erecting the new structure and Attorney Herbert R. Smith owner of the building believed to be endangered by the removal of the Garfield block, have been notified of the supposed dangerous condition.

The master barbers recently caused the price of hair cuts to be increased from 40 cents to 50 cents every day excepting Saturday, when the price was 60 cents. Now they have decided to make the price of haircuts 50 cents every day in the week. It was found by the added cost of haircuts Saturdays that business fell off that day considerably. One barbership which employs five men left the union ranks because of the increase in prices and that action also brought about the abandonment of the increased cost on Saturdays. Another shop that employs three barbers is contemplating leaving the union ranks.

The state police and Humane Agent John Sweesy are conducting an investigation for the purpose of determining whether F. A. Comstock's pair of big work horses that were found dead, side by side, at the foot of Evergreen Mountain yesterday, were driven over the mountain side by malicious persons or slipped and fell down the 45-foot incline. So far the authorities have not obtained any tangible clues that might lead to the incriminating of persons in the death of the valuable animals. It is generally believed that the horses were either frightened so that they plunged over the mountainside or else were driven by vandals at such speed that they did not realize when the edge of the mountain was reached and then plunged to their death.

Tonight was one of the noisiest for the evening before the Fourth that has been known in this city in a long time. There has been no year in any when it was so easy to get explosives for there never were so many places where they were sold. One dealer had as many as a dozen branch places for the sales.

There is talk among the regulars that an effort will be made before another year to secure a change in the city ordinance that permits any one who applies for the privilege of selling fireworks to get a license upon the payment of the fee charged by the city.

Donald Cameron, a florist in this city some 25 years ago, is here with his wife and daughter for a visit with friends.

Wednesday night young men threw giant crackers so near the windows of the stable of the Perry Ice company that the horses were frightened and this morning when the barn was opened it was found that two of the horses there had broken the halters that kept them in the stalls. LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE
TO PROPERTY OWNERS AND TENANTS

All persons are earnestly requested to clean their premises of all old papers, excelsior, straw, old wood and rubbish, and see that it is carted away to the dumping ground or destroyed before 6 p. m., July 3, 1924.

If all property owners will assist the fire department in this matter of removing rubbish, a large fire may be prevented and small fires reduced to the minimum.

The following suggestions, if carried out, may prevent a conflagration:

Take in under cover all barrels, boxes, etc., or any inflammable material that is liable to add to the danger.

Close all cellars, windows and airways where a match or crackers could be carelessly dropped.

See that all old papers, hay, excelsior, etc., is removed from under the gratings in your sidewalks.

Learn your nearest fire alarm box and ask someone to teach you how to send in an alarm, if you have not been instructed, and use it if necessary.

If you have a telephone in your home or place of business, it may be quicker to telephone to some fire station, being carful to give the correct locality and number of house.

Place the numbers of the fire department telephones on your instrument, so as to be ready. These should always be there ready for any emergency.

Connect your garden hose and have it ready. Also bring your ladder from its usual place and have it ready to get to the roof of your house, where most of the trouble will be, as Norwich is a city of shingled roofs

Chief of Fire Department and Fire Marshal. jy1d

NORWICH TOWN

Having passed three weeks at the home of his parents on West Town street, Sidney Hyde Avery left Saturday afternoon for a brief visit with friends in Worcester, Mass., before going to Schenectady, N. Y., to take an office position with the General Electric Co., Tuesday morning.

Mr. Avery was a member of the 1924 graduating class at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, the commencement exercises having taken place Friday June 6th. He not only ranked high in his studies at the institute; but when graduating from the Norwich Free Academy in 1919, won a prize of $40 in physics, also a prize of $15 in mechanical drawing, as well as receiving honorable mention in French.

After successfully completing the first three years of his college career, Mr. Avery spent about 15 months at the Schenectady plant for practical experience in connection with his studies. At the expiration of that period he resumed his course at the institute where he spent another year in study preparatory to graduation.

Mr. Avery is a very ambitious young man and has been liberally rewarded for his efforts during his school years. He is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank S. Avery. With his parents and brother Arthur and his sister, Miss Louise Avery he spent one day while here at the home of his uncle and aunt, Rev. and Mrs. Frank Fuller, of Stafford Springs formerly of Norwich.

Rev. Mr. Fuller who married Miss Mary Avery, is pastor of West Stafford Congregational church. Before locating in Schenectady, Mr. Avery while visiting his home, spent a few days in New York on business.

Mrs. James E. Briggs (Miss Isabell Robinson) of Berkeley, California, who left June 9th, to visit for several week among relatives and friends in Massachusetts and Connecticut, was the guest over last week end at the home of Mrs. Josephine Rogers and Miss Mabel Rogers, of West Town street. Mrs. Briggs, a former Norwich resident had not visited here before in ten years. Sunday the Misses Rogers and their guest spent the day at Ocean Beach.

The church night service at the First Congregational church this week was a preparatory service. There will be the reception of new members Sunday next. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will also be observed Sunday morning, the pastor officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Peck of Westchester motored to Norwich Town recently and with Mrs. George A. Peck and son, Crosby, continued on to Preston City where a picnic luncheon was eaten at the home of Mrs. Hattie Rudge.

JUDGMENT FOR RECEIVER TO RECOVER $33,142.05 ON BOND

Judgment for R. W. Perkins, receiver of the Shore Line Electric Railway company, to recover $28,206 with interest, making the full amount $33,142.05, from the Maryland Casualty company, was handed down on Thursday by Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin of the superior court, before whom the suit of Receiver Perkins against Louis I. Levinson of New York and the Casualty company was tried in this city recently.

Levinson made a contract in July, 1920, to buy and remove the rails and angle irons of a section of the Shore Line system that had been junked and the Casualty company gave a bond for his faithful performance of the contract. The total amount to be paid was $340,000 of which 5 per cent was paid at the time of making the contract and the balance was to be paid at the rate of $45 per ton as fast as the material was removed by Levinson. The whole amount was to be paid by the first of January, 1921.

The market for old rails dropped out of sight after Levinson had taken only a part of the junked material and about $160,000 worth was never taken up, removed or paid for.

In his memorandum of decision, Judge Marvin says in part:

"This contract is clear enough when taken by itself without going into the surrounding circumstances, and that construction obviously should be adopted which gives effect to the intention therein expressed. No layman could read the contract in question without being satisfied of at least one point, namely, that it was the intention of the parties that the surety could, should not in any event, either directly or indirectly, be made responsible for the payment for the track material purchased by Levinson; and yet to fasten some such liability upon it is the only object of this suit. The court cannot see how such construction can be adopted without doing violence to the plain intention of the purpose expressed in that instrument.

Levinson agreed to take 7,841.73 tons and actually took and paid for 789.03 tons, leaving a balance of 7,052.70 tons of this balance the receiver subsequently removed about 3,134 tons at a cost of from $10 to $8 per ton and sold them at $28 a ton, or $87,752 in all. This material netted him on the average $19 a ton, or a loss of $26 a ton, or $81,484 in all. The average cost of removal of 3,134 tons at $9 was $28,206, for which both defendants are responsible. The rest of the rail was never removed and was sold as part of a going electric railroad so that the gain or loss to the receiver from Levinson's failure to remove this portion of the track material is wholly problematical.

Under these circumstances, the court is of the opinion that judgment should be entered against the Maryland Casualty company for the amount the receiver paid for removing the rails, i. e., $28,206 with interest of $4,936.05, or $33,142.05 in all.

ADMIRAL STANTON WILL BE 90 ON JULY 18TH

Admiral O. F. Stanton, U. S. N., retired, now a resident of New London, will celebrate his 90th birthday July 18th.

This week's issue of the submarine base newspapers gives the following sketch and tribute to the distinguished naval officer.

On July 8, 1853 the East India squadron under the command of Captain Mathew Calbraith Perry bearing treaties from Pres. Fillmore of the United States, dropped anchor off the coast of Japan in Yeddo Bay. On board the U. S. S. Susquehanna, one of the ships of the expedition was a young midshipman, fresh from the Naval Academy, not yet graduated to commission rank.

That midshipman was destined to see nearly four generations come and go, to witness many sights almost as strange and significant as that which he witnessed on that morning in '53, and in this eventful era in the world's history, still to live and maintain a lively interest in naval affairs. He was to attain the highest rank in the Navy and to become the oldest living graduate of the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

This officer is Rear Admiral Oscar F. Stanton, U. S. N. Retired, for the past thirty years a resident of New London. On July 18th he will celebrate his 90th birthday, and while it is regretted that his health will not permit the demonstration of esteem and affection that his many friends would like to make at his home in his honor, the officers and men of the bases take this opportunity of expressing their deep regard for and good wishes to the dean of the Navy, and to offer their sincerest congratulations.

A full account of the eventful and rich experience of Admiral Stanton as an officer in the U. S. Navy would occupy volumes. It would cover nearly half of the entire history of the navy, and in many ways, the most eventful half. Entering the Naval Academy in 1849, he graduated in 1853, and joined the now famous Perry expedition; From the Susquehanna he was transferred to the Saratoga, preferring this sailing vessel to the steamer. He became a "Master" in 1855 and lieutenant in 1856.

On the Paraguay expedition, in 1858, he served aboard the Memphis, and later to the West Coast of Africa, on the Supply. During the Civil war his service was on board the famous old St. Mary's, the Marion, and, during the Union naval activities on the James river, on the Tioga, then as lieutenant commander.

Few of the officers who fought with Farragut in the West Coast Blockade squadron are now living. Admiral Stanton was then in command of the U. S. S. Pinola in the memorable battle of Mobile Bay.

From the period of the Civil war until his retirement in 1884, Admiral Stanton's duties were many and varied. In '65 he was Ordnance Officer at the Navy Yard, New York; in '67 he instructed at the Naval Academy, and later taught navigation on board the Santee. He became commander in this year and served successively as navigator of the Tahoma and of the Purveyor. He commanded the Vandalia in '71, the Monacacy and the Yantic of the Asiatic Station from 1872 to 1874.

As senior aide to the commandant he served at the Norfolk Navy Yard from 1874 to '76. He attained the rank of Captain in 1879, was Executive Officer of the Naval Home, Philadelphia, 1881-1884, commanded the U. S. F. S. Tennessee 1884-1886 and the Naval Station (as it was then called) at New London from 1887 to '89.

During 1890-'91 he was Commandant of the Training Station, Newport and became a Commodore. He then served successively as Governor of the Naval Home, in command of the South Atlantic Squadron, during which he was wrecked on Roncador Reef with his flagship, the Kearsarge. He transferred his flag to the San Francisco. In July of 1894 he was retired with the rank of Rear Admiral, but later, during the Spanish American War, again commanded the Naval Station at New London. He has made New London his home since his retirement from active duty.

WASHINGTON SPEAKS FROM MOUNT VERNON

An Independence Day Thought.

(Copyrighted.)

My son, you boast of liberty.
You wave a flag and sing a song,
Then dare to call this loyalty;
Wake up, my boy, you're wrong, all wrong!

My boy, the liberty we bought
Was dearly paid with blood and life.
With thoughts for you, we left unsought
The hands abroad that kindle strife.

Just take a tip from me, my boy;
At home, let charity begin;
So fill your brother's heart with joy
That my God-given aims may win.

My son, if you make U. S. A.
A model, loving family,
You've done a man's work, let me say,
And lived a life most loyally.

'Tis this the lesson we must show,
To those who seek true liberty,
With this in heart and love aglow
Wave flags and sing in unity.

THE DAY WE CELEBRATE.

We may have got more civilized
An' sensible of late,
In honorin' that day of days—
Th' Day We Celebrate,
But if you want July the Fourth
To ooze a thrill in me,
Just advertise an old-time Fourth,
Like them that used to be!

Now, don't misunderstand me, folks,
I favor safe-an'-sane;
I'd awful hate to have it said
I'm out promotin' pain.
But boys don't have th' fun today
Like—for example—that
Of shootin' crackers by th' bunch
In gran'pa's Cleveland hat.

An', oh, how well I recollect
Th' blacksmith's anvil, too,
That thundered forth from Hermit Hill
Before th' sun peeped through.
It roared a grand an' gay salute,
Blue smoke clouds filled the air,
An' Mother Earth she quivered like
A baby with a scare.

From Hermit Hill th' men could see
Th' Valley Road, as down
Its dusty way th' wagons come
A-bringin' folks to town.
Afpast th' Depot to th' Square,
Th' country people drove,
Then took their way out Second street
To old Campmeetin' Grove.

First thing they found a place to hitch
Then baskets jammed with food
Flowed from th' wagon beds—enough
To feed a multitude.
Th' children romped among th' trees,
Th' old folks set an' fanned
An' broke their church vow keepin' time
To dance tunes by th' band

Then come th' Exercises—Ah,
In Memory now I beem
To hear old Declaration read
An' catch th' eagle's scream.
This here new-fangled Fourth may be
More sober an' sedate,
But, oh, I'm hungry for th' Day
We used to celebrate!

M'ADOO TOUCHES NEW HIGH LEVEL AT DEM. CONVENTION

Ran His Total Up to 530 Votes in 69th Ballot But Drops Back to 528 1-2 in 70th, the Final Ballot Taken Just Before Adjournment Late Last Night—Ralston and Cox Withdraw From Race—Party Leaders Considering Arministration of Heroic Measures to Break Deadlock—Convention to Reconvene at 10:30 O'Clock This Morning—Group Leaders Believe Compromise Nominee Only Hope.

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 4.—Two Fourth of July sessions of the democratic convention failed to produce a nominee for the presidency and tonight, at the end of seventy ballots, the party leaders began seriously to consider the administration of heroic measures to break the deadlock.

During the day two favorite sons had been eliminated. McAdoo had reached a new high record to within 20 votes of a majority of the convention, Smith again had touched his high-water mark and a series of maneuvers on the convention floor had rekindled the animosities of the warring groups and, apparently made a compromise more difficult.

The leaders of the groups which are outside both McAdoo and Smith camps believed they might succeed tomorrow in convincing the managers for both candidates that further balloting would be futile under the present lineup and the only hope of a decision was an agreement upon a compromise nominee.

Efforts were being made after tonight's adjournment to bring some of the principal supporters of the two leaders together in a conference with a definite plan for compromise under consideration. Various compromise candidates were to be put forward in the conference should it first be found possible to convince the conferees that neither McAdoo nor Smith can be nominated.

In a second and entirely different plan to break the deadlock and release the convention from its embarrassments was under consideration in othre quarters. Under it increased pressure would be brought to bear to drive out the running favorite sons who have locked up large reservoirs of voting strength which might otherwise go to the leaders.

So far has this proposal progressed that several delegates have drafted formal resolutions for the elimination on succeeding ballots of those having the fewest votes until only two or three remain. It seemed likely tonight that should tomorrow's balloting follow the inconclusive course of today's, a floor fight might be made for a composite eliminatoin plan worked out by several of the party chiefs who believe that only by such drastic measures can a nominee be selected.

As the delegates assembled for the night session the band appropriately played "It May Be For Years and It May Be Forever." The session came to order nearly on time and prayer was offered by the Rev. Paul F. Landis, minister of the John Hall Memorial of New York. The first business of the session was the calling of the roll of states for the sixty-seventh ballot. Chairman Walsh then had read a communication from W. G. McAdoo. It was read by unanimous consent.

"The convention today voted quite properly against a proposal to invite all candidates to address it" the letter said. "Subsequently a proposal to invite the governor of New York to address it was rejected by a vote of the convention."

Mr. McAdoo wrote he was sure the action was because of the disposition to conclude the business. But it concluded with a suggestion to his friends at the convention that they invite Governor Smith to make an address.

Gavin McNab then, on behalf of the California delegation, asked that the vote by which the convention refused to invite Governor Smith be reconsidered. He proposed a unanimous consent that Governor Smith be invited to speak at 10 o'clock.

Meanwhile Michael Igoe of Chicago, a Smith delegate was recognized, after much shouting and distress. Meanwhile Chairman Walsh was walloping the celebrated light-headed gavel so vigorously that the head of it flew off again and this time it bounced on the head of a man standing immediately below the speaker's stand. A policeman and a delegate supported the victim while he regained his senses and said his name was Herman Schoernstein, of New York, chairman of the Twenty-third district committee.

Out of the storm of shouting, gesticulating and bawling which followed McNab's motion, followed demands for the regular order, which the chairman sustained, and the clerk was ordered to go on with the roll call.

While the balloting was going on the scouts went over the floor to learn if there was any disposition to withdraw on the part of Robinson, Saulsbury, Baker, Davis, Owen, Glass or Underwood. Governor Brandon seemed to sum up the sentiment when he shouted with indignation: "Leave Underwood? Why we will be here voting for him when they kill hogs in the fall if necessary."

On the 67th ballot the leaders stood this way: McAdoo 490, Smith 326.5, Davis 75 1-3. This was a loss of five for McAdoo; a loss of two for Smith and a gain of one for Davis.

The 68th ballot showed these results for the leaders:

McAdoo 488.5; Smith 326.5; Davis 72.5

McAdoo lost one and a half. Smith was unchanged and Davis lost three.

There was a challenge on the vote of Tennessee cast under the unit rule and C. M. Bryan of Memphis was recognized for five minutes to explain why the minority in Tennessee contends the unit rule does not apply. It was his contention that the mandate of a convention could not bind a delegation further than a primary, and that each individual delegate has a right to vote his own convictions, Mr. Bryan contended.

There was a break in West Virginia in the 68th ballot. The 16 which had been going solidly to J. W. Davis, broke up. One went to Baker and one to Glass. The remainder stayed with Davis.

In the 68th ballot Will Rogers, the cowboy comedian reporter, got one vote. It was a newspaper gallery joke, in which a delegate was put up to include his name in a ballot.

Michigan changed her vote in the 69th ballot, giving 25 to McAdoo and 5 for Smith. The McAdoo people made the most of it for a demonstration.

North Carolina re-entered Josephus Daniels with two and a half votes, one-half of which came from the McAdoo column; one from Underwood and one from Davis.

Oklahoma, which had been voting steadily for Senator Owen switched to McAdoo.

During the demonstration over the change in the Michigan vote, Smith delegates in the Pennsylvania delegation became aroused when a delegate tore down two pictures of Governor Smith and threw them down on the floor. In a fight that followed over the state standard, Mrs. Maidee B. Renshaw, of Pittsburgh, was struck on top of the head by the standard. She was slightly wounded and was removed from the hall after her wound had been dressed.

On the 70th ballot, Governor Sweet of Colorado, challenged the accuracy of the announcement of the chairman of the Colorado delegation and a poll was ordered at the end of the roll call.

The Missouri vote also was challenged and it was passed to await a poll at the finish. North Carolina dropped Daniels on this ballot, adding a vote and a half to McAdoo and one vote to Davis.

West Virginia went back solidly to its native son, John W. Davis, thus taking one vote from McAdoo and one from Smith at 12:20 eastern daylight time the convention adjourned until 10:30 Saturday morning.

FIVE BALLOTS CAST AT AFTERNOON SESSION

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 4.—In another hectic session the democratic national convention today saw the withdrawal of Ralston and Cox from the race, failed as usual to make much progress toward a nominee and developed a semblance of unanimity on only one subject—that it wanted to adjourn for dinner.

Accordingly it did adjourn the afternoon session to reassemble at 8.30 o'clock.

In the meantime, however, the McAdoo forces had by the exercise of their one-third veto power defeated a proposal that candidates be invited to exhibit themselves to the convention tonight and speak. Then the McAdoo forces turned and defeated a proposal that Governor Smith have the opportunity to speak.

The developments of the day's session merely served to emphasize the deadlock in which the two leaders find themselves.

Senator Ralston of Indiana, withdrawing from the race was quickly followed by James M. Cox of Ohio. The thought probably was that the line of favorite sons which has been commanding quite a vote might follow the example and give the convention a chance to make a solid choice between McAdoo and Smith. Nevertheless, Saulsbury, Ritchie, Glass, Robinson and the other favorite sons remained in the race.

Realizing that some heroic measures must be taken to break up the impasse, the attack on the two-thirds rule was being discussed again, and when the convention adjourned a resolution was ready to be offered proposing an abandonment of the unit rule.

During the day session there were five ballots during which Governor Smith at his greatest strength polled 338 1-2 votes, the most he has ever polled at any time in the convention. McAdoo's high vote during the day's session was 495 votes which was the highest he had mustered since the 48th ballot. It was, however, 10 1-2 short of his high water mark reached in the 40th ballot.

CONCUSSION OF BRAIN FROM FLYING GAVEL

Madison Square Garden, N. Y., July 4.—Herman Schoenstein of New York, suffered concussion of the brain tonight, when he was struct on the head by Chairman Walsh's gavel as it flew off the handle and bounced into the delegate space in the democratic national convention.

Schoernstein, taken to the convention hospital after the accident, was unconscious for five minutes.

Dr. Paul Sahlens of the hospital staff diagnosed his case as concussion of the brain. The head of the chairman's gavel has been flying off the handle at least once a day.

Schoernstein's condition was pronounced not serious and the physicians said he could go home in a few hours.

Payment of Bills Taken From Courts

Sweeping Changes in Disbursements of Moneys of County Courts Throughout State.

New Haven, July 4.—Sweeping changes in the disbursement of the moneys of county courts throughoutthe state were put in effect today by the state comptroller. In the future the payment of all bills will be taken out of the hands of court officials with the single exception of witness fees. All bills will be paid by the comptroller, thus giving him complete and absolute control of all funds. The most important reason given for this change is a desire to make it impossible for any "leaks" to occur in the disbursement of funds.

In addition, the comptroller has ordered changes in the procedure of criminal prosecuting offices. In the future all accounts must be kept up to date. No tardiness will be permitted in the preparation and filing of accounts.

Don't Judge From Appearances

The earth looks flat enough! That's why so many thousand years came and went before our ancestors even suspected the terrestrial globe of being round. The eyes deceived them!

Don't depend upon appearnces to guide you right. Don't buy goods on the strength of looks alone. Merchandise with a well-known name has the call. Only the maker of a good product can afford to advertise his name. Attempts to popularize unworthy goods cannot succeed.

Wise merchants and manufcturers seek the good papers to tell the stories of their wares. The publishers seek the reputable advertisers for their readers' guidance. Well informed buyers seek news of good merchandise through the columns of The Bulletin.

This proves the value of advertising. Neither advertiser nor publisher can prosper without your patronage. Therefore, it is to their advantage to cater to you. They do it, too.

It is distinctly to your advantage to be guided by the messages they lay before you—the advertisements in The Bulletin. Read them regularly!

SOUTHERN M. E. CONFERENCE ADOPTS UNIFICATION

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 4 (By the A. P.)—The proposal for organic union for the Methodist Episcopal Church South was approved late today by the general conference of the Southern church in special session here. It now goes to the annual conferences for ratification.

The two-thirds majority for adoption had been polled when 277 votes had been cast and the clerk still had nearly 100 more delegates to poll.

The Methodist Episcopal general conference at Springfield, Mass., recently accepted the proposal and ordered it submitted to its annual conferences in 1925 if the Southern General Conference should act favorably.

The official vote was 297 to 75.

Should two-thirds of all the members of the Southern Conference ratify the proposal the next step would be a meeting of the bishops of the two churches as one body, to notify their respective general conferences of ratification of the union. They also would call upon the two conferences to meet in joint session.

The regular conference of the Northern church, not meeting again until 1928, a special conference probably would be held in May, 1926, when the regular conference of the southern church will be in session.

Another resolution requesting that the annual conferences vote on ratification by secret ballot was adopted today.

The conference adjourned sine die at 6.33 p. m., after adopting routine resolutions and approving the minutes of the session.

AUTO RACE DRIVER KILLED ON TRACK

San Luis Obispo, Cal., July 4.—Stanley Brown of Fresno, Calif., driving in a ten-mile preliminary automobile race here today was killed when his car skidded, crashed through the fence and turned over several times.

FEDERAL GUIDANCE OF COMPULSORY EDUCATION

Washington, July 4.—Compulsory education, if necessary controlled and supported by the states under the guidance of federal government was advocated today by President Coolidge, speaking before 15,000 delegates of the National Educational Association at the concluding session of their convention.

The administration has proposed in the government reorganization plan a department of education and rest to be presided over by a cabinet officer, the president reminded the teachers in reference to their demands for a cabinet member on education. Refraining from any discussion of the political situation, Mr. Coolidge emphasized the importance of education to America and lauded the teaching profession, saying the teachers are entitled to adequate rewards but to the honor of a grateful people.

"Ignorance," the president declared, "is the most fruitful source of poverty, vice and crime and it is easy to realize the necessity for removing what is a menace, not only to our social well-being, but to the very existence of the republic."

In this connection, he reminded the delegates there were 4,000,000 native illiterates in this country as well as 14,000,000 foreign-born illiterate white persons. Many of the latter are above school age, he said, but nevertheless he insisted they be given the opportunity to read and write the English language, "that they may come into more direct contact with the ideals and standards of our political and social life."

Greater attention to the rural schools also was urged by the president, recalling his attendance at an "old one room country school," he argued that these institutions must give way to the consolidated school "with a modern building and an adequate teaching force commensurate with the best advantages that the provided for our urban population."

"It is necessary," he added, "that education should be the handmaid of citizenship."

SERIOUSLY BURNED IN GASOLINE EXPLOSION

Danbury, Conn., July 4.—Jeremiah A. Kane, aged about 35, received probably fatal injuries when he was burned by an explosion of gasoline. Mr. Kane, an auto supply dealer, is sergeant at arms at the democratic national convention and was attending with the Connecticut delegation. He returned home last night on business and today was asked to furnish some gasoline for a Fourth of July bonfire on Keeler street. Upon emptying his can of gasoline upon the pile, undoubtedly a spark from a previous fire, combusted the contents, enveloping his body with flames. He was removed to a local hospital in a serious condition, being badly burned about the body.

Mr. Kane was prominent in democratic politics.

NEW HAVEN MAN FOUND DEAD IN ROOM

New Haven, July 4.—The body of George Pfnausch, believed to have been dead three weeks, was found in his room here today. Neighbors had missed him for the past three weeks and today notified the police and broke down the door. The body was partly decomposed. The medical examiner was notified and reported that Pfnausch probably had died from natural causes. He was subject to heart attacks. Mr. Pfnausch, who was 63 years old, is survived by three sons.

Held Without Bail For Double Murder

Aged Man Charged With Shooting Patrolman Albert C. Colson and Arthur C. Bennett at Exeter, N. H.

Exeter, N. H., July 4.—Charged with the murder last night of Patrolman Albert L. Colson and Arthur C. Bennett, John Parker McDuffey, an aged man, was arraigned in the municipal court here today and held without bail for a hearing next Wednesday. He is alleged to have shot the men when they came to his house to quell a disturbance caused by boys.

The police said that according to witnesses McDuffey, who was known to be eccentric, had sent for Officer Colsen because small boys were exploding firecrackers near his home. When the latter asked McDuffey if he had a revolver, the witnesses said, the old man suddenly shot him in the stomach. Colson dropped dead, and McDuffey, it is alleged then shot Bennett, a friend of the policeman. Bennett died on the way to a hospital.

LA FOLLETTE WILL ACCEPT THIRD PARTY NOMINATION

Wisconsin Senator's Formal Acceptance of Invitation to Run for President Read at Progressive Conference Yesterday—Message Declares Nation is Facing "Most Momentous Crisis in Our Time"—LaFollette Takes Slap at Both Republican and Democratic Parties Declaring They Have Failed the People—Calls President Coolidge Frank Defender of Organized Wealth.

Cleveland, July 4.—Formal acceptance of the invitation to run for president was given to the conference for progressive political action this afternoon by Senator Robert M. LaFollette.

It was read by his son, Robert LaFollette, Jr., introduced as a "chip off the old block."

"To those who gave me the honor of this invitation I owe an unequivocal answer," said the statement. "I proceeded to make that unequivocal acceptance of the convention's endorsement.

LaFollette declared the nation is facing the "most momentous crisis in our time" with "predatory interests in control of America's government." The Wisconsin senator took a slap at both the republican and democratic parties, declaring they had "failed the people."

He declared the time ripe for a militant political movement independent of the old parties and responsive to the needs of the common people."

"The necessity for an independent progressive movement lies in the failure of the two old parties to purge themselves of the elements that betray the people. Both are under the power of corrupt wealth."

President Coolidge was called "the frank defender of organized wealth" by the message which added that the democratic platform adopted at New York does not meet the needs of the nation.

"The fact that representatives of organized wealth voted for that platform," he added, "is sufficient proof of its character."

"Even if both the democratic and republican parties had adopted progressive platforms, the people would know that neither would be trusted to keep their pledges.

"The real issues have been ignored by the two old parties," contended Mr. LaFollette' adding that both presidential nominees would owe a debt to bosses and big business.

"The markets are manipulated and profits fixed on all farm products," said the statement which averred that this reacted against both producers and consumer.

"If we would not submit to an emperor we should not submit to an autocrat of trade," said Senator La Follette.

"Both parties have always regarded their platforms as they regard them today, not as contracts, but as devices to catch votes.

"To break the combined power of big business over government and economic conditions, is the paramount issue facing the people.

"If the progressives will but unite with a single purpose to meet this issue they may rely on the support of the people."

"The surest prevention of war is democracy" was a sentence that brought extra applause. An assertion that the World war would not have occurred under present governments of France and England was also cheered.

"The present deplorable condition of agriculture is the natural result of the failure of the republican and democratic parties to give the farmers the relief to which they are entitled," said the statement.

"The farmer now understands he must make common cause with the wage worker and the consuming public.

"In the co-operative principle lies the best hope of dealing effectively with monopoly.

"The government should be the people's ally instead of an active agent of the enemy."

"I am ready to enlist with you and wage unceasing warfare until the American people have been restored to full enjoyment of their political and economic rights" said the statement.

"Let's go" yelled the delegates.

"I shall submit my name as an independent candidate for president, in every state of the Union," said Senator La Follette. "I am a candidate on the basis of my public record."

He added that the Wisconsin platform would be the basis of his campaign.

Herman Wills next offered a resolution for nomination by acclamation Morris Hillquit, New York socialist opposed it as "premature."

Mr. Hillquit said the national committee planned to make nominations tomorrow and pleaded for regular order.

Chairman Johnston upheld a point of order that in the absence of a report from the credentials committee the convention was not organized and could not act. The point was made by Judge Pankan of the New York municipal court. This stopped the attempt to nominate La Follette today.

WILL SPEND TWO BILLIONS IN DEVELOPMENT WORK

Chicago, July 4.—Projects which will entail an expenditure of approximately $2,679,000,000, are in various stages of development for the beautification, utility, health, commercial and industrial progress of Chicago, according to the Chicago Chamber of Commerce.

Projects under way, or soon to be, total $1,374,587,000, a summary shows, while those in the preliminary stage will cost $1,305,100,000. The latter include the various terminal prepositions, municipal purchase of the surface and elevated lines, construction of a subway and proposed new postoffice and federal building.

Widening, opening and extending numerous streets and boulevards, new bridges, sewage plants, new buildings, hotels, and stores, the union station and Illinois Central project, and telephone improvements are among the activities now under way. The cost of the projects, the summary stated, would equal in value all the farm property of the state of Wisconsin.

Nine major projects of the Chicago Plan Commission are yet to be completed, dealing chiefly with street and boulevard revisions. A continuous lake front development extending from Jackson Park on the far south side to the Chicago river near downtown, is pointed to as a "civic marvel." Utilization of the "air rights" over several hundred acres of railroad tracks in the heart of the city represents a $195,000,000 project. Transportation extension as outlined involves an expenditure of $589,943,000.

Railway terminal solution is forecast by the association in plans which call for $315,000,000 to be spent. Seven new hotels are vlued at $94,000,000. Educational institutions have a program, with a total of $54,500,000; reconstruction of the Fine Arts building, erection of the Stadium, Shedd Aquarium and prospective Zoological park, $10,500,000; clubhouses, $47,000,000; public utilities $73,250,000; sewage treatment works $120,000,000, and $200,000,000 worth of minor building.

Upwards of 100 major projects are itemized and the status given in the report of the association.

NEW TOUCH OF MYSTERY IN AIKEN CHILD'S CASE

North Smithfield, R. I., July 4.—A new touch of mystery was added to the case of 3 year old Viola Aiken, missing since May 24 last, when the authorities today exhumed the body found in a lonely swamp on a farm here Wednesday. An autopsy was performed Thursday after the body had been guarded, where it was found for a full night. After the autopsy completed yesterday, the body was buried, only to be ordered exhumed again today.

The skull and the dress in which the body was found have been locked up by William J. Allaire, chief of police. No hint of the result of the autopsy has been revealed by the medical examiner or by Attorney General Hrebert L. Carpenter, to whom the result was reported. Witnesses on the scene soon after the body was found recalled today an apparent wound which, it was thought at the time might have caused a fracture of the skull.

Although John Aiken, father of the missing child, expressed the belief that the body was that of his daughter for whom th eauthorities, headed by the attorney general, have searched for weeks, positive identification was lacking, it was said. Only circumstantial evidence, the weather-worn dress and shoes and stockings, found near the body, existed as proofs of identity.

Physicians here have expressed the opinion that the condition of the body when found could not be explained on the basis of the time that has elapsed since the child vanished.

Mrs. Viola Aiken, mother of the child, is held in $2,500 bail, and James Graham, employed on the farm on which the body was found, and for whom Mrs. Aiken kept house, is at liberty in a similar amount following their arrest on statutory charges after the girl had disappeared.

WILLIMANTIC

Independence Day and a big celebration in this city failed to dim the watchful eye of the local police officials. About 6 o'clock Friday afternoon Chief Allan McArthur, Captain Grady, Lieut. McLeon and County Detective William E. Jackson made a surprise call at 15 Main street. For the second time within less than a year the authorities were successful in securing enough evidence against Michael Cosak to warrant his appearance in police court this (Saturday) morning on the charge of keeping liquor with intent to sell. A few dozen bottles of powerful home brew were seized by the officers.

James Johnson, of Fall River, Mass., made a yearly visit with relatives Friday afternoon but met with hard luck at the intersection of Main and High streets near the entrance of police headquarters. A Ford car cut in front of his machine and he was forced to drive head-on into a silent policeman and fire hydrant at the corner. The hydrant was broken at the base and knocked into a leaning position and the silent cop was practically kayoed.

Margaret Tobin, widow of Patrick Tobin, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Michael McDonald, 43 Mountain street, Willimantic, at 8 o'clock Thursday evening. She leaves two daughters and three sons, Mrs. Michael McDonald, Mrs. Emma Myrick, of Dayton, Ohio, John E. Tobin, of Cleveland, Ohio, Frederick Tobin of Dayton and Patrick Tobin of Campden, N. J. Mrs. Tobin has been a resident of this city for the past 17 years.

Willimantic made history Independence day, when its entire population turned out in full force to celebrate the holiday in such manner as to surpass even the famous boomerang celebrations of a score of years ago. The street dancing and the bonfire at midnight ushered in the day, along with the ringing of cowbells and the blowing of automobile horns at Recreation park. Credit for the huge success of the bonfire is due to George Timmins, a committeeman. He was ably assisted in his work of erecting the 40-foot pyre of old boxes and barrels by John Kelley, Thomas Vertefeuille and a few memebers of St. Joseph's Boy Scouts.

The mammoth parade formed along Valley street from Windham to Jackson streets, a distance of nearly three-quarters of a mile, and at the signal from the marshal, Jeremiha McCarthy, the long procession swung into motion and advanced to Main street and down that thoroughfare to Recreation park. On every side and all the way down to the park the parade was greeted with rounds of applause and cheering. This turned to peals of laughter when division 3 hove into view. The wit, the funnybone ability and in many instances the artistic hand of Willimantic youth and all of its grown-up professionals had been concentrated on the mock circus parade and the horribles. George A. Bartlett was in charge of that division.

Following is the order of the parade: Platoon of police; Marshal Jeremiah McCarthy; staff of committeemen and representatives, Acting Mayor George W. Hickey, James B. Fullerton, Valentine L. Murphy, Charles W. Hill, George Timmins, Aime J. Martineau, Frank P. Lombardo, Albert J. Piche, Rev. F. C. Williams of St. Paul's church, Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead of the Methodist church and Rev. Father C. M. Kelley of St. Joseph's parish.

The Foresters of America were headed by Napoleon Desjorlais, Les Artisans by Joseph Vincelette and the St. Jean Baptiste society by Wilfred Pageau. The last three named organizations are connected with St. Mary's parish. St. Joseph's Polish societies were headed by Michael Klosowski, with John Sizdek and John Trosky as flag bearers. The Boy Scout band; Company C, 169th Inf., Connecticut National guard, Capt. John R. Morrison, commander; St. Joseph's Boy Scouts, William Costello in charge; American flag, Ollie Rock, bearer, and delegation of World war veteran organizations; Guard Sacred Heart, Arthur Vertefeuille, commander; St. Jean Baptiste society carrying a huge flag; Italian societies; delegation of members of the local lodges of Elks and degrees goat; Uncle Sam and General Garibaldi, mounted, arranged by the Italian societies.

Division 2—B. P. O. E. band in farmer costumes, C. N. C. Wheeler directing; George A. Bartlett and his aides, Joseph F. Gaudreau, Bert F. More and Gilbert P. Flynn; horribles and novelties; Rotary band; an elephant propelled by Parker Smith and Stanley Andrews; mock circus parade; Odell M. Chapman's Continental Drum corps; four hundred boys in comedy makeups; six comedy floats; cowboys and Indians on horseback; Children's band.

Division 3—Eugene E. Hickey and aides; White Eagle Polish-American band; a long and beautiful array of floats representing practically every phase of the city's business and industrial life.

The prize committee for the Fourth had a fine program of sporting events which followed upon the ending of the parade at Recreation park. Albert J. Piche was chairman; Thomas A. O'Brien, Bert F. More, John McQuillan, Arthur J. Dubreuil, Francis Keon and Harry W. Standish, aides. The list of events, the winners and the prizes follows: Bicycle race, half mile, boys under 14: First, Albert Lariviere, watch; second, Omer Desrosiers, and third, Francis Bergeron, belt and buckle and flashlight. Three-legged race: First, William Leonard, watch; second, Patrick Greeson, gold pencil. Wheelbarrow race: First, Phosy Saba, pocket knife; second, Frank Sadski, baseball and bat. Greased pig, awarded to catcher, Edward Saba. Pie-eating contest: First, Arthur Nichols, baseball glove; second, Philip Marcoux, safety razor. Greased pole climb: Francis Bergeron, $2.50 in gold. Potato race, boys: Ernest Desrosier, kodak. Younger girls' race, 50 yard dash: Mary Gumula, first, fountain pen; tied for second, Helen Kensek and Wanda Sroka, one receiving a pair of silk hose and the other a watch pettogram. Older girls' race: Alexandria Dzwonczyk, first, gold pencil; and Mary Stygar, second, powder compact. Girls' potato race: First, Genevieve Bernard, mesh bag; second, Cecelia Phaneuf, linen handkerchiefs. John O'Rourke was pilot of the sport activities; C. N. Burdick was official recorder. The greased pig was taken to the park by A. P. Ellsworth.

Enjoyable sectional programs were carried out with band concerts, fireworks and short speeches Independence day evening at Recreation park, Windham field and The Oaks school grounds. The music at Windham field was by St. Joseph's Boy Scouts, at Recreation park by the White Eagle Polish-American band, and at The Oaks school grounds by the B. P. O. E. band. Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead of the Methodist church was the speaker at the first named location; Attorney Thomas J. Kelley at The Oaks, and Rev. F. T. Ledwith, an eloquent missionary from La Salette seminary, Hartford, spoke at the park.

Children and parents joined to make the individual celebrations successful. There were fireworks aplenty and unlimited fun for all.

Arthur Boutin of Mansfield Center will appear in police court this (Saturday) morning to answer to a charge of violating the motor vehicle law, in driving while under the influence of liquor, as the outcome of an accident at the head of Hoxie Hill, near the A. P. Ellsworth home on the South Windham road, when an Oldsmobile owned by the latter was struck by a Gardiner car owned by Joseph Beaudry of Temple street and driven by Boutin. Mr. Ellsworth had just returned from the bonfire celebration in this city and had gone around through Windham Center so that he was headed toward this city. He stopped to discharge two passengers at a house near his own and according to his statement had just put his car into gear when the Gardinar car came along from the opposite direction at a fast rate of speed and crashed into the side of his car. Both front wheels were ditched. The Gardiner swung away from the front of the Oldsmobile and circled around the back of it, piling up against a wooden fence at the left of the road. Boutin claimed that the bright lights on the Oldsmobile had blinded him but upon the arrival of Motorcycle Officer Grant Bombria and Lieut. Frank McLean the officers soon discovered that the young man had been drinking. Their suspicions were confirmed when a gallon jug partly filled with cider was found where it had been thrown into the bushes. With Boutin was the owner's daughter and two or three young men. The case is being held over until this (Saturday) morning due to the fact that there were no judges in the city to hold police court Friday morning.

Lester Carter, 18, of South Park street, was painfully injured Independence day morning when three fingers of his right hand were lacerated and bruised by the sudden explosion of a small home made cannon. Carter and Arthur McNeikle, 23, had been firing the miniature cannon and when one of the shots apparently did not go off Carter used his hands to get the powder lighted but before he could touch it the cannon exploded. McNeikle was also struck by the explosive but was not badly hurt.

One of the immense girders alone weighs 14 tons and was being hauled down from the railroad freight yard to the theatre site Friday afternoon. Guy De Marco has the contract. It is planned to start work of the erection of the steel framework at once and put it to a rapid completion. JEWETT CITY

The oldest resident cannot remember so quiet a Fourth of July morning as was Friday. For the first time in the history of the town, not a church bell was rung and until the middle of the forenoon the streets appeared to be deserted. Perhaps one reason for the absence of the usual early morning fireworks was because they were all exploded the night before or during the preceding week.

Chautauqua saved the day, however, for the few stay-at-homes, for there was a general exodus from town, apparently. In the afternoon at Chautauqua the Gales told stories and sang descriptive songs of the Red Men. Costumes and curios made a most entertaining and instructive program. In the evening there was the play, Their Honor the Mayor, a three-act comedy, greatly enjoyed, as all Chautauqua plays are. The Junior Chautauquans are making their own paper costumes for their afternoon today (Saturday) and are to keep the costumes afterwards.

Walter P. Chrysler says Maxwell Now Sets a New Pace-

MAXWELL

The good Maxwell is displaying the possibilities of the four-cylinder car, in the very things people want in motor cars, in a way they have never been demonstrated before.

With the active participation of the Chrysler Six engineering staff, the process of betterment begun three years ago was tremendously accelerated.

The difference in the way the Maxwell rides and drives and steers will impress you instantly.

You will be expecting the vibration you've always felt behind a four-cylinder engine.

But you will be delightfully disappointed—and surprised. For we have taken that vibration away from Maxwell. It's gone.

You can safely count on 22 miles to the gallon or better, and 18,000 miles per set of tires. Those figures are not ours, but the average of Maxwell owner reports.

Main bearings rarely if ever replaced; a longer-lived, smoother-running car because vibration is practically eliminated.

That's the way we are building the good Maxwell today—with a far greater proportion of costly alloy steels than is usual at its price.

The most I ask is that you compare Maxwell riding and driving and performance and then decide for yourself whether any other four you know of can match up to a Maxwell.

Broadway Theatre.

Icebound, which will have its first local showing tomorrow at the Broadway theatre, is a story of a pretty girl who inherits a wild young fellow in a will, making a real man out of him because she loves him.

It's a William de Mille Paramount production, an adaptation of the Pulitzer prize play by Owen Davis.

Richard Dix plays Ben Jordan, a shiftless lad on a New England farm. Lois Wilson is the girl.

When old Mrs. Jordan dies, leaving her goodly fortune to Jane Crosby, her ward, played by Miss Wilson, her last request is that the girl take Ben in hand and make a man out of him. There's a flapper cousin (Vera Reynolds) who does her best to win Ben over. She even succeeds for a time until Jane, heart-broken, is about to leave and Ben is brought to his senses.

Icebound is a human story of everyday people, a typical de Mille production, that will stand alone for a long time to come before its equal in heart-interest and appeal is seen on the screen.

The stage play was ideal screen material, and, as adapted by Clara Beranger, is nothing short of a knock-out.

It's a great picture no matter how you look at it—acting, direction, photography all approach as near perfection as it is possible to attain.

Edna May Oliver, Ethel Wales and Alice Chapin are prominent in the strong supporting cast.

Those who think a fighter can't act need only go to the Broadway theater tomorrow and watch Jack Dempsey, now appearing in his new Universal series. They'll see one exception to the rule—for the world's champion battler, and most famous figure in the entire world of sport is a very good actor.

The cast is splendid. Esther Ralston makes a very beautiful vampire, and Hayden Stevenson, as the fight manager, is a convincing figure. Chuck Reisner, comedian, proves an adept at villainy as well as laugh making, and Kate Price does some great comedy work.

Altogether the new series is all that could be asked for in a motion picture—plus the interest in seeing the champion in real action—for not all of us have $100 for a ringside seat when he fights. It's good, clean entertainment, and interest never lags.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BREED THEATRE

Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model, the Goldwyn feature coming to the Breed theatre Sunday is the screen version of the famous Owen Davis melodrama which enjoyed a popular run in New York several years ago. As a stage play it is one of the most thrilling pieces ever written.

For this production Emmett Flynn selected one of the greatest casts of the year. Claire Windsor plays the title role. Mae Busch, Lew Cody, Raymond Griffith, Edmund Lowe, Hobart Bosworth and Lilynan Tashman, famous Follies beauty, compose the array of celebrities in Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model.

Continuing with the Goldwyn policy for realism and accuracy, Emmett Flynn took this expensive array of stars to New York City to film scenes on the elevated tracks and various streets in the city. He then returned to California where interiors were made in the studios at Culver City.

The story moves swiftly through these realistic settings. It concerns the thrilling adventures of the beautiful Nellie, the daughter of wealthy parents, who through circumstances has been living under the care of a foster parent, Thomas Lipton, in the tenement district of New York. Her mother has been searching for years for her daughter. Nellie's foster father becomes ill and Nellie is forced to seek employment in a modiste shop not knowing that she is heir to her mother's fortune. Walter Peck, the worthless nephew of Nellie's mother, knowing that Nellie is alive, tries to convince the mother that Nellie will not be found, thus leaving him heir to the fortune. It is Peck's endeavors to keep Nellie in obscurity that provides action and thrills for the story. A travel scenic Pathe News and a Komed Kartoon complete this fine program.

PALACE THEATRE

The two women faced each other their eyes flashing fire and hatred.

"Remember, he is my husband, so hands off," warned the younger of the two.

"Yes, but now you are at a disadvantage," retorted the other. "I used to be his wife and you were the other woman. Now the tables are reversed and I am the other woman."

Added attractions, Pathe review, Lloyd Hamilton in hits latest and funniest two reel comedy Going East and Palace orchestra.

Starting Sunday Night

Netta Westcott, young star of the London stage, whose perfect features have been acclaimed by all England, and Clara Bow, piquant high-school athlete from New York City, saw their features flashed on the silversheet for the momentous decision concerning the importance of their first parts in Gasnier's Maytime, which will be shown here on Sunday at the Palace theatre.

When the saucy-faced school-girl from the east curtsied and pirouetted with a rakish chip-like hat cocked over one eye, after the manner of the belles of long ago, there came every director on the lot, the simultaneous exclamation: There is our Alexander Maytime.

Short subjects: Lyman H. Howes, Hodge Podge; Postage Due. Stan Laurel at his best and latest two-reel comedy, Aesops Fables, and special musical presentations by Palace augmented orchestra.

Strand Theatre.

Everyone loves a real, red-blooded romance of the west where men fight for the women they love. In the coming picture production, Treasure Canyon, movie fans are slated for a real treat, for advance reports state this picture to be one of the most thrilling of the year, and yet it contains one of the strangest romances ever enacted upon the screen.

J. B. Warner, in the role of the hero, will completely captivate his auditors with his splendid personality and his histrionic ability. Marie Walcamp is the girl in question, and does the best work of her career. Other screen favorites in the cast include W. G. Scott, the handsome villain, and Harry Todd, who injects many good laughs into the picture.

Treasure Canyon will be shown at the Strand theatre Sunday.

Staging the thrilling rescue of a small boy from a railroad trestle, hanging, with the youngster, by one hand, as the train passes overhead, then dropping into a roaring river, is one of the exciting experiences of Jack Dempsey, world's fight champion in his Fight and Win series. Dempsey stages this thrill as one of the big punch scenes in his new Universal picture playe, coming Sunday to the Strand theater.

Other subjects include a comedy and Episode 14 of the Santa Fe Trail serial.

FLORIDA JUBILEE SINGERS AT Y. M. C. A. SUNDAY

The noted Florida Jubilee Singers (colored) will furnish an interesting program to the public tomorrow (Sunday) at 4 p. m. in the local Y. M. C. A. gymnasium; the doors will open at 3.30 o'clock. This company has recently been appearing in large churches in Boston and elsewhere, and their program has given pleasure and inspiration to large audiences. The personnel of the singers is as follows: William Sexton, first tenor; Leslie Henderson, second tenor; W. L. Thompson, baritone; H. Hamilton Harper, bass; George D. Hernandez, soloist and director. The program will consist of negro spirituals and readings, and will certainly be well worth while. The meeting is open to both men and women, in fact the public is cordially invited. A free will offering will be taken for the singers.

SIX CYLINDER AUTOS

The next 90 days will see the announcement of many new six cylinder automobiles, according to H. C. Snow, chief engineer of the Velie Motors Corporation, Moline, Illinois, who has just returned from a meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers, where plans for the next 12 months were discussed by the men who design the public's automobiles.

Everywhere the feeling is running high for the six, Mr. Snow says, and engineers are coming to regard this as the ultimate automobile for the general use. The four cylinder cars are to pass out of the picture entirely, Mr. Snow believes, and the number of eights, while they may increase during the present years, will ultimately fall away and the six become the standardized car.

Engineers, he says, who have been experimenting with all types of eights for years report that the most practical car for general use is the six. The four is going, they say, because of the vibration it is impossible to get away from and the eights will not last because they are so made that they are too complicated for the average person to keep up. Sixes on the other hand, the engineers believe, are inherently balanced, free from vibration and easy to maintain.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Patriotism as it was known a decade ago was found little outward expression in Danielson on the Fourth. Possibly nothing has been lost, for there are many who insist that noise in wholesale quantities does not constitute an expression of love of country, and that there is no conclusive evidence that a man might be a great warrior in times of stress if he happens to have a predelictlon, on the national holiday, for making a nuisance of himself by shooting off cannon and creating general pandemonium, like Bryan, for instance.

Anyway, times have changed. Even a Solomon might hesitate to say authoritatively that the people are less patriotic than they used to be because they make less noise in observing the Fourth. A jazz band may, as a matter of fact, be more inspiring to this generation than a military musical organization—for what reason no one may judicially state. But if that is a fact and the inspiration comes, the country may be considered as safe, notwithstanding that one-third of the population of the nation has been repudiated as undesirable by another small fraction of the population that admits being better than anyone else possibly can hope to be, doing even the best they can, though the 100 percenters are willing to allow all qualified, desirable and undesirable, to wage the nation's wars for them should such a calamatous occasion arise.

Danielson, as a community, did not spend a dime in observing the national holiday. It was a good holiday, nevertheless. Up to late in the afternoon there had been no disturbance, no arrests, no more rumors from the merry-go-round in New York, no crowding, no reckless spending of money or other untoward manifestations that have sometimes been regarded as demonstrative of national spirit.

Enthusiasm had a muffler on in Danielson on the Fourth. It might have been Good Friday, to all outward appearances, excepting for such noise as was created by a few participants in the use of explosive devices.

It may be pertinent to inquire this morning whether the Law Enforcement Council of Killingly, if that be the proper name, or those who in official capacity act or speak for it, are willing to assume the liability for slander suits that may arise from carrying to enforcement officers stories relative to people breaking the liquor laws who are not engaged in doing any such thing.

These self-constituted guardians of the nation's welfare may also be queried as to what they imagine their own responsibility is, when they run to an official with some rumor that some scandal monger, someone with a grudge, or someone of no positive knowledge whatever, but with an axe to grind, has to peddle and tell as a fact what may result in plunging some perfectly innocent person into difficulties.

Frankly, and with no reservation whatever, the Killingly Law Enforcement Council is working in the dark. Its implied aim is excellent. The sources of much of its information is dubious. The practice of some of its officers in running to officials with this and that story, unfounded in some cases, is preposterous.

No citizen of the town of Killingly should be subjected to investigation without just cause. A lying tongue, a jealous tongue, a vindictive tongue; rumors, hearsay or any such claptrap is not sufficient ground for an official of any organization to run to officers with a story that works injury to a fellow citizen.

Information in possession of certain citizens may lead to court action if the practice does not cease forthwith. There are some people in the town of Killingly who are not yet ready to submit to any underground attacks on their character, through whatever channels these attacks may be promulgated. If the accepting of baseless rumors continues as a basis for making complaints about people, there will be some action that will drag the underground workers out into daylight—and if necessary suits will be brought, regardless of the gantity of anyone, to get redress for injury to character resulting from practices not a whit better than those employed by the secret agents of Soviet Russia.

East Killingly repeated its annual celebration of the Fourth, Friday. It did the job as splendidly as it always does. Its people paraded in the morning. They were reviewed by visitors from all sections of this corner of eastern Windham county. There was music and speaking and diversion of various kinds and one of those excellent chowders for which East Killingly is famous on the Fourth. King George Jacques, celebrating, incidentally, his 73rd birthday, was the caterer and so good was the chowder that the hundreds who feasted upon it barely allowed him to escape without masticating and digesting his rose-trimmed straw sombrero, symbolic of the rural life of the community in which he has spent his life and made his mark.

The afternoon was given over to patriotic exercises held in the church, and set forth in detail in previous issues of this paper, and to athletic events in which there was very general interest.

Motor cars from several states brought people to enjoy East Killingly's celebration of the Fourth. It was a good, old-fashioned celebration, springing from the real fountain heads of patriotism, and not tinged by and of the frothy pretexts that now pass in many places for a real observance of the anniversary of the declaration of independence.

Danielson had a quiet night before. Up to the hour of midnight the night might have been anyone of the 365 nights of this leap year, in so far as demonstrative exhibitions went. On the stroke of 12 there was an outburst, on a small scale, of horn blowing, shooting and singing, but it didn't last long. By one o'clock about all the borough that cared to be was sleeping peacefully again. It appears from the checkup on the holiday that those who wanted action went elsewhere to get it. And that isn't difficult any more with motor cars as plentiful as mosquitoes and every chappie with the price of a tank of gasoline having one

Special entertainment of quality was provided on the Fourth for those who attended the sessions of Chautauqua.

Having been closed during the present week the Quinebaug mill will resume operations Monday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Arrigan had as a visitor over the holiday, Arthur Beaudry of Thornton, R. I., brother of Mrs. Arrigan.

The Sunday school hour will precede rather than follow the service at the Baptist church Sunday morning. At this service Raymond Preston will be the organist and Mrs. Alton Frost soloist.

On the 699th ballot, it was stated on the afternoon of the Fourth, probably by someone who loves him, that Bryan was still making money. He writes for a syndicate.

Outings to Rhode Island beaches attracted many Danielson people away for the holiday.

Scores of people here already have complied with Dr. W. H. Judson's edict for general vaccination.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Head of Winsted were visitors over the holiday with Michael Head and family of Academy street.

Chief John McFarland said on the afternoon of the Fourth that there had been very little to engage the attention of the police. Two revolvers were seized by officers from young men who elected to disobey all warnings against the use of them. No arrests had been made up to early evening, evidence of the good behavior of those who remained in town over the holiday.

TWO NORWICH MEN INJURED WHEN CAR OVERTURNS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Danielson, July 4—Armand Forand of Fourth street, Norwich, received a deep gash on the knee, and Joseph Morrison, also of Norwich, was somewhat cut and bruised early on the morning of the Fourth when the car in which they were riding overturned on the hill at the ledges between Danielson and Brooklyn, when they are said to have been forced off the highway by another car that hogged the road. The injured men came in the car of Floyd Ennis to the office of Dr. W. A. Tanner on Academy street and were given attention. The cut on Forand's knee was of sufficient seriousness to result in Dr. Tanner ordering that he go to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam for attention. The car was considerably damaged.

In a special car attached to the 7.45 a. m. train for New London, this (Saturday) morning, Headquarters company of the 43rd division, this city, leavgs for its first experience of a soldiers' camp life. The company will do a two weeks' tour of duty at Niantic camp ground, returning to Putnam, Saturday, July 19.

The local unit will carry out an intensive training program during its mornings in camp, while in the afternoon there will be supervised contests and games. The program includes march discipline, close order drill, physical training, special technical training and other phases of military life.

The company marches to the railroad station in full uniform and equipment. The appearance of the command is excellent, especially considering the fact that the cimpany was organized only a month ago. The company held its first organized drill only a week ago Friday night and Captain J. J. McGarry is pleased with his company's showing and the interest of the men. The men gladly agreed to two drill nights a week and they have been faithful in attendance. Last Monday night Sergeants Spearman and Beal addressed the men, giving suggestions and instructions for their conduct in camp. The company was then taken for a short march by Lieutenant Rosario Beausoleil, making a good appearance for its second drill.

The town school committee has elected Edward L. Robinson, of Lexington, Mass., principal of Putnam High school at a salary of $3,000 a year. Mr. Robinson telephoned his acceptance Thursday night and the school board is highly gratified to get such a man as head of the high school.

Mr. Robinson is a graduate of Yale, class of 1896, and is a Phi Betta Kappa man. For 12 or 15 years he was principal of the Salden High school at St. Louis and for six years was principal of East Hartford high school. During his principalship of this school the number of pupils increased from 250 to 500. Mr. Robinson has taught in various other cities but gave up teaching to become connected with a school publishing house. He now desires to teach again.

He is a sound Greek and Latin scholar but his preferred subject is mathematics. He is married and has three children. One was graduated this year from Dartmouth and was a Phi Betta Kappa man; another is in the sophomore year at Simmons College, Boston, and the third is a pupil in the high school.

The board has voted to increase the school day in all schools 15 minutes the coming year.

The annual budget just compiled according to law, amounts to $73,500, made up as follows: School board and business office, $300; supervision, $3,900; compulsory attendance and school census, $370; other expenses, general control, $100.

Instruction—Music teacher, $1250; salaries and expense supervisor principal, $4,700; salaries of teachers, men, $2050; salaries of teachers, women, $36,050; text books, $2,000; music books, $100; stationery and supplies, $2300; tuition fees, $300; evening school teachers, $1,000; Americanization director, $400; other expenses of instruction, $100.

Operation of school plant—Janitors, engineers, etc., wages, $3050; fuel, water, light, janitor supplies, $6455; other expenses, $75.

Maintenance of school plant—Repairs, $3,000; replacement of equipment, $1500.

Auxiliary agencies—School libraries, $200; promotion of health, $3,600; transportation, $650—total, $73,500.

Members of Wappaquasset Tribe of Red Men, of this city, in full regalia and war paint, were seen leaving Putnam at an early hour Friday morning. The tribe was one of the features in the big parade in East Killingly where they made an excellent showing.

Alfred Gallant of Hartford spent the Fourth with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Gallant.

Michael J. Daigle, assistant in the state treasurer's office, Hartford, and Mrs. Daigle, were Putnam guests on the holiday.

Mrs. J. J. Russell, granddaughter and maid, have opened the Russell summer home at Juniper Point, Me.

The night before, the day, and the night of the Fourth passed off quietly in Putnam. While a half dozen extra policemen were put on as a safety precaution they had little to do except to walk about twirling their night sticks. Early in the evening of the night before there was an occasional explosion which made about as much noise as would slapping two sticks together. This was heard more or less during the night, but was not sufficient to disturb the slumbers of any citizens. In the early morning hours of Independence day the noise grew to greater proportions, but even then it appeared to have a muffler on, compared with the good old noisy days when fingers were blown off, eyes gouged out and there was an occasional loss of life. Those who like a quiet Fourth certainly have nothing to complain of in Putnam.

There was a large holiday gathering at the Putnam Country club Friday afternoon. The women members played cards, while the men were on the links. There were several contests for club members and a feature was the playing of a match by the professionals of four clubs: Alex Simpson of the South Manchester club, Barney Gunshinan of the Willimantic club, M. Young of the Southbridge club and Clarence Booth of the Putnam club.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Dady, Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Law, Mrs. Andrew V. Frost and Miss Geraldine Frost, Miss Marion Warren, Miss Lillian Warren, left Putnam Friday for a trip to Cape Cod, where they will spend the week end. They were joind on the trip by Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Danforth and daughter, Miss Florence Danforth, of Holyoke, formerly of Putnam and Norwich.

Directors of the Woodstock Fair Associatio nhave decided on the middle of September for holding the fair this year. Alexander Maitland of Thompson has been elected superintendent of the exhibition hall. It has been voted to make improvements on the fair grounds in South Woodstock including putting a wire fence around the grounds and repainting the buildings within the enclosure.

The first open meeting of Woodstock Calvin Coolidge club is to be held at Woodstock Hill church at three o'clock, standard time, Monday. Mrs. J. W. Also of Avon and New York, a niece of the late President, who is actively campaigning for the republican nominees, will be the principal speaker.

The Eastern Connecticut Fish and Game club, with members in Putnam and surrounding towns, has offered a prize of $5 for the largest bass caught by a member during the season.

The $10 prize for the largest trout caught during the season that closed July 1st was awarded County Game Warden Charles E. Letters of Putnam, who displayed a fish weighing one pound, six and one-half ounces. The second largest fish was caught by John Haynard of Putnam. This fish weighed one pound, three and one-half ounces. The prize winning fish was caught in Snake Meadow brook, May 11th, the second largest being taken from the Five Mile river, May 2nd. Very few wish weighing a pound or over were reported. Besides winning the cash prize, Mr. Letters' fish took second prize, a Bristol reel, offered by the Danielson Rod and Gun club.

Trout this season were not as heavy as those caught a year ago. The big fellows were not anxious for the bait, probably on account of the cold spring. Last year the largest fish caught by Wallace N. Aldrich, weighed a pound and twelve ounces, five and a half ounces more than the largest fish this season. Some catches of large bass have already been reported, some going over four pounds, brought in by Putnam fishermen.

Superintendent of Schools, Ralph C. Jenkins, before leaving for his vacation, submitted the following report to the town school committee:

I am rather of the opinion that another year the entire nature of the class day exercises should be changed to keep pace with the growth of the school. The school has outgrown the assembly hall for class day exercises. During the past two weeks the high school principal visited many of the grammar schools in Pomfret and surrounding towns interviewing prospective students about their studies. In connection with the final report cards a letter has been sent to all parents informing them specifically as to the standing of their children in High school.

The resignation of Miss Josephine Estes as music supervisor in the Putnam school has been received. Miss Estes has filled this position with unusual success. She has given unstintingly of her efforts to the work and the results show in the pupils' ability to sing. Miss Estes is also deserving of credit for the excellent showing of the High School orchestra. It is with the greatest regret that I am obliged to forward to you her resignation.

Miss Jessie Maynard has also submitted her resignation as teacher in the Putnam Heights school. Miss Anna White has resigned from the Israel Putnam school staff to accept a position in Webster, Mass.

In spite of the various epidemics of children's diseases through which we have passed, eighty-five pupils were neither tardy nor absent during the year. Certificates for each pupil in perfect attendance have been forwarded to Hartford for the signature of the commissioner of education and the governor. Miss Edna Kent of the Israel Putnam school enjoys the distinction of never having lost a day of school for four consecutive years.

Several of the teachers will attend the Yale University summer school. Otto F. Smith of the High school faculty will spend the summer in European travel. Principal Stinson of the High school will take courses in High school administartion and history in the School of Education of Harvard University. I shall give courses in secondary education, methods of teaching in rural schools and educational measurements in the Keene, N. H., normal school.

May I take this opportunity to express my appreciation of the great amount of time and thought you have given both individually and as a body to the problems connected with the schools.

ONE DISADVANTAGE OF AIR TRAVEL

"Air travel has one marked disadvantage for the wives and friends of the aviators now flying around the world—a disadvantage which will be emphasized by the landing at Multan, India," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"American whalers and other sailors who roved the Pacific in bygone times were away for years rather than weeks—but usually they touched at a port of India where they acquired such souvenirs as the Kashmir shawls.

"One cannot store many gift purchases in an airplane. So the women who know of Multan's brocades, silks and silver ornaments must mourn a lost opportunity of acquiring some.

"Multan is noted for its 'himrts,' used in India both for making men's coats and women's trousers; but which the proud possessors in other parts of the world variously employ to drape walls and make curtains or for women's evening gowns. The material is a cotton weave, spun to form a soft, thick fabric which has the feel of wool, and has silk patterns brocaded on the surface.

"The 'pagris,' or turbans of Multan which are used as a headdress by native men are seized avidly by European women to wear as scarfs—and in view of the present vogue of this filmy and colorful neckpiece they would make acceptable gifts for American women.

"And that's not the half of it! The glazed pottery of Multan is noted throughout India for its deep blue designs against a pure white background. The city's silversmiths are equally famous for their small, silver-enamelled ornaments.

"Multan is 576 miles northeast of Karachi, the flyers' next stop. The city lies in the District of Multan, which, in turn is in the Division of Multan. With which concession to India's complex political organization it may be stated that city, district, and division are in the Punjab.

"In its very early history Multan district lay in the course of all invaders, coming and going, hence it had scant breathing spells between devastations. Later the Mogul Empire protected it from incursion and the trade route from Hindustan to Persia crossed it. Since that time the district and the city have been important trade centers.

"Today the city where out aviators will alight, is the depot for cotton wheat, sugar, wool and indigo and fruits to be sent east. It has rail connections with Lahore and Karachi, and river routes to the Central Junjab.

"Shrines to Mohammedan saints rise close to the ruins of an ancient Hindu temple."

First Woman To Run For Governor

The wife of the former Governor has launched her candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Mr. Ferguson was impeached by the State Senate in 1917, at the beginning of his second term. This is the first time in the history of the United States that a woman has aspired to the office of Governorship.

Dr. F. J. Wall, of the Sheffield, England, University, who has applied for a patent for his "death ray," which he claims can stop the flight or running of any sort of machine, and can even snuff out a human life. He points out that unlimited power is not necessary; all that is needed is the amount of current to provide the sudden shock that will snap human nerve cords and machine parts and cause cessation of activity.

Food

Starch is the only food that is changed in any chemical way in the mouth. Starch is gradually changed into sugar in the alimentary canal, the first process taking place in the mouth. Other foods are merely ground up and softened, in preparation for action by other juices.

NURSE TOLD SANDY TO TAKE TANLAC

"Don't Stop On 1 Bottle But Try 5" She Recommended.

"My wife is a nurse and she thinks Tanlac is without an equal; and, as for myself, I never lose an opportunity to recommend it for the good it has done me. "This statement was made recently by John T. Sandy, 711 Sumner Ave., Springfield, Mass.

"In March, 1923, I suddenly began to suffer from peculiar dizzy spells that would come on like a flash and almost strike me down. For a long time I had been going along without any appetite and could eat no meats or eggs and lots of other things. I also suffered from catarrh and was laid up for two months, absolutely all in.

"I told my wife to bring me a bottle of Tanlac. She said, 'Don't stop at one; take five,' and that is what I have done with the result that my appetite is perfect, the dizziness is no more, and my strength is so good that I am working every day. My wife and I are both strong for Tanlac."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

CELEBRATING THE FOURTH.

No one will be disposed to feel that there was a quietness and lack of noise in the celebration of the Fourth that made it seem like other days. Taken as a whole it was a day when noise was general, when it was evident there was no lack of enthusiasm concerning the day and its celebration and when, if anything, there was more noise than there has been on some Fourths.

There was gratification, however, that the disposition seemed to be to keep it within the bounds of sanity and safety. It is a difficult matter to prevent or to encourage everyone to refrain from chance taking, or to give the right amount of consideration either to themselves or to others, but there was a conspicuous absence of those days of previous years which left so many regrets.

One pleasing feature was the demonstration of a desire for the marking of the day by community activities. The parades on the West Side and at Taftville were delightful attractions that took up and successfully carried on the excellent examples set a few years ago by the residents of the Greeneville section. They represented much work in the way of preparation, had an enthusiastic participation and got a reception that was compensating for the efforts that were involved.

Such evidences of community interest and civic pride are deserving of all possible encouragement. They bespeak the sentiment of a city and they provide attractions which are desirable for a large part of the people, as well as bringing many here for the day. Such efforts are to be commended and their repetition urged. It discloses a healthy, patriotic public spirit of which no community can have too much. Something of the kind should be arranged for Norwich every Fourth.

MEXICO'S FINANCIAL TROUBLE.

When it isn't one thing in Mexico it is another. Revolutionary tendencies create more or less uncertainty and much expense, and when it isn't a revolution that is bothing that republic it is invariably a search for funds.

It was not long ago that Mexico reached an agreement for the refunding of its national debt. It was an agreement that indicated the right kind of spirit on the part of Mexico and a willingness on the part of other countries to relieve the situation there. Not much sooner had this problem been solved than the De la Huerta revolution broke out. This involved a much larger expense and the result is that Mexico is unable to meet the interest on the refunded debt.

Mexico was aware of this impending situation. It endeavored to obtain a short loan which would tide over this situation but it was unable to convince the international committee that the security was ample. As to the wealth of Mexico there can be no question. It has great undeveloped resources, but it was relying upon the repayment of its short loan by the oil revenues and these the committee found are dwindling under the Mexican taxation laws. Not being able to borrow because of its methods of doing business the anticipated inability to scrape enough money together to pay has developed. It ought not to last for long and Mexico doesn't expect that it will, but the situation is nevertheless embarrassing to a government with an election not far off and with a diplomatic situation having arisen with the British on whom no little dependency is placed for the raising of funds from time to time.

Mexico has itself to blame for its predicament. It thinks it cannot get along without the costly and devastating revolutions, and when it tried to prevent its resources from being unjustly exploited it took steps that have handicapped instead of helped. Mexico finds it very easy to run into debt but like many others it has a hard time trying to settle up.

THE MEANS CASE.

Presented with the facts in the case it didn't take the jury long in the case against Gaston B. Means and his secretary to bring in a verdict of guilty. It was not the first time that Means had been before a jury on a serious charge, but it appears to have been the first time that a conviction has been secured.

What stands out particularly in this case is the striking contrast to the manner in which evidence was accepted in a court of law and the way in which most any kind of a statement was permitted before the investigating committees in Washington. There it was possible to tell any kind of a fanciful tale, fasten the responsibility for wrong doing upon a dead man and set the tongues to wagging about the vast amount of corruption that was in existence. There was no respect for the rules of evidence that govern in courts where justice is the object, but it was noticeable that such wild tales were not permitted in the Means trial. It was possible to present proof of the charges against the former government agent in a manner that convinced twelve disinterested men and convinced them beyond a reasonable doubt.

This result goes to show what kind of a witness was being relied upon by the prosecutors in the congressional investigations. It was known at the time what Means' record was, and it was apparent that there was an ulterior purpose in his charges, but he was serving the ends of those who were interested in the political effects and there was no effort to restrict him to statements that could be proved or to evidence that would be admissable in court. What he could tell with such damaging effect before the congressional committees could not be made to convince a jury. It was not because he didn't try but because his stories didn't hold water in the opinion of the jurors. And now from the verdict it appears that he was already mired in that game which he had claimed others were playing.

CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT.

The fight for and against the proposed amendment to the Constitution dealing with child labor reached a new stage when it was advanced from congress to the states. Whether or not it is going to be characteristic of all states, two of them, Arkansas and Georgia, have already declared themselves and thus far the score is one to one.

Whatever surprise, if any there was, over the fact that Arkansas quickly ratified the amendment there can be none over the fact that Georgia has turned it down. There are other southern states in which the same opposition can be expected. In those instances there will be opposition because child labor has been too long resorted to to be suddenly abandoned without resistance.

But not all the opposition to the proposed amendment is going to come from those in the southern states or from those who believe in child labor. There is a strong belief that this is legislation which should be left to the states, that it is paternalistic to vest the federal government with such authority and that there should be no such sweeping provision as would give congress the right to regulate labor up to the age of 18 years.

Thus while it may be anticipated that certain southern states will refuse to ratify, or even that there will be sufficient to prevent ratification among the 48, it is to be realized that the constitutional amendment is going to be obliged to withstand attacks from more than one direction and in not a few instances from those who are actually and strongly opposed to the idea of child labor. Arkansas and Georgia have been overwhelmingly for and against. Others may display a greater division of sentiment when the time comes for them to act.

OUR FOREIGN SERVICE.

A reorganization of the diplomatic and consular service of this country has long been needed and long threatened, but it is only recently that serious steps have been taken in that direction.

With the beginning of July, when the Rogers act went into effect, the authority was given to effect a reorganization. Anticipating such authority Secretary Hughes of the state department was ready with the plan, and by it there have been 33 relieved of their duties because, they have passed the age limit of 65 and there have been others who have been changed in rank and who have experienced cuts in their salaries. In keeping with the legislative provisions the readjustments have been carried out and the foreign service has been placed upon a business basis which should mean greater efficiency.

For a long time it has been evident that our foreign service has not measured up to that of other countries. They have let merit be the guide of their selections, the importance of which has not been totally disregarded in this country but it has received belated attention. There was the political opposition to overcome. Now that this has been broken down and the changes inaugurated it is to be hoped that the reorganization will be given a chance to demonstrate its worth and the need of maintaining it.

Because it has required a long time to get it does not mean that it cannot be terminated very quickly. There are those who are pointing to the possibilities of getting back into the old rut as soon as there may be a change in the political complexion of the administration. That, however, does not necessarily follow. There are plenty of instances which have shown that one party is not only willing to start such a move but that once its merits are shown there is a disposition to continue it in furtherance of a known public sentiment. The ambition to make our foreign service the equal of any in the world is certainly a worthy one. We should not be content with anything less.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The New York convention doesn't intend to break the speed limit.

It is one thing to present a dark horse and quite another to have him accepted.

On the day after there is always a calm that indicates something has gone before.

Mr. Bryan hasn't threatened to, but he may yet be forced to the use of oil to slip McAdoo over.

The man on the corner says: This ought to be a good day to get a lot of second hand fireworks.

How much more will you have at the end of the year just because the nuisance taxes have been stopped?

Think how democratic delegates must deplore the thoughts of a convention where nomination is made by acclamation.

When La Follette says that the platform of neither party is satisfactory it means he hasn't succeeded in reforming either party.

There are times when those in the galleries seem to think that the delegates at the New York convention are awaiting their instructions.

From the votes some of the democratic candidates have been getting it would seem as if there were only just about enough to go around.

One professor favors dropping useless arithmetic teaching. Many who dislike arithmetic figure there is little about it but what is useless.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

A great national political convention from any point of view is an imposing sight. Were it only for the number of delegates involved it would easily get headline space in all the great newspapers. It is always remarkable from the number and reputation of the party leaders involved. It attracts attention by the adroitness with which new situations are created and old ones disposed of. The particular thing that impressed the mind of the writer was the parade which New York offered for the entertainment of its guests, and especially the police end of it. It was not because twenty thousand policemen marched in that parade, but the various kinds of machinery that are necessary to preserve order in a city of first magnitude. Not alone the flying squads of mounted policemen, but machine guns, and all sorts of firearms, showing that, at least, there is the constant possibility that they may be needed. The reign of peace and universal good-will is still a long distance away.

Has there been a decline in the nation's patriotic spirit, because of the change that has come to the character given to the present Fourth of July celebration? That would be jumping to conclusions not warranted by facts. The form of celebration is always guaged by the ideas we attach to that celebration. As people advance from one degree of intelligence to another the change is noted in the form of its celebrations. We shall never get over the noise and confusion incident to the celebration of the Fourth. We ought not to for the sake of growing boys, and for those older people who have never gotten out of their teens. The let up of the old time Fourth of July oratory would seem to contradict what has been said but that is probably due to the fact that Memorial day is largely given to the consideration of national problems.

In the controversy over the new Children's Bible, we find the very widest divergence of opinion. Prof. Edgar J. Goodspeed of Chicago university, who is an author of an American translation of the New Testament, pays his respects to King James' translation as follows: "We have offered our young people a New Testament smothered and muffled in the verbose and antique 'high' literary style of the 16th century, often more concerned with Elizabethan diction than for the meaning of evangelists and apostles and we have wondered that they have not greatly cared to read it." Prof. William Lyon Phelps, the well-known authority on English literature at Yale has this to say on the same subject: "The best version of the Bible for children to read is the Authorized or King James version, published in England in 1611. It has the best English prose style that can be found anywhere." When doctors thus disagree what are we poor laymen going to do?

If one chanced to be in Westerly one afternoon, he would have seen a little touch of humanism that is worth recording. It was at the time when the little ones from the kindergarten came pouring out of one of the public schools. When the traffic cop saw them come marching out of the school yard he at once took charge of the situation. Up went the arm of the law stopping the stream of traffic which at that hour was heavy in both directions. An empty lane was at once made between the white marks running at right angles to the street. As the little ones passed him some squeezed his hand, all spoke to him. Some of them he patted on the head, and one [illegible] little tot (it might have been his own) he took up in his arms and kissed. It was evident that his popularity with the little ones was very great. The onlooker was made to feel that authority is not inconsistent with the "milk of human kindness."

In olden times and in pagan lands it was the custom to hire mourners for funerals. Hence a profession of howlers grew up. Those who could make the most blood-curdling noises received the largest pay. This custom has long since been given up in Christian lands because it did not tend to soothe the hearts of relatives and friends. But in more recent days we revived this old paganism in a more spectacular way. When a man is now nominated for an important political office men and women who are known to have brass lungs are hired to root for them in convention. This ought to be less harassing to sensitive people than hired howlers at the funeral of a dear relative, but it shows the same degree of intelligence. Of course it is made to have all the appearance of spontaniety although it has been carefully staged. If it changes the opinions of the delegates it shows what mental calibre they have.

Chautauqua has come again—and gone. As usual it has been a full meal with many courses, all well-cooked, well-seasoned and palatable. For the price paid for the season tickets I know of nothing where one gets as much for his money. It is not uncommon to pay as much as this for a single ticket to hear some celebrity lecture or sing. When we do this we must make up our minds that we are paying about $1 to hear the lecture or the song, and twice that amount for looking at the celebrity. Chautauqua goes on a different plan. The celebrity price is cut out, and we only pay for the goods that are actually delivered. Its plan is both instruction and entertainment, but the programs are so arranged that we get instruction in the entertainment and entertainment in the instruction. When we remember that it ranges over seven full days with three performances a day, we realize what we are getting.

In his remarkable and interesting lecture Saturday night on War in the Chautauqua tent, Private Peat made this illuminating remark: "Before a lad gets a Victoria Cross pinned onto his coat for bravery one thousand other lads equally brave must be buried beneath wooden crosses." That is undoubtedly true. We are very apt to forget that these decorations for valor (and everyone of them is most richly deserved) are the most expensive things in the world. A strong point was scored by the speaker when he said, "When we stop building monuments to celebrate the glories of war, and build more to perpetuate the blessings of peace you will tend to lessen this false glamour of war in the minds of the young."

THE GRIP RADIO HAS ON COUNTRY

Radio, which has developed by leaps and bounds during the last twelve years, will, during the next few months tighten its grips even more amazingly upon the American people. Only two facts need be mentioned to make this clear:

First—The broadcasting of the republican and democratic national conventions, with people all over the United States by the millions listening in, gives some idea of how the receiving sets will be worked overtime to bring the people of every state within hearing of the campaign orators.

Second—Secretary Hoover is planning for the third big radio conference to be held in Washington in September "for better voluntary control of radio," which will be attended by representatives of every radio interest — manufacturers, broadcasters, dealers, marine interest, amateurs and listeners-in.

Already the administration of radio, centered under Secretary Hoover, has grown to such proportions that with the opening of the new fiscal year, there will be an important expansion of this service.

Radio will arouse more interest than ever before in the campaign for the presidency, in congressional and local campaigns. It has developed so suddenly and startlingly that general interest is intrigued. In the last presidential campaign radio did not take an important part, now it is at work with the prospect that it will be used very extensively.

Appetite Is Whetted

Listening in on the convention has whetted the appetite of the people. They want to listen to the campaign speeches. They will listen attentively to a speech where they will throw campaign literature in the waste basket without reading it. And there is no doubt about it—a speech that you hear makes a different impression on you than one that you read.

Campaign speeches can be made to go anywhere by radio. No matter how far in the backwoods a presidential candidate may be, speaking to only a mere handful of people, all that has to be done is to have a mieraphone in front of him connected with a small transmitter on a truck which serves as a pick-up for a central broadcasting station. And the big electric companies are prepared to give just such service.

There is no way of estimating within many millions the number of radio receiving sets in this country that will be employed to listen in on campaign speeches—because at least 30 per cent of all the sets in use are homemade. In fact the United States bureau of education has just made a statement that farm boys of high school age have already built more than 300,000 sets.

There is, however, an accurate record of the broadcasting stations through which the campaign oratory would be turned loose to a listening world—589, according to the latest count, and they cover every state in the Union, Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico.

People usually let up on radio in the summer time, partially because they can't hear as well, but more so because there are other attractions in the great outdoors. This summer, however, they will continue their interest in radio because of the campaign, and when they go on tours or camping they will take their radio equipment with them.

Radio Administration

So it might be well to consider briefly just what radio administration under Secretary Hoover really means:

Way back in 1910, when the first radio act was passed, it provided that radio be carried on certain passenger-carrying ships. Administration of the radio law was placed in the bureau of navigation of the then department of commerce and labor because this agency handled all government matters relating to shipping. This radio service was established on July 1, 1911.

One year later, the second radio act was passed, which gave authority to the Secretary of Commerce to examine and license radio operators employed in all private and commerical radio stations. This was intended to carry out the international convention, which also comes under the secretary of commerce. These additional duties were thrown into the radio division, already established, under the bureau of navigation, of which D. B. Carson is commissioner and A. J. Tyrer deputy commissioner.

It is under this law that the government still exercises administrative control with William D. Terrell chief radio supervisor in charge of the division. He was the first field officer in the government radio work, appointed July 1, 1911, when he was placed in charge of the entire Atlantic coast with offices in New York. R. Y. Cadmus, now supervisor in the third radio district, with headquarters in Baltimore, was placed in charge of the work on the Pacific coast in 1911, and some time later a third field officer was put in charge of the gulf coast as inspector. Mr. Terrell has been in charge of the radio division since March 1, 1916.

Operates Under Law of 1912

The government still operates under the law of 1912, because congress has failed to pass other legislation. In the session just closed, Representative Wallace W. White of Maine and Senator Howell of Nebraska introduced entirely different radio control measures. To expedite action in getting the House and Senate into conference, the House committee amended the Howell bill by substituting the White bill after the enacting clause. This was favorably reported and is still on the calendar.

This was intended to give to the secretary of commerce broader authority in the control of radio. This legislation covers a number of features not in existing law, and brings up new problems which might be difficult to solve. So the radio interests generally were rather well satisfied that it was not rushed through in the last session.

Under a recent appropriation the transfer of international radio accounting from the navy department to the bureau of navigation is provided for, to take effect on July 1. In 1912 the navy department handled so much of the world's radio communication that it seemed advisable to leave the collection of international accounts to the communications section. In recent years, however, so many commercial stations and ships of all nations are handling radio traffic that the work has increased to such an extent that it has now been decided to transfer several of the clerks most familiar with this work from the navy to the bureau of navigation to augment the personnel of the radio division.

Most Important Work

The radio division considers its most important work to be ship inspection, because that had to do with the safety of life. It has always held to this as a prime duty—trying to inspect every foreign and American vessel which carries fifty or more presons from our ports, and trying to inspect these every time they clear because the apparatus is so delicate.

As far as the public interest is concerned, however, the broadcasting service comes first. This has had a wonderful development in the last two years, since broadcasting began to interest the whole country and interference complaints came pouring in. This multiplied the work of the field inspectors.

The map of the United States has now been charted into nine radio districts, each with a supervisor in charge, aided by twelve radio inspectors and eight assistant inspectors. During the fiscal year which began Tuesday, the appropriations provide for six more assistant inspectors and a few clerks.

This force has to inspect the stations, issue licenses, assign wave lengths, give them call letters, etc.

Character of Stations

The scope of this work may be better understood when it is known that besides the 589 broadcasting stations there are 13 stations engaged in international communication, 45 stations working with ships, 2,723 American ship stations (exclusive of the stations on all foreign ships entering our ports carrying 50 or more passengers,) 177 point-to-point commercial stations, 83 technical and training stations and 17,000 general and restricted amateur stations. Besides examining and licensing the operators for all these stations complaints of interference problems solved, radio activities co-ordinated, violations of the law prevented and advice and assistance given to every one relative to the use of radio for commercial or private purposes.

The reallocation of wave lengths which became effective May 15, 1923, based on the recommendations of the second radio conference, while it greatly increased the work of this inspection service by requiring closer inspection and adjustment, has worked for the public advantage in general use of the air.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Trinity

Mr. Editor: It was with delight that I read the letter by A. E. S. in this morning's Bulletin. For just what he is trying to prove, he is disproving to my satisfaction, namely the Trinity. The Scripture quoted, John 1:1-3, speaks of the word or spokesman (in Greek Logos) as being with God in the beginning, there we might ask, the beginning of what? Psa. 90:2, says from everlasting to everlasting, Thou are God. Then if God had no beginning it must mean the beginning of all creation, and these other Scriptures bear out that Jesus was the first and only creation of Jehovah: Colossians 1.15, Who is the image of the invisible God, the first born of every creature. Revelations 1:17 also Rev. 2:8. I am the first and the last of God's creation for in John 1:3 we read: All things were made by Him. John 1:8 He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light. 1 Corinthians 8:6 but to us there is but one God the Father, of Whom are all things and we in Him and one Lord Jesus Christ by Whom are all things we by Him. This is a plain statement that all things are of the (or from the) Father carried out by Jesus Christ.

The word Father means life giver, Son, one who has received life. A son can not be as old as his Father. The word God means mighty one, Paul speaks of Satan as the God of this world, 2 Cor. 4:4.

The Holy Spirit (Ghost) is the power of God and is nowhere spoken of as a person.

The Scripture from Isaiah 9:6 is well quoted, yet many Christians believe that the time is here, when the government shall be upon his shoulders, and through His all atoning blood he will give back everlasting life to the human race. He will then be everlasting Father, life giver.

We are entering a new chapter in history well expressed in Rev. 11:15 The Kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of Our Lord. 1 Cor. 15:25-28. For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet, the last enemy that shall be destroyed is death, verse 26, and when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto Him, that put all things under Him, that God may be all in all.

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Luminous Liver.

And Moses was with the Lord forty days and forty nights—and Moses' face shone while he talked with Him. —Exodus 34:36.

Moses had spent forty days and forty nights up in the mountain in uninterrupted communion with God, and coming down among men, God's glory shone in his face. Moses wist not that the skin of his face shone while he talked with Him." But others saw it; and if you ever spend that length of communion with God it will show in your face and others will see it. Being with God shows. Thinking about God shows. Communion with God shows.

From Moses' knowledge of God came the inspiring vision that helped so much to make his life great. "Mountain-tops" were frequent in the life of Moses; hence he saw a great way onward. From the summit of Sinai he saw the heights and depths of the Law, and from the summit of Piszah he saw Lebanon, and Hermon and Mount Zion, and the Jordan. He saw right into the heart of the Promised Land. These visions made him pure and ambitious for the rights, and enterprising and full of hope; and they enabled him to die confident that the future of his cause, which was God's cause, would be all glorious."

From communion with and knowledge of God came a continuous growth into the likeness of God. This is the order of things in our relationship with God, and as we grow in knowledge of Him we grow in likeness to Him. The people we live with and love we become like. With God enthroned in the soul we will grow increasingly Godlike, will be increasingly transformed into His image, from one degree of character to another.

The secret, then, of a luminous life is communion with God. This brings us to notice the result of such a life. It is a blessing to others. Of those of the shining face, the shining character, the shining life, Christ told the value when He said: "Ye are the light of the world; let your light so shine that others, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father who is in Heaven." Beautiful lives are those who bless. People that have communed with God, that know God, that have had visions from God, these are the ones whose help is the most needed, and who are most gifted in blessing to those around them.

What a wonderful leader Moses became; what a wonderful work he did; the secret is an open secret and available to us all. If we want to be useful, let us live near to God. We cannot take others nearer than we are ourselves. The reason some people have so much spiritual insight is that they live to heaven's gate that they see sights, and hear sounds, that fall to our eyes or reach our ears because we live so far away. The secret of peace, the secret happiness, the secret of power for service, is in a walk of close and continuous fellowship with God.

Alexandra, the Cinderella Princess

While all England was preparing to receive the future Queen Alexandra, she was living in near poverty and was making her own wedding gowns.

Born the eldest daughter of Prince Christian of Gluksburg, Denmark, she shared the lot of the impoverished family, and her rearing was as modest as those of the peasants nearby. When 7, she met the future King Edward at a child's party, and her quiet simplicity won the heart of the then haughty Queen Victoria.

Ten years later the Prince of Wales again visited Denmark and the acquaintance was renewed. Not long afterward preparations were made to announce their engagement, but it had to be postponed because of the death of the prince's father, Albert, prince consort. Queen Victoria withdrew from society and mourned the death of her husband.

Soon afterward social conditions demanded that there be a Princess of Wales and the engagement was quickly announced. Money was lavishly spent in preparing for the coming of the young princess. At her home there was not enough funds for a dowry or a fitting trousseau, and she feared the magnificence into which she was to be thrust. Then the people of Denmark collected 100,000 kronen among themselves and gave to the little princess that she might have the necessities for the great event.

The wedding took place in St. George's chapel, Windsor, when she was 19, and London raved over the beautiful new princess. Ten months later, while she was attending a skating party, the Duke of Clarence was born. Two years later she gave birth to Prince George, the present King.

As Queen Alexandra she was beloved by the people and her training gave her charm and simplicity that never left her. Her popularity grew and her life with her children was happy.

Her first bereavement was when the Duke of Clarence died at 28, the next was the passing of her husband.

With his death she, at 66, retired from first to second lady of the empire. But she still was beloved as the queen mother and today is one of the most popular members of royalty in the world.

Warren S. Stone, who has been chosen to direct the activities of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for the next three years, has been at the head of that organization for more than 20 years and stands among the most influential leaders of organized labor in America. For several years past he has given much of his attention to the development of the Brotherhood's system of co-operative banks and other financial enterprises. Mr. Stone is a native of Iowa and received the benefits of a college education. He was inclined to mechanical interests rather than to scholastic pursuits, however, and became railroad brakeman as soon as his student days were over. At the age of 19 he started as a locomotive fireman on the Rock Island road and within five years had attained a position as engineer. In 1903 he was chosen to succeed the late P. M. Arthur as grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

SMALLER EGG YIELD BY HENS AT STORRS

National conventions, Fourth of July celebrations, Labor Day parades, and all the different days of gayeties do not as a rule affect the egg production of hens. The egg production throughout the country is decreasing and egg prices for hen fruit of good quality have shown a marked advancement. The hens in the egg laying contest at Storrs at the end of the 36th week laid a grand total of 115,396 eggs. The total for the week was 3,788 eggs or a yield of a little over 54 per cent. This production is 62 eggs less than last week but is 14 eggs more than last year's production for the same period and 65 eggs less than the eight year average for the same period when electric lights were not used.

A pen of Rhode Island Reds owned by Red Mount Farm, Franklin, Mass., was first for the week with a production of 67 eggs. Hanson's Poultry Farm's White Leghorns from Corvallis, Ore., were second with a total of 56 eggs. A pen of White Leghorns owned by Hilltop Farm at Suffield, Conn., was third with a score of 55 eggs. H. F. Barber's White Rocks from Dover, Mass., a pen of White Leghorns owned by Andrew L. Ohr, of Wallingford, Conn., and a pen of the same breed entered by L. W. Steelman, State College, Pa., were all tied for fourth place with a production of 53 eggs each.

The extent of the injuries will not be determined for 24 hours. Mrs. Glidden was found lying unconscious on Ocean avenue between Thames street and Gardner avenue shortly after midnight by John Kelly, an employe of the local postoffice. ROCKET STARTS $30,000 FIRE IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, July 4.—The Sperry Warner Lumber company building, formerly the Casino, scene of many boxing contests and roller skating parties, was completely destroyed by fire tonight, the loss being estimated at $30,000. The blaze is believed to have been started by a sky rocket which landed on the roof. The work of a number of taxicab drivers who removed 50 automobiles from an adjoining building aided the firemen in confining the blaze to the lumber plant. Thousands of feet of lumber and a saw mill were burned.

From Thursday night at 8 o'clock to midnight the firemen answered 45 alarms.

Call for Awning Fire

An awning fire spoiled the chance for the department to go through the Grand and Glorious Fourth without one call. At 9.20 Friday they received a telephone call for an awning fire at the People's Store at 258 Boswell avenue. The fire was quickly extinguished with chemical the damage being slight. A fire cracker tossed onto the canvass, started the blaze.

WEST SIDE CHAIRMAN BADLY INJURED BY BOMB EXPLOSION IN CELEBRATION

After a day which seemed due to go down in history as one of the best July Fourths seen in Norwich in many a year, a shadow was cast over the entire celebration in the evening at the Fair Grounds when Paul Brown of 454 West Main street, general chairman of the West Side Fourth of July committee, was severely injured by one of the night bombs exploding when only about three feet from the ground, knocking him unconscious, bits of the wooden shell inflicting deep cuts on his face and various parts of his body.

Dr. Louis T. Cassidy and Dr. Ier J. Manwarring, who were on the grounds, were quickly summoned and Mr. Brown was rushed to the Backus hospital where the wooden splinters were removed from the wounds and treatment given. Mr. Brown suffered two lacerations on the right cheek, his upper lip was severed, both hands were badly cut, his right knee and right foot cut by flying wood, which pierced through his shoes far into his foot, and there were other cuts about the shoulders where pieces of wood were driven through his clothing. By good fortune the flying splinters struck only the lower part of his face neither did his eyes suffer from the flame of the explosion. It is expected he will be a patient at the hospital for a week or ten days.

Immediately following the accident word was given not to fire off any more of the night shells but later in the evening a test was made, using a long pole to light off another bomb and this, too, exploded prematurely when about eight feet from the ground, no one being injured. The shells which had been purchased direct from a New York concern by Mr. Brown were then deemed imperfect and at the suggestion of a representative of the firm of Disco Brothers who had supplied the rockets and set pieces the remaining 14 bombs were placed back in the containers to be returned to the New York concern.

The remaining fireworks were a beautiful display and a crowd of over 5,000 people witnessed them and enjoyed watching them, although the accident to Mr. Brown spoiled the pleasure for everyone and sympathy was expressed for him by hundreds who had come to view the final treat of the day.

Big Street Parade.

The activities of the day began at 10.30 o'clock with the big street parade, one of the best seen in Norwich for a July 4th celebration. Hundreds of cars lined both sides of West Main street from the Fairgrounds to Ricker's corner and the several side streets over which the parade moved, and hundreds of people occupied places of vantage along the line of march. Athletic Programme.

The athletic program was in charge of Samuel Slosberg, Milton Adnopos and E. J. Fritz and provided plenty of interest for everyone. The opener was the two-mile marathon race from Connell street, around the track at the fairgrounds, and was won by Dewitt Parsons by less than three feet. The runners found the uphill run to the Fairgrounds a real test of endurance but as the athletes neared the grounds they caught their second wind, and the final dash around the half-mile track proved to be an exciting run. The boys hung together throughout the entire course, and it was on the home stretch that Parsons and Berberick, who finished second, demonstrated their grit as well as ability. This finish called for some strenuous efforts on the part of both boys, and Parsons finished but less than a yard ahead of his competitor.

Many of the other events were full of excitement and proved full of interest for the large crowd of spectators that filled the big grandstand. The tug of war contests, first by the men and later by the ladies were lively tussles. Many of the events were close and exciting.

In the athletic events, winners and prizes awarded were as follows:

Marathon race—Dewitt Parsons, first, silver loving cup; O. Berberick, second, combination humidor and music box; Robinson, third, shaving set; Forrest Lewis, fourth, flashlight; Marsh, fifth, pair of Keds; Lawrence Browning, sixth, white shirt.

Running broad jump—James Kelly, first, 17 feet, baseball bat; Goodrow, second; Arthur Armstrong, third.

40-yard dash, finals—Louis Green, first, air rifle; Donald Royce, second.

Following the track and field events, the Benedicts and Single Men fought it out in a ball game, and for once the married men must be credited with winning an argument, the score being 6 to 5 in their favor. The winning team comprised: Irving Drake c, Goodrow p and 3b, Jackie Kane p and 3b, Johnny Crowe, 1b, Kid Huntington 2b, John Griffith ss, Oat and Smith cf, Dougherty and Lasonde rf, Rathbon lf.

Following the baseball game, a program of songs and recitations was given by about twenty children of West Side families, speaking from a stage across the race track. The grandstands were filled while this was in progress and there was a most liberal applauding for the efforts of the entertainers.

Basket Luncheon and Singing.

A new and novel Fourth of July event came next on the program and hundreds of people enjoyed a basket luncheon at the fairgrounds, following this with a period of community singing under the leadership of Roderick F. Sullivan and Robert W. Otis, cornetist. This program consisted of the singing of old-time melodies and the crowd joined in heartily for a half hour of singing.

At 7.30 o'clock the Italian-American band gave its concert on the platform, both grandstands being packed to capacity, while hundreds of people enjoyed the fine program from their cars seated about the track and grounds. The concert was the first of a series of six to be given during the summer by this band and Swahn's band and judging by the applause the people of Norwich welcome the opportunity afforded through the efforts of E. LaRue Bliven, chairman of the amusement committee of the court of common council.

Fireworks Display.

The display of fireworks started shortly after 9 o'clock and continued for over an hour, the crowd applauding as the several beautiful set pieces were touched off and the heavens were lighted by the brilliant bursts of big skyrockets. Owing to the unfortunate and sad accident that befell Mr. Brown, the display of night bombs was not given, these shells being deemed imperfect, and are to be returned to the New York company from which they were purchased for examination.

The events of the day came to a close late in the night after several hours of dancing on a platform built near the exhibition hall. Music was furnished by Herb Smith's orchestra and many couples availed themselves of the opportunity of enjoying out-of-door dancing.

The West End community celebration was without doubt one of the largest ever planned by any section of Norwich and bids fair to become a yearly event, to assume even larger proportions another year, which, it is hoped, will lead in time to a community celebration of like nature, staged in Norwich on July 4th in years to come. The celebration kept the people at home and hundreds who would ordinarily go elsewhere to seek pleasure on that holiday remained at home and enjoyed a fine time in the Rose of New England.

West Side Decorated.

The houses on the West Side, particularly along the line of march, were decorated with the national colors, many of them being elaborately decorated with bunting and streamers. Flags were generally displayed from the houses and hundreds of cars that came to the West Side during the day decorated with flags and bunting added much to the attractiveness of the celebration.

The success of the day was due to the untiring efforts of all committee members, and many not on committees who assisted in making the celebration a success through loaning the use of trucks and cars and contributing the beautiful prizes for the parade, track and field events. The committee was as follows: Paul Brown, general chairman; parade committee, Roger Browning, Frank Davis, John D. McWilliams, Mrs. Frank I. Royce, Mrs. Henry Pukallus and Mrs. Samuel Slosberg; community singing, Roderick F. Sullivan and Robert W. Otis; dancing, Miss Margaret Sullivan; children's program, Mrs. Roderick F. Sullivan; athletics, Samuel Slosberg and E. J. Fritz; collection, D. L. Browning and Arthur Armstrong; basket lunch, West Side women.

TAFTVILLE HAS FEATURE CELEBRATION OF FOURTH

Taftville's biggest and best celebration of the Fourth was successfully carried out with a feature parade, a mile long, as the morning attraction, and a band concert in the evening. Residences in the village were generously decorated in the national colors and hundreds of automobiles lined the streets along the line of march, while the traffic was well handled by two state policemen from the Danielson barracks.

At the conclusion of the parade at Memorial park the American flag was raised by Battery B and the Boy Scouts while a cannon salute was fired, and the Star Spangled Banner was played by Swahn's Military band.

Spirited airs for the parade were rendered by Swahn's band, the Wauregan band and Brunelle's band, each heading a section of the parade in which many unique designs and ideas were displayed in the twenty floats. The judges—Mayor Milo R. Waters, Patrick F. Sweeney and Jeremiah A. Desmond—occupied the reviewing stands at the Ponemah Wheel club and J. C. Marsan's veranda. They made the following prize awards:

Floats.

First, Knights of Columbus, representing Columbia, with globe of the earth, boys and girls on the float and K. of C. emblem at the front.

Second—Army and Navy club, representing the transport Magnolia, with soldiers, sailors, an orchestra and four guns on the float.

Third—Divided between old St. John's society and St. Louis society. The former had a young boy representing St. John with lambs and boys and girls about him. The latter represented King St. Louis by David [illegible] with several girls atending him.

Horribles.

First—Fancy Corner Zoo—Men in cage representing lion, zebra, hippopotamus, wild men, with clowns, on top of cage.

Second—Taftville bug house—Six men carrying a house.

Third—Lisbon Lovers—Richard and Christopher Heberding driving an old horse and buggy with the sign "Excuse Our Dust."

Specials.

First—Turner Sections, Taftville Maennerchor.

Second—St. Veronica's T. A. B. Society, 16 girls carrying an American flag that they unfolded along the line of March.

Third—Taftville Fire Department, No. 2.

The completely successful celebration was in charge of the Taftville Field Day association with John B. Benoit general chairman, William Smith, vice president, Armand Fontaine, secretary, Napoleon Pepin, treasurer, and the following aides: Andrew Frohmander, Henry Phaneuf, J. C. Marsan, Louis Gladue, Allen Bogie, Archie Molleur, Omer Tellier, Arthur J. Roy, R. C. Dion, Henry Couture, Cleophas Martin, Louis Paquette, Louis Gregory, A. Marien, Joseph Waldron in charge of Scouts, James White and Velmore Couture, messenger boys on bicycles.

At the corner of South B street and Third avenue, the proposed line of march had to be changed for the heavy floats as the street commissioner of the village ordered them to keep off South B street as it was not in a condition to stand the traffic.

MISS McKANE PLAYS BRILLIANTLY AND WINS HARD MATCH FROM MISS WILLS

Wimbledon, England, July 4.—(By the A. P.)—The tennis title that Mlle. Lenglen, the French star, has held against all the world since the close of the war passed this afternoon to a British champion, Miss Kathleen McKane, when in a magnificent thrilling match she triumphed by a narrow margin over the champion woman player of the United States Miss Helen Wills. The score, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, does not give a true indication of how slim was the margin of strength in favor of the victor.

Mlle. Lenglen had reached the semi-finals in the Wimbledon tournament, but was forbidden by her doctors to continue further play, and thus was unable to defend her title.

Miss McKane to win the championship today had to make an uphill struggle, as Miss Wills, after taking the first set, lat in the second at 4 games to 1. When her cause became desperate, Miss McKane was wise enough to throw aside the conservative methods and caution that usually characterized her play. Venturing everything she abandoned the back court and rushed to the net at every opportunity, gaining her end for five games in succession and with them won the second set.

Miss Willis fought doggedly for every point but she fought cautiously and caution could not avail against Miss McKane when she was taking brave risks and succeeding with them. In the final set the American champion won what seemed to be the critical fifth game and led at 3 games to 2, but the British woman would not be denied her victory, once more she evened the score, passed her rival and then with a few lucky lucky breaks to help her along, won the match.

ATHLETICS DOWN BOSTON IN HOLIDAY PROGRAM

Philadelphia, Pa., July 4.—Philadelphia took both morning and afternoon games from Boston in today's holiday bill. The batting of Lamar, formerly of Toledo, and Joe Hauser, both of whom hit homers that accounted for six runs, featured the first contest while Baumgartner's left handed shoots were a puzzle for the Red Sox with the exception of Ezell who made three of the seven safeties. The Athletics won the second game by pouncing on Murray, in the first inning for four runs, one of which was a circuit blow by Simmons with two on base. Rommel was hit hard in the first half of the battle but settled down until the ninth when a Red Sox rally failed with the tying runs on base. Scores:

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
Captain, New York Giants

Should the third baseman field all bunted balls with only one hand to save time?

This all depends upon how the balls are bunted. It is a good rule for the third baseman, as well as all infielders to field their ball with both hands, unless it is absolutely impossible to do so. This is certainly true of a bunt that is tapped real hard. Of course when a third baseman comes in on a slow bunted ball, he has to handle it with one hand, and as this is a difficult play, he never becomes a real third baseman until he is able to play it in this way.

MURPHY WINS ANOTHER FEATURE AT NORTH RANDALL

North Randall, Cleveland, July 4.—(By the A. P.)—The victories of Etta Durien in the Tavern "Steak" and Fritzie Mac in the 2.16 trot marked today's Grand Circuit racing here.

Etta Druien, driven by Thomas Murphy, Syracuse, won the second $5,000 purse for his stables this week, Baron Worthy having captured the Edwards on Tuesday. It was the fourth Murphy has won the classic in seven years.

Taking the lead before reaching the half mile post in the first two miles Etta never was headed. With the Etawah mare ruled out, Walter Cox's Iloguy took the consolation heat.

Fritzie Mac furnished one of the biggest upsets in Grand Circuit history. After finishing third to Jim Clark in the first heat, Fritzie driven by his owner, W. A. McGeath, Montpelier, Ind., won the next two heats in which Jim Clark broke and lost the race. The Grand Rapids, Mich., man who held the only $10 result ticket, collected $2,175.50.

AUTO CLASSIC IS STOPPED BECAUSE OF UNSAFE CONDITION OF THE TRACK

Speedway, Kansas City, Mo., July 4.—Jimmy Murphy raced way with the national championship automobile race here today. The race, scheduled for 250 miles was called by officials at the end of 150 miles, because of bad holes that appeared in the track earlier in the race. Tommy Milton was second; Bennett Hill, third, and Harian Fengler, fourth.

The fastest time made in the race was 117.8 miles an hour averaged Ernie Ansterberg at the 25 mile mark. Ansterberg held the lead up to the fifty mile mark but was forced out soon afterwards with a broken connecting rod.

No accidents marred the race.

BROWNS HUMBLE TIGERS IN TWIN ENGAGEMENT

Detroit, July 4.—St. Louis took a double header from Detroit today, 5 to 2, and 3 to 2. Inability of the Tigers to hit either Vangilder in the morning affair or Davis in the afternoon was responsible for the Detroit defeats. Davis held the Tigers to 2 hits in seven innings, but was replaced by Danforth because of wildness. Score:

THREADMAKERS WIN AND LOSE IN HOLIDAY BILL

(Special to The Bulletin)

Willimantic, July 4.—The American Thread A. A. entry in the Connecticut State league evened up matters for a 3 to 2 defeat sustained in New Britain yesterday morning by winning a hard fought game from the Besse-Leland team of the Hardward City at itscreation park in the afternoon. All kinds of baseball, good bad and indifferent, were crowded into the pastime and it was anybody's game until the last man was retired.

Both teams had their hitting togs on and divided the honors with eleven blows apiece. The visitors had two big innings, the first and the last. In the opening canto they tallied three times on a base on balls and a brace of misplays and Zielke's four base swat to left. In the ninth with the score 7 to 4 against them they rallied and had two runs over the platter and the tieing and winning runs on base with none out. Wood tightened up, however, and forced the hard hitting Zielke to fly out, fanned Goeb while Bagley grounded weakly for a force out.

With the score 4 to 0 against them in the third the locals got one tally on a single by Flaherty, Begley's error on the hit and a couple of battery errors. Willimantic's big inning was the fourth. Hamel singled with one away and stole second, keeping on to third when the throw went to center field. "Mickey" Flaherty electrified the fans by poling a clean home run to right center, scoring Kamyk ahead of him, the latter having previously singled, letting in Hamel. The joy an dsurprise of the fans knew no bounds when "Pete" Wood, next to bat, duplicated Flaherty's feat, hitting the ball to deep left and breaking the time.

Willimantic added one in the fifth on Adams' hit to center. He kept on to third when the center fielder let the ball go through his legs and scored on B. Trauske's hit to left. The Threadmakers made their final tally in the seventh on a single over second by Smith, Normandin's sacrifice and another hit by "Bunny" Trauske.

Scott in the box for New Britain was driven from the mound in the fourth but returned to the box in the sixth after playing a couple of innings in the outfield. He was very wild and one of his shoots which hit Sharpe in the arm forced the local center fielder to leave the game. The score:

BASE WINS LOOSE GAME FROM HOLYOKE

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, July 4.—Playing slovenly ball behind their twirler, McCarthy, the Holyoke A. C. of Holyoke went down to a 12 to 10 defeat at the hands of the Submarine base here this afternoon. The game was a draggy affair had little or no kick to it. The visitors failed to impress the spectators present that it was a fast outfit.

The hitting of the visitors was sporadic, and because of this several chances for scores had to be abandoned. The hitting of the sailors was timely and the six tallies scored by this outfit in the third inning came as a result of consecutive hits and two errors. With faster fielding the Base would have found it rough going, but the visiting outfielders and their second baseman were wont to let balls fall between them for hits and at times would begin a rally for the home club by erring on ball hit to them.

The Sub Base used three pitchers. Left Harrell started the game but left the box after working only one inning, to return again in the latter part of the eighth and ninth innings when the Holyoke nine threatened to tieup the score. Locke followed Harrell and went good for six innings. In the eighth he was relieved by Taberg, who not only was wild but ineffective. He threw a double and a singe at the bats of the visitors and this with two walks and two errors gave the Bay State team four runs and dangerously near tieing up the score. Lefty Harrell relieved him with two down and hi was well after that.

During infield practice Dinty Moore, Base short stop was hit in the eye by a batted ball, requiring two stitches to close the cut. The score:

FOUR WORLD'S RECORDS ARE OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED

Paris, July 4.—(By the A. P.)—Four world's records at distances of one mile, three miles, 1,500 metres and 5,000 meters, made by Paavo Nurmi, sensational Finnish runner who is expected to be one of the brightest Olympic stars, were officially accepted today by the congress of the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

While gaining this remarkable distinction, however, one of Nurmi's previous records—for the 10,000 metres—has been displaced by a new mark set by a fellow countryman.

This was the time of 30 minutes 35 4-10 seconds made last May in Finland by Willie Ritola, present American distance champion who returned to help his native land in the Olympics. It supplants Nurmi's former world record of 30 minutes 40 1-5 seconds.

Altogether the federation accepted six new world records, the last one being in the pole vault where the

WESTERLY

Bliven opera house on Main street is soon to have a new street front erected, and the present arrangement will be torn out to make room for a new marquee, lobby and foyer. Contracts were signed Thursday by the management, David Novogrod, with Hurlbert and Gavitt for the work of remodeling and renovation, which will begin July 24th. At least six weeks' time will be required to make the changes and improvements, to insure reopening on Labor day.

The plans call for a complete removal of the street front of the building. The entrance will then be lowered to the street level, at which a cement floor will be laid through the foyer. A new canopy will be erected over the sidewalk and at one side of the main entrance will be located a ladies' rest room. French doors will give admittance to the body of the house and the interior will be renovated and redecorated. If time and conditions permit, new seats will replace those in use at present.

Everybody knows that Rhode Island is noted for bullheads, but when it comes to the swimming kind Westerly has got the state beaten by about a mile and seven-sixteenths. "Moonie," a very enthusiastic sport with rod and reel, claims that he can prove that last Saturday at a nearby pond he captured one that weighed exactly six pounds. If this be true, why isn't he entitled to the championship, as far as concerns bullheads?

About Girls

Among the peculiar disclosures made by scientists in their study of humanity is the fact that most red-haired girls are bow-legged, while brunettes are, as a rule, knock-kneed.

Old Radio Apparatus

Apparatus with which an English scientist first experimented with wireless waves in 1879 has been discovered in a London tenement and placed in a museum.

Famous Inventor

UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD, N.Y.

John Hays Hammond, Jr., famous American inventor, who recently demonstrated for the Italian army, navy, and air authorities his newly invented method of "narrowcasting," or secret wireless transmission. It is reported, the authorities were greatly impressed by the invention, which not only insures secrecy but permits the same station to send or receive more than one message at the same time over the same wave length. The Hammond system, it is declared, allows an unlimited number of sending stations to operate at the same time without interfering with one another, because of its almost unlimited combination of wave lengths.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

LIFE WITHOUT ITS IDEAL IS NOTHING BUT STAGNATION

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY SPINNING

Like a blind spinner in the sun,
I tread my days,
I know that all the threads will run
Appointed ways.
I know each day will bring its task,
And,being blind, no more I ask.

I do not know the use or name
Of what I spin;
I only know that some one came,
And laid within
My hand the thread, and said, "Since you
Are blind, but one thing you can do."

Sometimes the threads so rough and fast
And tangled fly,
I know wild storms are sweeping past,
And fear that I Shall fail; but dare not try to find
A safer place, since I am blind.

I know not why, but I am sure
That tint and place,
In some great fabric to endure
Past time and race,
My threads will have; so from the first,
Though blind, I never felt accurst.

I think perhaps this trust has sprung
From one short word,
Said over me when I was young—
So young, I heard
It, knowing not that God's name signed
My brow, and sealed me His, though blind.

But whether this be seal or sign
Within, without
It matters not. The bond divine
I never doubt.
I know He set he here, and still
And glad and blind, I wait His will.

But listen, listen, day by day,
To hear their tread
Who bear the finished web away,
And cut the thread.
And bring God's message in the sun
"Thou poor blind spinner, work is done."

THIS, TOO, SHALL PASS AWAY

A mighty monarch in the days of old
Made offer of high honor, wealth and gold.
To one who should produce in form concise
A motto for his guidance, terse, yet wise;
A precept soothing in his hours forlorn.
Yet one that in his prosperous days would warn.
Many the maxim sent the king, men say,
The one he chose, "This, too, shall pass away."

Oh, jewel sentence from mine of truth,
What riches it contains for age and youth!
No stately epic, measured and sublime,
So comforts and consoles for all time
As these few words, go write them on your heart,
And make them of your daily life a part,
Has some misfortune fallen to your lot,
This, too, will pass away, absorb the thought.
And wait, your waiting will not be in vain.
Time gilds with gold the iron links of pain,
The dark today leads into light tomorrow,
There is no endless joy, no endless sorrow,

Are you upon earth's heights, no cloud in view?
Go read your motto once again, 'This, too,
Shall pass away," fame, glory and power,
They are but little bubbles of the hour,
Flung by the ruthless years down in the dust,
Take warning and be worthy of God's trust,

Use well your prowess while it lasts, leave bloom
Not blight to mark your footprints to the tomb.
The truest greatness lies in being kind,
The truest wisdom is a happy mind.
He who desponds, his Maker's judgment mocks.
The gloomy Christian is a paradox.

Only the sunny could respects its God.
Since life is brief we need to make it broad;
Since life is short we need to make it bright.
Then keep the old king's motto well in sight,
And let its meaning permeate each day
Whatever comes, "This, too, shall pass away."

WHAT WORLD NEEDS TODAY

Dear Social Corner Friends: I often read the letters written by the Social Corner sisters and wonder why some of the men can't add their bit to the interesting page and not let the sisters do it all. Perhaps some may feel that this is the work for the women, and while they do fine and give us some good things, I think the men should have a share in helping the good work along. Can't we think up something that will be of interest, and be the means of helping someone to live better, and set a better example at home, in the church, and community in which we live? This is what the world needs today. Good Christian example. In last Saturday's Bulletin I saw a piece written by Sister Kitty Lou on Please. It was good, (as all of her pieces are) and I thought if every one could only learn to use that little word how different the feeling would be toward everyone. It costs nothing but means a lot sometimes.

There are other subjects that we could write on equally helpful. Selfishness being one that might do some one good.

Let us watch for those things and by doing be of some use. As this is my first letter to the Corner friends, I will not weary you further.

UNCLE HENRY.

DELIGHTFUL TIME AT VERSAILLES

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Today we are removing the June slip from our calendars and beginning the July days. We can count many pleasant memories for the month just past, and the Social Corner gatherings and picnics will not be forgotten. Although there were many rainy days and rather cool for the season. We were especially favored for delightful temperature on the 20th, the much anticipated day for our annual picnic held at Versailles. As the sisters came that morning from their various homes in the different modes of conveyance, and turning the corner from the main road in sight of the little white church, we found the doors wide open to bid us welcome and enter again, as we did a year ago. Sister Olive and I had come from quite a distance, and as we stepped inside the door, we received a cordial greeting, with pleasant smiles from sisters Student and Strawberry.

Sisters were arriving continously and by noon there was a large party assembled, and ready for dinner. As usual, there was an abundance of food which I am assured all enjoyed, in partaking together. Standing in four places at the table, and before eating we all sang the Doxology. It was very interesting to meet new sisters for the first time, and to greet many whom we have met on former occasions. After dinner was over we adjourned to the little grove across the street, a beautiful site close to the edge of the riv . Sociability was the leading feature and many sisters had brought their Social Corner books for addresses which were liberally exchanged. The entertainment program consisted of readings, recitations and songs. Sisters Olive, Amy Keziah Doolittle, Ready and Jennie responded also other sisters whose names I did not learn. With all our mirth and pleasure and toward the closing of a perfect day, we stood to sing that appropriate hymn. God be with you, till we meet again. The Social Corner color was evident and attractive. From the trolley pole, at the car line, on the bridge on the trees, and at the church door were streamers of yellow paper showing the direction to follow. The dining tables were covered with white paper and trimmed with the yellow. Nearly every sister, perhaps a few exceptions, was decorated with the yellow ribbon, some of them marked with their pen names. I think it was Sister Student's daughter who had charge of the sale of ice cream and candy, at a little stand, out on the lawn. Sister Ready had presented a beautiful cake, which was divided into many pieces to be distributed among the sisters as we sat together out in the open and just before our time of parting.

Truly, it seemed, a successful picnic, every one seemed cheerful and happy. It is gatherings of this kind that change our thoughts from cares and blues, and not only a pleasure for the time being, but the memory that lingers.

Sister Silent Stranger: Kindly allow me to repeat a little advice that was given to me in the early days of my married life. An elderly lady who was a neighbor suggested this: "If you wait till you have nothing in the house to do, you will never go out, but stay in all the days of your life." Circumstances alter cases, but pardon me, if I urge you to make the effort to attend some of these Social Corner gatherings. Could you not conveniently prepare an extra supply of the bread and butter business, on the preceeding day of a picnic. I am sure you you would more enjoy meeting with a large company of writers, than probably just reading the Social Corner page.

Sister Delight: I regret your absence due to illness. I know how to sympathize.

JENNIE.

SOME HELPFUL AIDS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I saw my name in the roll call so will write a few lines. I am anxious to see the Corner news each week. I wish I knew more of the sisters, but I do not have a chance to go to any of the meetings as I live out and there is no conveyance. So I do get very lonely at times. We need and must have some society. I will tell you the date of my birthday as some have requested. It is Jan. 17th. Should like to offer a few helpful things.

To keep off mosquitoes, rub exposed parts with kerosene. The odor is not noticed afer a few minutes.

Grandmother's Harvest Drink: One quart of water, table spoon ginger, three heaping tablespoons sugar or molasses, half pint vinegar.

For Sprains: The white of an egg, and salt mixed to a thick paste is one of the best remedies for sprains or bruises or lameness for man or beast. Rub well the effected parts.

A tea made of red clover blossoms is excellent for "hives" or any disease of a scrofulous nature. All best wishes to the Social Corner friends.

HELENA.

FRANK'S JUNIOR BAND

Dear Social Corner: I had quite a treat Sunday. I went down to Stanley's grove, near the foot of Derry hill. It is a beautiful grove and Sunday Frank's Junior band from Stafford was there and have a free concert. The band is composed entirely of boys between the ages of ten and fifteen years and it is surprising how well they play.

Frank Lasbury, the leader, must be a very happy man to be able to do so much for the boys. He started in several years ago with four boys and now has about thirty in his band. They were camping out for a week in Stanley's grove. They earn the money themselves for these outings and other expenses by playing for church socials and other places.

I was especially pleased when they played his favorite selection, Swanee River. They played it beautifully and with greater depth of feeling than boys are usually given the credit for.

After all who really understands the heart of a boy? They are usually ashamed to show any depth of feeling but it is there just the same. I know for I have three boys of my own.

There is no greater nor more important business in the world than being a father or mother.

I wish there were a Frank Lasbury and a band in every city in the country. In years to come these boys will look back on these outings and concerts as the happiest days of their lives for there is an appeal about music which nothing else can take the place of. Most of these boys will be better boys because of this training they are getting and most of them will be spurred on to better efforts so as to be a credit to Mr. Lasbury.

ROXANNA KEABLES.

A TRUANT GIRL

Dear Social Corner Friends: Saw my name in the roll call so will answer present. Guess I am the very last of the recipients to voice my appreciation to Social Corner Member for the very pretty calendar so kindly sent at New Ye's but I was delighted to be remembered and say "Thank You" from my heart.

Kitty Lou's letter on saying Please takes me back many years to when my dear mother was struggling to bring me up in the way I should go. She taught me this little rhyme and I have always remembered it and have endeavored to impress my youngsters with the same sentiment but sometimes they forget, as did I:

"Hearts, like doors, open with ease
To very, very, little keys,
Lis't', my child, the words are these
'Thank you, Dear' and 'if you please.'"

I am wondering if Calla Lily's sister J. remembers being sent by the teacher one morning to ask my mother why I didn't come to school and asking for a written excuse.

My mother replied, "Why G. has been to school every day! Why should she need an excuse?" Whereupon J. explained that I hadn't been near the school all the week.

Mother then said, "Well, I sent her anyway and if she hasn't been there its no fault of mine and she will have will get no excuse from me."

My humiliation was quite complete when I was asked after school and my teacher inquired of Miss M. a former, much beloved preceptress of mine, who chanced to come in the room, if she ever had heard of a truant girl and she replied that she had heard of truant boys. "Well, Miss Mullin said, tragically pointing at me, "There! sits a truant girl."

I think that cured me for all time of that particular form of misdoing.

She certainly was a good and wise teacher and I have much to thank her for, as I am sure have many others. Have had many teachers since but I think I valued her good opinion more than all. I hope she will see this letter and know that her labor in my behalf, was not in vain.

Love and best wishes to you all.

HORTENSE, ALIAS DACTYLIS.

(Aug. 10th.)

HASTENS TO ANSWER PRESENT

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: I see my name in the roll call and hasten to answer present. I am glad to belong to such a fine band of sisters and I often think if I could write such interesting letters as my sisters do I should want to write every week. But as I cannot I must try to be content. You know the poet says, "If you cannot on the ocean sail among the swiftest fleet etc, etc." I know I can quietly stay in the harbor and watch the vessels go by and try to be patient knowing I can never win the race or a prize again.

I see by the paper two sisters have passed on and gone to their reward. Our loss is their gain. My sympathy to the families.

We are glad to have some warm summer days again with sunshine and singing birds to cheer us. We must enjoy every day as it passes before stern winter shuts us in again. I enjoyed a nice long auto ride recently—went to Norwich and from there to Westerly River Bend cemetery and Watch Hill. It was a lovely day and a fine drive.

Was sorry not to meet with you at the Central Village meeting and hope I may meet you at some of the picnics. The only one I ever attended was at Alexander Lake and Theoda gave me such a warm welcome.

I always read the motto at the head of Social Corner page. One on Jan. 22 says, "Life is full of joys if we only know how to appreciate them." How true this is! Let us all look on the bright side of life and keep the shadows behind us.

Hope you all will enjoy the national holiday, July 4. I haven't got so old that I do not enjoy the day and always like the fireworks in the evening.

Elizabeth Henry: I haven't heard from you yet.

Silent Stranger: I think I know you come and visit me.

Kindest regards to all.

GRANDMA GRAY.

GREETINGS FROM CHOCOLATE

Dear Sisters: Think it is about time I answered present to my name in the roll call. I have been, as the children say, on the hop, skip and jump for the last month so that sometimes I almost forgot where I lived. I was dreadfully sorry that it turned out so that I just could not attend any of the picnics, but perhaps there will be some others before the summer is over and I may be able to get to them.

Black Eyed Susie: When ever you feel you want the East Side in a body just call me up in time to plan and we will be Johnny on the spot.

Mayflayre: My sympathy. Just one word but it means a lot if you have gone through the same sorrow as you are now bearing. But just try and think, when the sorrow is almost too hard to bear, of all the years you had her, and how thankful we ought to be that God spares them to us, so that we are old enough to appreciate their years of watchful guidance and we must still go on as if they were still here. Well I shall stop and retire as it is 10 o'clock.

CHOCOLATE.

FOR BIG BLACK ANTS

Dear Editor of the Social Corner: Until now I have neglected answering to my name in the roll call. When the names beginning with A were printed I did not find it in the list but later saw it in the paper dated May 10th which Roberta had noticed with a few of the letters B. I was very busy at that time cleaning house so did not read the Saturday's paper very thoroughly as I otherwise would.

Are any of the Corner members troubled with the big black ants? Three years ago they appeared in my pantry and I tried everything I knew of to get rid of them but did not succeed until I saw, printed in a Boston paper, of some one using poison fly paper which has been very effective. Take half a sheet of the paper, lay it smoothly in a saucer, sprinkle with sugar and moisten with a little water, now I rarely see one. If I do, I know the remedy. I hope all the members of the Corner will spend a pleasant summer.

ANNE D.

ENTHUSIASTIC FOR ELIZABETH PARK PICNIC

Dear Social Corner Sisters and editor: The first thing I want to do is to thank the editor for the yellow slip I received. To say I was surprised would not begin to express my feelings. Am glad he thought my letter was worth a dollar. I thought at first it was a bill for the paper, although it is not due as yet. Mother asked what will you do with it. Hubby said put it in the bank, but I think maybe I will buy gas with it.

Elizabeth park has been suggested as a place for a picnic and as Olive and Jennie live in Hartford couldn't they make the reservations necessary and every one bring their own eating utensils? There are five of us who live near and in Hartford—Anna Z., Jennie, Olive, Foxglove and myself—and I have no doubt but we will all be willing to help out.

The roses will soon be in all their glory. Now every one be a sport and come to Hartford. Foxglove and I go to Norwich and Willimantic, and even went to Versailles to the picnic.

Will not write a long letter this time as I had a letter in last week and do not want to take all the room.

Twice Twenty: Don't forget I will be looking for you.

Guess: You had better come also.

Elmer: How would you like to come, too? Better?

Balsam Fir: See by the paper you are visiting in Connecticut. Mayhaps you will honor us with your presence at E. P.

WHIRLWIND.

SEASONAL RECIPES

Dear Cornerites: I reply with pleasure to the roll call. It is an excellent idea and I hope that all the members make an effort to write to Corner as their names are called. I am sending some recipes that will soon be available.

Raspberry Tapioca: Stir 1 cup of granulated tapioca into 4 cups boiling water, add 1-2 teaspoonful salt and boil until clear then add another half teaspoonful salt, stirring constantly. Remove from the fire, add 1 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons lemon juice and 1-2 cup crushed raspberries, and 1 cup of whole raspberries. Chill and serve with cream.

Raspberry Cream: 1 pint raspberries, 1 cup granulated sugar, 1 pint milk, 3 egg yolks, 1-3 cup sugar, 1-2 teaspoonful orange extract, whipped cream.

Warm the berries and the cupful of sugar till mushy. Make a boiled custard of the milk, egg yolks, remaining sugar, and flavoring (add after coloring.) Stir in the sifted raspberries, chill, and serve very cold in a deep glass dish with the whipped cream on top.

Raspberry Pudding: Scald 1 1-2 pints of milk, mix 1-3 cup cornstarch with 1-2 cup of sugar and 1-4 teaspoon of salt. Stir into the hot milk and continue stirring over a slow fire (or in double boiler) until the mixture thickens. Then cook for 10 minutes stirring occasionally; set back on stove covered. Steam 10 minutes more. Then remove from the fire; stir into this stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs, add 1 cup of raspberries. Pour into small wet molds and chill. Turn out and serve with slightly sweetened raspberries.

Best wishes for the Corneh.

HUBBY' S CHUM.

RASPBERRY RECIPES

Dear Social Corner Members: I am glad to answer "present" to my name in the roll call. I am sending in some raspberry recipes which I think some of the sisters would like. Kitty Lou send in recipes for our Corner but these are different.

Raspberry With Sponge Cake: Split a sponge cake, put the pieces together with a thick layer of mashed berries between. Garnish the top with whole berries and whipped cream.

Powdered sugar sprinkled over the top may be used as a substitute for the cream.)

Raspberry Cup: Mix 1 tablespoon of orange juice with 2 tablespoons of lemon juice and 1-2 cup powdered sugar. Wash and pour in 1 quart of raspberries and let stand in a cold place for an hour to ripen. Serve in sherbet cups and garnish with a soft marshmallow in quarters or with a spoonful of whipped sweetened cream.

Rice Mold With Raspberries: Wash 1 quart of raspberries. Reserve 1 cup of the finest berries and mash the rest with a fork. Add 1-2 cup sugar and let it stand in a cold place at least for an hour. Wash 1 cup of uncooked rice and cook in a quart of salted water (boiling.) Drain, add 2 cups of scalded milk, 1-3 cup sugar and a thin slice of lemon peel. Cook in a double boiler until the rice is soft and the milk absorbed. Shape in small individual molds lined with raspberries. Turn out and serve with crushed berries.

HILLSIDE.

ENJOYED RURAL AUNTY'S PICNIC

Dear Social Corner Friends: A little late to answer to the roll call, but better late than not at all.

I attended Rural Aunty's picnic at Central Village and had a very nice time. I was glad to see Savilla and True Blue and sorry not to see more of the Norwich sisters but suppose two picnics in the same week too much to attend to.

I did so much want to go to Versailles but it was a case of going alone on the trolley so gave up the idea. I thought of you all a number of times during the day.

I was glad to meet Kentucky Wonder. I have known her dauchter a good many years and also to learn the identity of Historian.

If not too late will say thank you to the sister who sent me birthday cards.

What a wonderful club The Social Corner!

No one ever waits for any formal introductions. Everyone is so cordial and friendly it is surely a pleasure to meet together.

As I read the roll call I find names that don't sound any better than mine so with greetings to all the sisters I am the same

BUG.

ANSWER THE ROLL CALL

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: My name appeared on the roll call sometime ago. I had intended to answer the call much sooner but as I haven't been very well and am not now, I have neglected doing so. I think the call a wonderful idea and every one should answer it.

It has been terribly warm but it is much cooler today.

I have been sewing so as to have everything done before the warmest weather gets here.

Have been doing a little crochet and embroidery, too.

Will call this enough for answering the roll call.

AGATHA.

CANNING BERRIES

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: I see it is time for me to answer to the roll call. I think it is nice to have the roll call. I enjoy reading the Social Corner letters as I know quite a number of the sisters, or who they are, including Primrose, Saturday Eve, Twice Twenty, Iola, Uno, Whirlwind, Foxglove, Saville, Wurdy Bell, Roberta, Delia, Deal, May B. Keziah Doolittle and Twig. Do not know what has become of Tiny. Have not seen or heard from her in a long time.

Wish we might have one large picnic and have all Corner Sisters there. Then we would know a lot more about who is who. It is lovely outdoors these days. The things are surely growing in the garden and fields. As some of the sisters may have strawberries now will send in a recipe I heard over the radio.

To Can Strawberries or Raspberries: Take firm berries scald the jars well and keep in hot water. Fill jars with berries. Take equal parts of sugar and water and boil for syrup. When boiling, fill jar until it overflows then snap cover on, then cover with boiling water and cover. They retain color and flavor. Hope if any sister tries this recipe and likes it she will let us know if it is a good way to can strawberries. Best wishes to one and all.

VISITING THE SHORE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Although I am far away from you all, yet I am with you in spirit. Am enjoying the fine breeze this beautiful morning at the sea shore. Wish you were here in a bunch, we would have one of our lovely picnics together. I enjoyed the one at Versailles very much. Though of you all the 26th. Did not mean to shirk my duty but could not resist the temptation when I was invitetd to take a lovely ride of 75 miles by auto and spend a week by the shore. So here I am this lovely weather, bathing, eating sea food, and enjoying myself in many ways. I listen in on the radio everyday. It is wonderful music.

Bumble Bee: Wish you and the little Bee were here with me.

Unome: Hope you arrived home safely even if you and I were a little behind the times.

Queen Elizabeth: We looked for you and family that day at Versailles.

Golden Glow: Wish you were here, we would take a dip in the ocean.

Will send in some verses by E. A. Guest which I think are nice, entitled:

FOR THE DAY

Let me go through the day
With kindly thought for all.
To live, to work,
And with the night recall
The journey and its care
And find no hatred there.

Let me not, mad for gain,
Or pomp, or place, or pride,
Or thrust the weak aside
Let no one say I've been Cruel or base or mean.

Whatever may befall
To me through out the day,
Let me come through it all
Fair as I start away:
Let he, when night brings rest
Know that I've done my best.
With all success for the Corner.

A CHARTER MEMBER RESPONDS

Dear Social Corner Friends: As the time is drawing near for me to answer present, I will be late, for we should try to do that much at least. But am sorry to think that some of our charter members have answered to the call above. So Rural Auntie, you have found out who I am by one of your neighbors. I will enlighten you a little more. I am one of the charter members of the Corner, and will say I have seen many a new name appear from year to year, and our editor has been very patient with us.

I don't see why Historian does not find time to let us hear from him once in awhile.

I suppose Ma of Greene Gables is planning to have her vacation down at the beach, hope she does not go out too deep in the water after those round clams.

I will close wishing all the members a very happy summer.

KOCHIE (Feb. 13.)

SOME THINGS TO FORGET

Dear Sisters and Brothers: A good thought struck Twice Twenty when she suggestetd a roll call and I hasten to answer, present, and let her know I am still in the land of the living. The editor is doing his part in calling the roll. Let us do ours by responding promptly.

"I have a poor memory," said an old lady, "but a good forgitter." She was not so badly off after all, for it is as necessary for our peace of mind to forget something as to remember others. Forget the evil picture, the suggestive story. Forget the unkind remark. Forget the sneer or slight. Forget your worries. Forget your sorrows. Forget the failure you made and determine to transform it into a success. Oh, there are a whole lot of things that we are better off for forgetting.

HAPPY GO LUCKY.

JOINED THE FIRST YEAR

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: I ought to have been more prompt in answering after my name was printed in the roll call. I am sorry I did not get about it sooner. I think the editor was very kind to think of favoring us that way and I, too, say thank you to him. I joined the first year, I think it was, the Social Corner was started with F. C. C. as my pen name, but that did not quite suit me so I changed it to name I have a right to, being my own. I have always had a fine time when I have been able to meet at the Buckingham Memorial. The picnics are not so easy for me to attend. I hope to be with you again when the gatherings are in Buckingham Memorial. I wish to be remembered by Hancie, I. J. B., Slow, Sarah Y., Judie C., and Aunt Jane. With kind regards for all.

FRANCENA.

GRATEFUL FOR GIFT

Dear Social Corner Sisters: The Ladies Aid of the Versailles M. E. church wish to thank you for your generous gift of $10.

We are very glad you enjoy coming to Versailles for your annual picnic and social time together.

We are planning to do some repair work in our kitchen, and your gift will be used for that purpose.

Trusting you all have many pleasant times during the summer and, as we know, plenty of good things to eat, as our friend and your sister member Student often reports.

MRS. F. H. Topliff, Sec.

INTERESTED IN LETTERS AND GATHERINGS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Seeing my name has appeared in roll call, will answer present. I enjoy reading the letters and watching the different ones answering roll call. Although I know only a small portion of the Cornerites, yet I am interested in their gatherings and letters.

Wishing good luck to Corner.

I remain

FAIR HAIR.

BRAN BREAD

Dear Social Corner Friends: A lady asked me how I made my bran bread and I told her I would send it to the Corner, so here it is.

Three cups Lucky Table bran, 1 1-2 cup pastry flour, 1 teaspoon of baking powder, 2 cups sweet milk. Mix these thoroughly. Put 1 teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon soda in the cup and fill the cup with molasses, stir to mix well, and add to first mixture. Stir well, and turn in a common bread pan. Let it stand one-half an hour then bake 1 1-2 hours in rather slow oven. We like this much better than brown bread.

Airy— There are several Corner members in Putnam in my neighborhood, South Main street. Now tell us where you live!

PICNIC AT SELINDA'S JULY 9

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: I hope all the sick sisters are getting better. I would have liked to have attended the last picnic but it was impossible. Was glad you had such a good time. Now the 9th of July there will be a picnic at my home to which you are invited. I live in Windham Center on the road to Scotland.

Bring plate, cup, knife, fork and spoon and I will do my best to make you all enjoy it. Of course bring something to help stay the stomach. Hope to have a good number present. Yours for the Corner.

SELINDA.

BEFORE BABIES WERE BORN

Mrs. Oswald Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Girardville, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my last two babies came. It keeps me in perfect health and I am on my feet getting meals and doing all my housework until an hour before the baby is born. A friend told me to take it and I have used ten bottles since I heard about it. I recommend the Vegetable Compound whenever I can. Just yesterday a friend was telling me how miserable she felt, and I said, 'If you start taking Lydia E. Pinkham's you will feel fine.' Now she is taking it."—Mrs. P. J. OSWALD, JR., 406 West Ogden St., Girardville, Pa.

Mrs. Nicola Paluzzi Says

Mishawaka, Indiana. — "I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness before my babies were born. I was weak and tired out all the time and it helped me. When I had inward inflammation the doctor treated me, but did not help me, so I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it helped me at once." — Mrs. NICOLA PALUZZI, 416 E. NEW LONDON TRUCK TOOK FISH TO N. Y.: BROUGHT BEER ON RETURN TRIP

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, July 4.—One of the trucks of the C. M. Shay Company was seized at Madison late yesterday afternoon by the state police of the Centerbrook barracks, the truck containing a cargo of beer. The truck and its contents were later released, but not until three cases of the beer had been removed by the officers for shipment to Hartford, where an analysis will be made of it to determine whether the beer contains an alcoholic strength of more than one-half of one per cent. which was alleged by the raiding officers. The truck had delivered a quantity of fish in New York and was bringing the beer to a New London customer, it is alleged. When passing through Madison the truck was held up and when the nature of the load was revealed, the three cases to be used as samples of the cargo were removed, after which the truck was allowed to proceed. The truck was again held up at Niantic, but when it was learned that the Centerbrook officers had already obtained a part of the load the truck was allowed to continue to New London.

A motorcycle, owned by Frank G. Demetree, an employe of the Connecticut company, was damaged this afternoon when the cycle, which had been placed beside the curb on State street, near Bank street, was run into by a commercial truck owned by the Symon Furniture company.

A fellow, who had indulged in strong drink, was found by pedestrians lying on the walk on Main street, near the corner of Richards street, this afternoon. Sergeant Nelson Smith and Motorcycle Officer arrested the man, who will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

The night before the Fourth was one of the noisiest that this city has witnessed in many years, a fact made possible that the sailors from the submarine base received their semi-monthly pay. The bluejackets started as early as 7:30 to celebrate the holiday by exploding cannon crackers in the vicinity of the Soldiers and Sailors monument, on the Parade. The noise was terrific and continued until an early hour in the morning. Throughout the city the celebrating was general. At the quarters of the Niantic Engine company, Bank street, the customary bonfire took place at midnight. At the corner of Main and Hill streets another group of celebrators made merry by the discharge of a liquid explosive in ice cream cans. The noise of the explosions was so great and so prolonged tht complaint was finally made to the police. Throughout the city during the early hours of the morning, particularly between 1 and 3 o'clock, the noise was such that the police were besieged by residents' complaints of liability to obtain a night's rest.

The Glorious Fourth brought more than the usual volume of business to the police court this morning. There were eight cases on the blotter when court convened. John Henry Quinn, a cripple from paralysis of the legs, but a fine specimen of man physically otherwise, was charged with a violation of the liquor laws in having and selling whiskey and beer. He resides at 690 Bank street in what was known as the O'Neill property. Anna Kennedy Erickson was associated with him in the premises and was charged with keeping a disorderly house. She has been before the court a score of times for various offenses, from cohabitation with men on barges, and in abandoned buildings, to intoxication. She is regarded as the basis of the case against Quinn. Anna is married to Albert Erickson, a worker about the water and naturally an industrious fellow, but addicted to booze at times. He was fined $5 for intoxication because he pleaded guilty to that misdemeanor. The cases of the other pair went over till Monday and they were held in bonds of $200 for Anna and $500 for Quinn. The place where these people reside is regarded as a vile one, resorted to by men who have abandoned self-respect. Quinn has before been in court of late on the same offense and has been fined heavily. He appealed then and is to appear before the common pleas court at its next session. The place must be broken up as a resort.

This seems an auspicious time to do the job. The accused were able to obtain bonds, as they have been on other

Marcella Griffiths and Blanche Bostic, colored, one fat and forty, the other trim and twenty, were charged with being common street walkers. Blanche, who claims to have lost a husband in the war and to be receiving an annuity from the government. She argued law with the officers and others and manifested a knowledge of that science that was astonishing. But when she was presented in court she was altogether docile. Both were told that their presence in New London was not desired. They were fined $25 each and sentenced to six months in jail, with the understanding that if they left town within 48 hours the judgment of the court would not be put into execution. They were taken into custody at 11 Church street, a place notorious because of the fights that have taken place there. Blanche's conduct was such that there was absolutely no doubt as to her guilt, according to Evaner Joyner, a man who was peddling fish about the city in a basket and whom she encountered near her alleged home. He complained to the police and on the information he gave the arrests were made. As the attorney for the accused demurred to the complint no testimony was taken and the "gallery" did not listen to the spicy evidence that might have been laid before them. The attorney for the woman promised to see that they get away from New London during the day.

Then decent people had their day in court. They were not serious offenders. A case against Norman C. Wilcox of Borodel place, charged him with exploding a pistol in the street before midnight preceding the 4th. He said others were firing all sorts of pyrotechnics, so the court nolled that complaint and advised Wilcox to read the city ordinances before he celebrated the Fourth any more. Leslie Norman and Una Striddel, motorists, were charged with disregarding the rules of the road and failing to reduce the speed of their cars on approaching intersecting streets. They pleaded guilty and each was fined $5, but no costs were attached to the penalties.

Steamer New Hampshire of the New England Navigation Company left here at 10 o'clock this morning with 1,000 passengers for Newport. The passenger list was made of people from New London and vicinity for the good old days when a thousand or more persons were brought here by rain from all the stations along the line of the Central Vermont road, gone—pushed away by the interstate commerce laws that forbid an interchange of business of the passenger sort. The day was perfect for the sail though an easterly wind made a humpy sea and heavy swell around Point Judith.

Traffic was exceedingly heavy on State and Bank streets last evening, but there were no accidents though thousands of automobiles rolled up and down the street.

Lieut. H. B. Herty, 48 Park avenue, Groton, and attached to the S-36, stationed at the submarine base, complained to the police this evening that his car had been damaged on Bank street, another car running against it. Lieut. Herty declared that the driver of the colliding car evaded responsibility by driving away, following the accident. An hour later Sergeant Patrick Murphy observed an automobile bearing the registration of the colliding car, N-2103, passing through Main street. Commandeering another machine the officer overtook the car at Hill street. The driver of the car, Gaetano Mengri, 90 Smith street, was taken to the police station, and denied that his car had collided with another machine. Menghi declared that he had been in possession of the machine, which is owned by his brother-in-law, but a few minutes. Lieutenant Herty will leave on a cruise on the S-26 tomorrow, but declared he would appear against the driver of the colliding car upon return of the submarine to port. It later developed that Menghi's brother-in-law, Fortunato Renzone, 87 Smith street, was the offender for Renzone admitted driving the machine that collided with Lieut. Herty's car; also admitted knowledge of the collision. He will probably be presented in court upon the return to port of the S-36 when Lieutenant Herty will be able to appear against the accused.

John Molinowski, 3, residing with his parents at 89 John street, was painfully injured this afternoon when run over by an automobile, owned by Swift & Company and operated by Ivory W. Wentworth, employed by the company and residing at 47 Franklin street. Wentworth does not know in what manner the child sustained its injury, but believes that the youngster tried to get to the running board. Wentworth drove the car to the garage, which is also located on John street and as he entered the car after opening the garage door, he caused the machine to get into motion. The car had traversed but a few feet when he heard a child's cries and bringing the car to a stop he alighted and found the Molinowski child near the rear wheels, one of which had passed over the youngster's foreleg. An examination of the child revealed that the leg was broken, if not infected. A physician was summoned and the fracture was reduced. Wentworth stated that there were several children at the garage entrance when he reached there and some of them stepped to the running board of the car. He drove them off and so far as he knew there were no children near the car when he attempted to drive it into the garage. It is the opinion of Wentworth that the child attempted to climb to the running board as the car started, but was not observed by the driver because of the child's size.

THE APPLE MAGGOT — OR RAILROAD WORM

The apple maggot or railroad worm, Rhagoletis pomonella Walsh, is a serious pest of apples in Connecticut. The maggot tunnels in the ripening fruit, causing it to decay. It usually attacks the less acid and early maturing varieties, often rendering the fruit worthless. In certain seasons it also infests the late maturing and acid varieties like Greening and Baldwin. Sweet and subacid varieties are commonly attacked and the fruit ruined by this insect.

This is a native American insect which formerly bred in the wild thorn and in blueberries and huckleberries. The adult is a two-winged fly, with dark cross bands on the front wings, which emerges early in July and feeds for two or three weeks on drops of moisture on the leaves and fruit before laying eggs. The female has a sharp ovipositor with which she punctures the skin of the fruit and lays an egg in the pulp, just beneath the skin. This egg is whitish and elongated and hatches in from two to six days, when the young maggot begins to tunnel through the pulp of the fruit. They make little headway until the fruit ripens and becomes soft, then they increase rapidly in size and the injured fruit decays, the pulp becoming a brownish spongy mass. Sometimes the tunnels extend close to the skin and show from the outside, but in other cases there is no external evidence that the fruit is infested, though on cutting open, it may be found worthless. When mature the maggot leaves the apple and goes about an inch into the soil and pupates. There is probably a partial second brood, and development may proceed in fruit if the temperature is sufficiently high.

Formerly it was recommended that all drops be gathered and destroyed and that late cultivation be practiced to kill the pupae in the soil. Now it is known that spraying the trees with arsenate of lead (1 to 2 lbs. of the dry powder in 50 gallons of water) during July will prevent serious injury from this pest, as the flies feed upon the poisoned moisture on the foliage and are killed before they lay eggs. On application should be made about July 4th or earlier for early varieties, and another about July 25th, or three weeks after the preceding application.

Some Connecticut orchardists are already spraying several times after the trees blossom. Thus the apple maggot spray given the first week of July will control the second brood of the apple and thorn skeletonizer, and the second treatment should control the second brood of codling moth.

In case later applications are made to control sooty blotch on winter varieties, lead arsenate may also be included as an additional protection against the apple maggot.—W. E. Britton, Connecticut Experiment Station.

SOME ADVICE ON SPRAYING POTATOES

Spraying potatoes against fungous diseases has made slow progress in this state. The reasons for this slow progress are three fold: the potato is not a main crop, on which farmers depend for their chief income; there are few very large growers who can be depended on to set the pace; and last, late blight the chief reason for spraying, does not cause wide-spread loss every year. However, each year sees more Connecticut farmers growing potatoes on a commercial scale, and these men are, almost without exception, spraying thoroughly, and with profit.

Long continued experiments in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut prove beyond doubt that thorough, consistent spraying pays, every year, especially on late potatoes. Aside from protection from late blight, spraying with a fungicide helps in a minor way to lessen loss from early blight and tipburn, and, when combined with insecticides, gives adequate protection against the Colorado beetle and leaf hopper, and moderate control of the flea beetle and aphis.

In this state late blight rarely if ever appears before the middle of July, so that spraying would not need to start before that time were it not for the fact that this is a little late for the control of the insect pests and the early blight and for the further fact that when started this late it is usually impossible to cut thoroughly the lower parts because of the heavy growth of the vines at this time. For these reasons we advocate the starting of the spraying when the plants are six to ten inches high.

For a small acreage, a barrel pump may be mounted in a wagon. A boom is easily attached or the spray may be applied with lines of hose. Commercial growers find it much more profitable to use traction or power sprayers specially designed for potatoes and similar crops. When the vines are small, one nozzle will cover a row but for later sprayings, three nozzles are essential. Several satisfactory traction sprayers are now on the market.

Low pressure is often a cause of poor spraying. The gauge should never drop below 150 lbs. for good results, and 200 lbs. is better still. Successful potato spraying depends not only on beginning early, but also on thoroughness. Keep the foliage coated. A single nozzle per row will not cover, and lines of hose, while effective, make the labor cost too great. The high pressure machine with three nozzles per row is the only satisfactory rig for large areas.

Spraying should be repeated every ten days to three weeks according to the weather conditions and rapidity of growth of the foliage. Keep the foliage coated at all times, and especially see that it is particularly well coated before a rain. If one can spray and have the spray on just before a rain, this is particularly desirable. Under these conditions it will take from five to seven sprayings with a traction sprayer to thoroughly protect a field of late potatoes during the season. Ridging the rows early in the season helps to make driving through the field easier with less injury to the vines. It makes for better coating of the foliage, favors more rapid evaporation of moisture from the vines, and protects the tubers more thoroughly from infection by burying them deeper in the soil.

We recommend only home-made 4-5-50 Bordeaux mixture for potato spraying. To this can be added 3 lbs. of lead arsenate paste, or 1 1-2 lbs. of the dry form, for the first two or three treatments as needed for the control of insects. Farmers are reluctant to make their own Bordeaux mixture despite the fact that it is cheaper and more efficient than the commercial forms at the strength recommended. Some growers in other states have had good results with dusting, but our results so far here are much less satisfactory than with spraying.

Home-made Bordeaux can be made as follows:

5 lbs. Copper Sulphate (Blue Vitriol)
6 lbs. Fresh Lime.
50 gallons Water.

Note—Low magnesia lime leaves less sediment and does not wear out the discs so rapidly as high magnesia.

For small acreage. Dissolve the copper sulphate in hot water. Slake the lime and strain through coarse cheesecloth. Dilute each separately to 25 gallons. Pour together slowly through a strainer into the spray barrel.

For large acreage. Made stock solutions of copper sulphate and lime as follows: Dissolve 50 lbs. of copper sulphate in 50 gallons of water, by suspending in a grain sack. One gallon of stock thus contains one pound of copper sulphate. Slake 50 lbs. of lime, strain into a barrel and make up to 50 gallons. The excess takes care of waste in slaking. Put two 50-gallon dilution barrels on a platform so that the sprayer can be backed under them. For a 100-gallon sprayer put 10 gallons of stock lime solution into the lime barrel and 10 gallons of stock copper sulphate solution into the copper sulphate barrel. Dilute each to 50 gallons. By using a molasses gigot for each barrel, the two streams may be run together through a trough into the sprayer. A large fine wire strainer should be set in the sprayer opening. Lead arsenate, Paris green, or nicotine solution may be added if needed. Hydrated lime is handy to use, but ordeaux made with it is said by some not to adhere so well.

Some growers get good results with the following method: Start filling the sprayer with water, washing in at same time 10 gallons of the stock lime solution through the strainer. When half full, add the 10 gallons of stock copper sulphate solution with the remaining water, stirring meanwhile. When short handed this method saves time. Half of these amounts are used for a 50-gallon sprayer.—G. P. Clinton, Connecticut Experiment Station.

THE BRUSSELS SPROUTS

If there is one vegetable that should be raised in the home garden it is brussels sprouts. It is one of the most expensive vegetables to buy, and, when sent to market the quality both as to substance and attached insect life leaves much to be desired.

In the home garden they may be easily grown clean and only those sprouts of size convenient to handle may be picked. It is at its best after a few frosts when the vegetable garden has nothing left to yield for the table. Brussels sprouts seed may be sown now. Earlier planted crops often fail because they are too far advanced when dry, hot weather hits them. They need precisely the same treatment as late cabbage. Sown now and transplanted into permanent quarters the last of June or early in July half a dozen to a dozen plants may be cared for very easily and will return a fine reward this fall.

Possibly sprouts are so seldom grown because the high price in the market leads to a belief that they are difficult subjects. They grow quite as easily as cabbages to which they are closely related, the sprouts being merely a delicately flavored miniature cabbage which is produced along the stalk in the axils of the leaves which fall as the plant grows in height, leaving only a crown of leaves at the summit.

Give them the richest soil in the garden, in full sunlight, and be prepared to see that they are given copious watering in dry weather. Keep them hoed in the same manner as cabbage or cauliflower and give an occasional light sprinkling of nitrate of soda after a rain when the soil is moist or after a soaking with the hose, to keep them growing. Set them two feet apart and give them insecticides for cabbage worms which attack them and also bordeaux mixture for some of the blights that affect the cabbage tribe.

If plant lice appear, the worst pest for this vegetable from a culinary standpoint, spray with Black Leaf 40 or other tobacco insecticide and the lice may be put to flight before the tiny heads start forming and they may be picked clean. Paris Market and Danish are excellent varieties. Improved Dwarf is said to be less liable to attacks of plant lice than the others but these pests may be readily controlled by spraying.

TOMATOES ON STAKES YIELD THE FINEST FRUITS

Staking is somewhat more trouble than allowing the tomato plants to sprawl all over the ground, but the tomato plants which produce the best and cleanest fruits are those that are staked up on some kind of a suppport.

They will, of course, grow just as well flat on the ground but the fruits become strained in this position and will frequently rot. Tomatoes are trained or tied up by stakes, trellises, or forms of some kind.

By far the greater part of the commercial tomato crop that is grown for the fancy market is trained on single stakes. This method of support requires the minimum of lumber and the least work in placing the support and leaves passage way in all directions.

The stakes are commonly made from one to one an one-half inch thick and five feet tall. Split stakes although not so attractive are much stronger than sawed stakes and hence are preferred on this account. Stakes made of saplings are also satisfactory.

The tomato stem should be tied to the stakes by means of raffia, or soft strings, but care should be taken not to cut them when this is done. Three or four twines during the season to a stake of this kind is sufficient.

Some home gardeners prefer to grow their tomatoes in a form. The forms are too expensive and too inconvenient for the commercial grower but are all right for the home gardener. This frame may be made of any light wooden strips. Wire frames of similar construction can be easily made and may be purchased ready made on the market.

Several advantages are commonly claimed for training tomatoes. In the first place, the fruit will ripen somewhat earlier than it would if the vines were not held up off the ground where the sun will reach it better and where there is a good circulation of air. The quality of the fruit is somewhat improved if it is grown at an elevation from the ground, the improvement being principally in appearance because of the freedom from blemishes that are commonly received when the fruit is in contact with the ground. Some varieties which will not thrive well when allowed to lie on the ground will give very good results when trained. There is usually less trouble with fungous diseases when the vines are held off the ground.

Contrary to the common opinion, the yield from staked tomato vines is not commonly larger than from vines on the ground and is even sometimes less. Also there is considerable labor connected with staking, pruning and tying up the plants. But the advantages more than counter-balance these disadvantages. — S. W. Shoemaker.

Mud Guard Damaged.

An automobile driven by Arthur M. Beebe, of East Great Plain, sustained a damaged mud guard on Franklin street Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock when it was bumped by a machine driven by Arthur Cloutier, of 21 Treadway avenue, according to the report made to police headquarters by Mr. Beebe.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Little of interest happened in Norwich a half century ago even though the Fourth fell during the week. Nothing had been planned by the city in observance of the day save a small appropriation for firing the salutes and a band concert at night.

The news in part as taken from The Bulletin of 1874 is as follows:

Monday, June 29, 1874—There was an alarm of fire Saturday night caused by a slight blaze at the home of Othniel Gager, Broadway. The department turned out promptly and the fire was quickly put out, the loss being small.

A West Side boy met with an untimely death Sunday when he fell from a cherry tree. He landed on the sidewalk striking on his head, crushing in his skull and breaking his neck. The Delanoy Engine Company is to attend his funeral in a body.

Many local people were at Franklin Square Saturday to watch W. W. Kinne auction off a stock of carriages.

Chowder parties hold picnics every Sunday now on the bank of the Thames in Church's grove.

Messrs. Buckingham and Starkweather have returned home from Washington for the summer.

Prof. Cromwell closed his exhibition in this city on Saturday night with the "Homes of England," ranging from the castle of the monarch to the cot of the peasant. He now goes to New London for a four nights' entertainment.

Tuesday, June 30, 1874—Yesterday was the warmest day of the season. By 10 o'clock the thermometer had run up to 90 degrees, and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon it had reached 98 in the shade. The breeze which stirred during the day was about the only thing that made the heat bearable. Worcester reported 103 in the shade for the high point of the day.

The Circulating Library was sold at auction yesterday to C. D. Noyes & Co., for $430.

About 25 prohibitionists assembled at Uncasville Monday and organized the New London County Prohibition society. John J. Copp was elected president and among the many vice presidents named were U. S. Gardiner of Norwich, H. L. Johnson of Griswold, William E. Gillette of Colchester and F. C. Newell of Ledyard.

People returning on the Ella, Monday, from Block Island were treated to a rare sight when four whales were seen spouting at a distance in the ocean. The water spouts sent up by the whales were visible for several minutes and proved interesting to the excursionists.

Wednesday, July 1, 1874—The pocketbook taken from the person of Major Andre by his captors, September 23, 1780, has been presented to the Connecticut Historical society by the Rev. A. L. Whitman of Groton. It will hereafter be preserved by the side of Arnold's watch, which has been for many years in the cabinet of the Historical society.

Edwin Booth has been forced to leave the stage because of poor health and has taken up his residence at New London for the time being.

Strawberries are now for sale in most stores in the city and are priced at twenty-five cents a box. They are of fine quality.

All boats docking at New London are reporting exceptionally fine catches this trip. One boat had aboard, 800 halibut. The good catches are just about making up for the poor trips made earlier in the season.

The members of the public schools of the Central District gave an exceedingly fine and praiseworthy exhibition in Breed hall last evening. The entertainment was given under the direction of Major B. P. Learned and Costello Lippitt as committee on music and F. H. Butterfield instructor of music and conductor.

Thursday, July 2, 1874—Two silver pitchers at Bliss' store are to be again rowed for on Friday evening between five and six o'clock on the Thames river, from the steamboat dock. The prize must be won two years in succession and the Murphy brothers are out to clinch their title to it, having won the race last year. John Leahy and Thomas Comstock will row against them this year.

The great American comet is now visible to the naked eye. It is situated in the northern heavens and the tail is a source of admiration to star gazers.

On Tuesday night the freight at New London was switching the cars aboard of the ferry boat and three flat cars containing two carriages were shot overboard. The brakeman on the first car had a narrow escape but jumped to the framework at the end of the dock and held on as the cars shot past him. The carriages were smashed or ruined by the water and the flat cars badly damaged.

Friday, July 3, 1874—Employes of the Bacon Arms manufactory were treated to ice cream after work by Amos Cobb Lamb of the Main street saloon catering.

At the graduation exercises of the Free Academy held yesterday, George S. Palmer received high commendation for excellence in English composition.

Dividends totalling $135,500 have been declared by the six banks of New London.

The members of St. Mary's church have invited their friends to a picnic in Reath's grove on the Fourth of July. All the Catholic societies and the Sunday school will fall into line and headed by Tubb's band will march to the grove. An attractive programme has been arranged and the money raised will go towards the building fund of the elegant church now going up on Broadway.

Saturday, July 4, 1874—Hundreds were out yesterday to watch the boat races. The Murphy brothers got off slightly in the lead but Leahy and Comstock spurted and nearly passed them. The brothers again speeded up and gained two lengths, holding the lead throughout the race. The time was 16 minutes and 30 seconds.

The Fourth of July in town this year will probably be celebrated by the usual total absence of everything cheerful and appropriate. A $50 expenditure by city government for the old time delights of gunpowder patriotism is all that has been advanced this year. The bells will be rung in the morning and a salute fired.

Dupres & Benedict gave a fine minstrel performance last evening at Breed hall before a large audience. The season will close in Hartford, tonight.

Tubb's brass band is to give a concert this evening on Williams park, the usual treat for the evening of July 4th.

Preston is to celebrate the Fourth by trotting out her stringed band and firing a few cannon salutes.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

Helping Mother

Let us ponder a minute or two,
Where did we leave off, me and you?
Now I remember. We're puzzled no more,
The bunny boy's hopping down to the store.

The three-in-one-cent store in Rabbitville, you know, where all the Little People of the Shady Forest buy Needles and pins, worsted and silk, Prunes and potatoes, sugar and milk.

"Dear me," sighed Little Jack Rabbit, "I must not forget the clothespin for Mother. Monday is washday," and away he hopped faster than ever so as not to forget before he reached the neat little shop.

By and by, after a while, and a bump and a smile, and more than a mile, he came to the bridge that spanned the Bubbling Brook. But he didn't cross over. No, indeedy. If he had, he would have found himself in Bunnybridge, the pretty little town on the other bank just over the way. Instead he hopped down the path to the left until he came to a stop right in front of the Three-in-One-Cent Store.

"What did Mother wish me to get?" sighed the bunny boy in a whisper to himself,—not very loud, but loud enough for Bobbie Redvest to hear.

"A clothespin, answered that dear little bird.

"Oh, thank you," cried the bunny boy. "How did you guess it?"

"I didn't," answered Bobbie Redvest. "I heard Lady Love tell you as you hopped out of the little bungalow."

"I'll go right in the store and get that clothespin before I forget," replied the little rabbit. And in he hopped, quick as a wink, to see the lady pig dressed in pink.

"Only one clothespin?" she asked with a smile that dimpled her cheeks up nearly a mile.

"That's all," sighed the bunny boy. "Maybe Mother thought I couldn't remember more than one. Dear me, I have a dreadful poor memory. Wish I could get another," and he took the clothespin and hopped out. Then, away he went, clipperty clip, clipperty lip up the winding path by the Bubbling Brook through Clover Dell and Mossy Nook.

"Dear me, I hope the clothespin doesn't drop out of his pocket before he reaches the dear Old Bramble Patch. But it didn't, thank goodness.

"Here it is," he shouted, hopping out to the yard behind the little bungalow, where Lady Love was hanging up the clothes and reaching up high on her tippy toes.

"That's Mother's good little boy," she laughed, leaning down to kiss him. "You're just in time. I need one more pin for your pink pajamas."

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that, unless, of course, my typewriter gets the hopping cough.

SCOTLAND

In a letter received from Rev. Allen H. Gates, missionary on Kealakekua, Hawaiian Islands, he states that the volcano in Kilauea is causing much anxiety at present. This has been hurling white hot boulders, ashes and thick black smoke into the air periodically, a thing she has never been known to do in the history of the white man," he writes. "They have been having continual earthquakes on that side of the island with cracks opening up fifteen feet wide and 75 feet deep and one mile long. But the United States government has a man right on the job watching her antics and seeing that no one goes near her.

"But now it is worse than if she were showing her temper. To have a live volcano appear to be absolutely dead with no signs of fire is very, very ominous. The keepers are holding their breath. They just don't know what is going to happen next, whether the crater at the top of Mauna Loa is going to start activity again, or whether we are going to have a lava flow on our side of the island or what. You see we are sitting right on the lid of her cage. She is playing down in under us somewhere now and getting hotter and hotter and something's got to happen sometime."

The United States civil service commission will receive applications for examinations for hay and grain field helper for vacancies in the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. The entrance salary will be $900 a year.

RAIDS FOR LIQUOR BRING ARREST OF TWO BY PRESTON CONSTABLE

Raids on two places where it was suspected the liquor law was being violated in Preston brought two arrests Thursday night by Constable Michael Nolan, who was assisted by Officer Patrick Murphy of the Norwich police force.

The officers first visited the residence of Solomon Paster, a brick house at the top of a hill on the Norwich-Westerly road, where a party of about a dozen men was found, all showing the effects of drink, according to the officers. Investigation of the cellar showed a dozen barrels of cider, while round about the place were ten empty barrels. Paster was arrested and later gave bonds for appearance before a justice of the peace hearing.

The second place to which the officers went was the residence of Joseph Polinski in the village of Hallville. A woman who was in the house threw some stuff out of a window but the officers seized some bottles and a tub alleged to contain booch. Polinski was also arrested and he likewise gave $200 bail for appearance at a justice of the peace hearing.

LANTERN HILL POND HAD ANTE-VOLSTEAD TRAGEDY

The Bulletin's Mystic correspondent writes:

At Lantern Hill practically all the cottages and camps are occupied and each week end brings additional visitors. A number of local people have built cottages there which they occupy each season. Lantern hill has ever been a popular place for picnics, even in the days when the only method of conveyance was by horse and carriage if it were a select party of a very few or by the old time bus if it were a large company. The road was narrow and more or less stony (usually more) but in company with a party of congenial friends and a carefully prepared lunch in prospect at the end of the journey the beauties of nature which abound all along the way could be enjoyed with little thought of the jolting of the conveyance or the narrowness of the path. The favorite location for picnics was the spot just at the foot of the big Hill, adjacent to the pond said to be bottomless and into which the old squad is said to have jumped from the top of the Hill for a half pint of rum. It is a source of mystery whether or not the rum was made sure of before the jump. However that may be, it is evident that liquid refreshment of this sort came high in some places even before the Volstead Act was ever thought of. A climb to the top of the big Hill, from which vantage point land of several states is visible, was one of the features of these picnics as well as a trip to the silex mine.

Most of the cottages and camps are located about a mile this side of the big hill on what is known as Long Pond and the smaller pond or lake on the other side of the road, entrance from one lake to the other being made under a bridge across the road about midway of Long Pond.

Before the advent of the automobile Lantern Hill seemed quite inaccessible as a place of residence, but now all that is changed and each year sees an increasing number of people availing themselves of the rest and quiet and charm to be found in this beautiful spot.

Wild flowers abound in this section and when the laurel and rhododendron are in bloom it is enchanting to drive through the Lantern Hill road and see the place in all its beauty.

THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS REMEMBER THEIR DEAD

By request of White Cross Council, K. of C., the annual memorial high mass for departed members of that council was sung in St. Patrick's church Fourth of July morning at 8 o'clock, by the rector, Rev. Michael H. May. Grand Knight Francis T. Diggins and other officers of the council were in attendance, with relatives and acquaintances of the Knights memoralized. A good number of those in the congregation received holy communion from Father May, offering it for the repose of the souls of those being remembered.

The customary Gregorian music was directed by Organist Frank L. Farrell, the solos being sung by Mrs. Farrell, who gave Psalm CXXIX, "De profundis clamavi ad te, Domine," etc. (Out of the depths have I cried to Thee, O Lord). Following the final absolution, given by Father May, Mrs. Farrell sang as a waiting hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

LIGHT CITY COURT FOR FOURTH OF JULY

In the Fourth of July session of the city court, one man paid $8 for parking at the curb with his car headed the wrong way. Five men were each fined $5 and costs for intoxication, four of them having been arrested on the municipal dock Thursday night. One of these paid $14.50, and the other three went to jail to work out $15.75 each. The fifth man fined paid $14.50.

A Norwich Town young man whose idea of celebrating the Fourth of July was to get into the school house, where he was found and arrested by Constable Lucius Fenton and Deputy Sheriff Hoxie was fined $15 and costs on a breach of the peace charge. He paid $26.25.

The Norwich Town youth, Anthony Olaf, fell into the hands of the law because of some well laid plans by Constable Lucius Fenton to check the destruction of property that has long been a feature of the night before the Fourth. Between 11 o'clock and midnight several young men got into the school house on the green from which they were driven out by Constable Fenton. The flag pole rope was cut, a screen torn out of a window and other damage done. Attempts were also made to get into the Congregational church but without success. The group of fellows that were driven out of the school told the constable they would be back and would get in again in spite of him, so that he made plans to receive them when they came. He and Deputy Sheriff Hoxie secreted themselves in the school building and waited. Along about 2 o'clock Friday morning they heard a group returning three or four of which got into the school building. When the officers pounced out from their hiding place, they captured Olaf, but the others escaped.

MOUNTAIN AIR.

The guys who have climbed to the summit
Or up on the heights, anyhow,
Will often remark, 'Oh, dad guns it,
I doubt if I'm happier now
Than when I was down in the valley
Or sticking around with the bunch
With whcih I was formerly pally
When I spent two jitneys for lunch."

The guys who have made big successes
Will sigh for the "glorious days
When life had few worries and stresses
And humble and plain were my ways."
They turn their minds far from the present
And wander on Memory's track
To "Times that were frugal and pleasant,"
But how they would hate to go back!

The guys who are wealthy and famous
Will sob—as they brush off a tear—
"Although the great world may acclaim us,
It's frequently lonely up here."
They say that the white light is glaring
Which beats upon folks of renown,
That life on a pedestal's wearing
—But, gosh, how they hates to come down!

—Berton Braley, in Forbes Magazine.

CONSOLATION.

O tiny pinprick days! What are you scare
To one stabbed by infinity of stars?

And how may cramped pale towns imprison me
When deserts give wide brown immunity?

No little shadows blacken and appal
Thoughts that escape to forests dark and tall!

Or soar, forgetting puny cares of earth
Where rivers lie in snowy throes of birth.

Nor shall despair clutch at my saddest nights,
For I have walked with God upon the heights.

—Lilian White Spencer, in Outdoor America.

In parts of rural England there are still women who entertain a superstitious belief that they will improve their children's health by eating raisins and placing the stones on the baby's stomach.

According to figures prepared by a committee of experts chosen to study the subject, the power requirements of New England will increase 15 per cent in the next ten years. In 1922 the total mechanical energy used exclusive of that of steam locomotives was about 7,500,000,000 kilowatt hours. Of this about 3,200,000,000 kilowatt hours was generated by water power. The committee finds that New England will continue to be dependent upon coal for a large part of its power requirements for many years to come.

DEM. CANDIDATES PROPOSE RELEASE OF ALL DELEGATES

McAdoo Accepts Proposal of the Fifteen Other Presidential Aspirants With Proviso That Two-Thirds Unit Rule Be Abrogated—Further Stipulates That Low Man Be Dropped on Each Succeeding Ballot Until a Nomination is Made—McAdoo's Counter Proposal Follows Action Taken by Convention Leaders at Conference With View To Ending Deadlock.

New York, July 6.—William G. McAdoo tonight accepted the proposal of the 15 other presidential candidates that all release their delegates, but with the proviso that the unit rule and the two-thirds rule both be abrogated.

Mr McAdoo further stipulated that with the resumption of voting, the low man be dropped in each succeeding ballot until a nomination is made. He further stipulated that "each of the delegates present from each state shall be entitled to cast his pro rata vote of the delegates from such states as are absent from the convention."

Mr McAdoo's counter proposal, presented in the form of a letter addressed jointly to Chairman Hull of the democratic national committee and Senator Walsh of Montana chairman of the convention, was as follows:

"Gentlemen:

"The agreement just submitted to me signed by the various candidates before the convention, for releasing their delegates from any pledge, instruction or obligation of any nature whatsoever. Insofar as their candidacy for the democratic nomination for president is concerned, does not, in my opinion, offer a solution of the unfortunate deadlock in the convention. We must, therefore, adopt a practical plan which will end the deadlock, no matter what effect it may have on any individual candidacy.

"I therefore propose that, in addition to releasing all delegates as proposed in agreement submitted, the unit rule in this convention be abrogated; that the majority rule be substituted for the two-thirds rule in nominating a candidate for president and vice president; that each of the delegates present from each state shall be entitled to cast his pro rata of the vote of all the delegates from such states as may have delegates absent from the convention; that, after the next ballot and after each succeeding ballot of the candidates formerly placed before this convention, the one receiving the lowest number of votes shall be dropped from the list of candidates until a nomination is made.

"I submit herewith a form of the proposed agreement which I am willing to join in, the other candidates in signing.

"Respectfully yours,

(Signed) "W. G. M'ADOO."

Here follows the text of the agreement proposed by Mr. McAdoo):

"We, the undersigned, agree that the unit rule in this convention shall be abrogated and that only a majority vote shall be required to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

"The undersigned further agree that after the next ballot and after each succeeding ballot among the candidates formally placed before this convention the one receiving lowest number of votes shall be dropped until a nomination is made.

"The undersigned do further agree that each of the delegates present from each state shall be entitled to cast his pro rata vote of the delegates from such states as are absent from the nomination.

"The undersigned do hereby release each and every delegate from any pledge instruction or obligation of any nature whatsoever insofar as their candidacy for the democratic nomination for president is concerned, to completely as if their names had been withdrawn from this convention.

"This statement has been submitted to each candidate whose name has been placed in nomination and has been accepted by those whose names are subscribed hereto either in person or by duly authorized representatives."

Mr. McAdoo declared he would exert every possible effort "compatible with honor and the trust imposed upon me" to end the deadlock in the convention.

"It cannot be said," he continued, that McAdoo delegates have obstructed the work of the convention. They are here to serve democracy and righteousness, and we are willing to go the limit to expedite the work of the convention."

The former treasury secretary said that a number of people had come to him "almost with tears in their eyes" and begging him not to withdraw.

"I asked them why they urge me not to do that," he said. "If ever I make up my mind to withdraw from this race, you will be the first to know about it. You will know about it even before the newspapers do."

Referring to the two-thirds rule, Mr. McAdoo declared it was one of the peculiar rules prevailing at democratic conventions which create and encourage deadlocks.

"But the only way," he added, "is to fight this out regardless of inconvenience or expense."

CANDIDATES WILLING TO RELEASE DELEGATES

New York, July 6.—Fifteen of the sixteen candidates for the democratic presidential nomination tonight approved a statement declaring each willingly released all delegates committed to him "as completely as if his name had been withdrawn from the convention." The only signature missing was that of William G. McAdoo.

The fifteen approving the declaration, which was originally put forward at a meeting of representatives of minority candidates, includes Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, who with Mr. McAdoo, stands as a leader among the candidates before the convention.

The representatives of the fourteen minority candidates first affixed the signatures of their principals and then Gov. Smith personally placed his signature upon the document which had been drafted in the form of a resolution for presentation to the convention. It reads as follows:

"Resolved: That the time has arrived when in the opinion of this democratic convention all delegates should be and are hereby released from any pledges or instructions of any kind whatsoever, touching any candidacy for the nomination for president.

"Statement: The undersigned do hereby release all and every delegates from the pledge, instruction or obligation of any nature whatsoever, insofar as his candidacy for the democratic nomination for the presidency is concerned as completely as if his name had been withdrawn from the convention."

The original resolution presented to the conference of "minority" candidates was drafted by Howard Bruce, representing Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland. From it, the drafting committee created the resolution which was signed by the representatives of the candidates.

RECESS HALTS EFFORTS TO BREAK DEADLOCK

New York, July 6—Efforts of the representatives of the various contestants for the democratic presidential nomination to break the convention's deadlock were halted temporarily early tonight by a recess of three hours to allow the McAdoo managers time for a conference.

The McAdoo leaders asked for the three hours recess after the conferees had recessed previously for an hour, declaring they needed time to confer not only with their principal but with the delegates who have been supproting Mr. McAdoo.

When the recess was taken, Cordell Hull, chairman of the national committee and authorized spokesman for the conference, confined his statement practically to the fact that adjournment had been taken until ten p. m.

"The matters pending at the time of adjournment are privileged under the rules of the conference and I cannot disclose them," he said. "I hope to be able to do so after the 10 o'clock meeting."

The chairman said the committee today was "showing the same good temper and was earnestly considering suggestions relative to steps and policies "which might help in settling the problems of the convention."

"The conference has nothing to do with individual candidates or what they may do as to their candidacies" he added, "but is striving by means of these mutual conferences toward the reaching of a conclusion."

The Smith leaders in considering the proposal to release the delegates expressed the view after the recess was taken that it offered a fair opportunity to the convention to express its convictions and that as a result of the proposal a nomination would be brought nearer to realization.

Observers of the move made to obtain an agreement to release all delegates were of the general opinion that it put McAdoo at a disadvantage regardless of whatever way he stood on it. It was asserted that if McAdoo accepted, it would doubtless mean the loss of some delegates who have been voting for him, as even the most optimistic McAdoo supporter admits. Smith supporters openly boasted that their candidate could take at least 150 votes away from McAdoo if he released all. The McAdoo people denied that the number would be this large, and countered with the declaration that even though they lost some of their voting strength of last week they would gain new recruits from the favorite son states.

Opponents of McAdoo also declared that if he refused to go along with the minority proposal it would injure him with delegates who are on the fence, tired and broke, they are certain to take a refusal by McAdoo as a lack of good sportsmanship, his opposition declared, and vote against him.

The Smith followers were in high glee over the situation because they insisted that the governor's official release of delegates would not cause many votes to shift away from him.

REJECTED ALL MEASURES TO RELIEVE DEADLOCK

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 6—Writhing in its agony the democratic national convention yesterday rejected all measures to relieve its deadlock. Like an obdurate sick man, it brushed aside the remedies which volunteer physicians presented, and then jeered away a proposal that it quit New York and reconvene on July 21 in Kansas City.

Proposals in varied forms to drop off the low man on each succeeding ballot, it voted down on roll calls, and a further proposal which would have culminated in abrogating the unit rule and the two-thirds rule, it dismissed without a roll call and by a thundering viva voce vote which left no doubt of its decision.

As the balloting proceeded through the afternoon it became apparent that the chance of nomination or any compromise agreement among the leaders virtually had disappeared. There was a general expectation that the convention would adjourn over Sunday without a night session, and that the hope of an agreement would be pinned on conferences.

Then after plodding through another session of the monotonous call of the states without accomplishing any appreciable change in the deadlock between McAdoo and Smith or removing any of the remaining favorite sons, so that a show down could be had between the two leaders it adjourned its day session at 3.40 o'clock to reassemble at 11 a. m. Monday once more on a hope that something might be accomplished, but without any promise that it will not have to reconvene and roll up the already record breaking number of ballots.

On the seventy-seventh ballot the leaders stood as follows:

McAdoo 513; Smith 367; Davis 76.5.

This was a loss of 1 for Smith and a gain of 1 for Davis, with McAdoo unchanged.

A resolution proposing that the democratic national convention adjourn to reassemble July 21 in Kansas city was snowed under on a roll call. The totals on motion to adjourn to Kansas City: All votes cast 1,090. Necessary to carry 546. Aye 82.7; noes 1,007.5.

M'ADOO NOT TO WITHDRAW FROM RACE

New York, July 6.—William G. McAdoo told a crowd of cheering delegates of the democratic national convention tonight that he did not even contemplate withdrawing from the race for the presidential nomination.

"Do not for a minute think I will withdraw," he said. "I would feel like the most contemptible traitor alive if I deserted you at this time."

"No man with so fine and wonderful a body of supporters in this convention and in this country," he added, "could fail to expend every drop of blood in his veins to stand with them to the end.

"Let us continue to fight in this convention with the music of victory in our hearts and the love of God and of righteousness in our souls, then victory is inevitable."

M'ADOO PROPOSAL IS TURNED DOWN

New York, July 7.—The McAdoo proposal for breaking the deadlock in the democratic national convention was turned down early this morning by the representatives of the other 15 candidates.

R. I. SENATORS TO REMAIN OUTSIDE STATE

Rutland, Mass., July 6.—Reaffirmation of the stand taken by the "exiled" republican majority in Rhode Island state senate, with a declaration that they would continue to remain outside the state until they were recognized and permitted to vote according to regular parliamentary procedure, was made by "the republican senators' steering committee" in a statement issued here today. Twenty-one republican senators left the state senate following a lengthy filibuster recently, which was terminated when bromine gas was released in the chamber.

An attempt was being waged by the democratic minority to pass a bill providing for a constitutional convention. The measure was opposed by the republicans. In retaliation, democrats instituted the filibuster when the republicans attempted to transact routine business, including the passing of appropriation bills.

The statement issued today by Senators Arthur A. Sherman, Leon D. Andrews, James T. Caswell and Charles E. Salisbury, assailed Lieutenant Governor Toupin, charging him with failing to recognize republican motions and with ignoring efforts to reach a settlement of the situation.

PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO MURDER CHARGE

Newport, R. I., July 6.—Joseph Sousa, of Middletown, was arraigned before the district court here today, charged with the murder of Thomas Cahill on July 4.

Cahill died at a Newport hospital today. He had been shot twice, one bullet piercing a lung.

A group of young people entered Sousa's lunch room early on the holiday morning. An altercation arose over an order, soon developing into a general fight. Sousa fired twice, hitting Cahill, according to information given the police. He was later arrested, and Saturday morning was released on $10,000 bail, under a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon with the intent to commit murder. After Cahill's death, Sousa was re-arrested and arraigned before Judge Levy. He pleaded not guilty.

Pres. Coolidge's Son Has Operation

Boy's Life Depends on Strength of His Constitution to Check Ravages of Septic Poison.

Washington, July 6.—Battling bravely against the ravages of the septic poison which has swept through his slight body, Calvin Coolidge, Jr., son of the president, was admitted after a consultation of physicians at Walter Reed army hospital late today to have made no gain, and if anything to have slipped back.

Close friends of the family were advised that the boy could get no worse and that his life depended upon the strength of his constitution after the many days fight against the disease.

Another consultation of physicians has been called for tonight. The sole sign of encouragement has been a slight check in the high fever and the ability of the 16 years old youth to keep the poison away from his vital organs.

The patient recovered from the effects of anaesthetics administered last night when he submitted to an operation in an effort to check the disease but his general condition, at first somewhat better, then became slightly worse. Encouragement grew, however, when during the day he began to rest a little easier but late in the day a less optimistic view was taken.

President and Mrs. Coolidge arranged to remain at the bedside throughout the night. Frank W. Stearns, personal friend of the president, and E. T. Clark, personal secretary to the president also visited the hospital during the day as did many others in official life.

Tonight the only word from the White House was that President and Mrs. Coolidge were no more discouraged than they had been early in the day. The doctors had in no way given up hope of saving the 16 years old boy's life.

The operation performed last night was on the left leg below the knee. Strangely enough to the lay mind the infection—from a blister formed during a tennis match last Monday—began on the right foot. The efforts of the surgeons was pronounced as having accomplished all that could be expected, but the gravity of the situation was not alleviated. Even tonight the condition was considered critical.

President and Mrs. Coloidge spent the night at the bedside of their son Mrs. Coolidge accompanied him to the hospital, while the president followed soon thereafter. The president visited the White House for a short time early today but returned later to the hospital. Mrs. Coolidge except for a short period remained there throughout the day, and both were there again tonight.

The mother and father are taking the illness of their son much in the fashion that the average American parents would act under similar circumstances. President Coolidge has endeavored the past several days to carry on his work as far as possible, but ever with an eye on the sick room. Mrs. Coolidge has been at the bedside constantly.

A constant stream of messages of hope for young Calvin's recovery came today to the executive mansion. At the hospital numbers of friends called.

Every resource to modern, medical science has been used in an effort to reinforce the boy's young but frail constitution in the battle with septicaemia. The situation has left a slender but definite hope for his survival, although the grave nature of the malady has been indicated by the speed with which it has spread.

Specifically, his physicians with their laboratory instruments found what they had presumed from the start, that the infection was due to introduction of some minute spore of the pus-forming germ staphococcus into the insignificant wound. Multiplying there with deadly fertility the germ colonies swept the channels of blood circulation throughout his body.

The operation was performed when it was determined that the number of germs was sufficient to start a new focus, or center of propagation, on the opposite leg from the one to which they first gained entrance. This was evacuated in last night's operation, and the septic matter was drained away. In addition a fact of value in the treatment was disclosed. Septic infections are frequently due to the attack of more than one type of pus forming germ, but only the easily recognized staphylococci, appeared in the microscopic studies.

To some degree the treatment needed was simplified, it was said, although in no way was the danger lessened. Physicians were understood, now that their patient was in hospital surroundings to be able to take instant action to cleanse and drain any new local concentration of the infection.

The patient's youth has been counted on heavily by the doctors to bring him through, but his rapid growth recently has served to make him less robust than is usually the case with a 16 years old boy, and this condition has made the fight a harder one.

SEVEN THOUSAND ELKS AT BOSTON CONVENTION

Boston, July 6.—Seven thousand Elks had registered here tonight and many additional thousands of members and their friends, it was estimated, had reached the city for the sixtieth annual convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks which will be opened here tomorrow to continue until next Saturday. The convention, it is expected, will bring 100,000 Elks and their friends from all parts of the United States, to Boston.

Special services were held in Trinity church preliminary to the opening sessions of the convention which will get under way tomorrow night. Delegates and alternates participating in the convention will total 2200.

STATE POLICE MAKE BIG LIQUOR HAUL

Bridgeport, July 6.—A 40-foot boat and 349 cases of whiskey were seized today by Collector of Ports Harvey Bissell and state police, and James Feeney of Darien and Leslie Holmstead of Fairfield, were arrested, charged with smuggling. The liquor was found in the home of Harry Hoyt in Stamford, who gave information leading to the arrests of the other two men. The boat was taken into custody in the local harbor.

Revolution Breaks Out in Brazil

Rebels Gain Control of All Federal Buildings in Sao Paulo After Considerable Fighting.

Buenos Aires, July 6.—(By the A. P.)—A revolution broke out in Sao Paulo, Brazil, Friday, and the revolutionists took possession of the city.

The coup d'etat is reported to have begun about ten o'clock Friday night, it reached its climax at 8 o'clock Saturday morning and was completed by noon. The revolutionists gained control of all the federal buildings after considerable fighting. The federal government at Rio Janeiro is reported to have despatched war vessels to Santos, which is the port for Sao Paulo, together with troops to suppress the movement.

According to a special Rio Janeiro despatch to La Nacion the Brazilian congress enacted a government bill putting under a state of siege the states of Rio Janeiro and Sao Paulo for 60 days. This the government will extend if necessary.

Owing to the establishment of a censorship at Rio and the seizure of the telegraph offices by the revolutionists in Sao Paulo, few details are coming through as to conditions.

Cable communication with Sao Paulo was almost entirely severed this afternoon, but the cable companies were permitted to transmit commercial messages between Rio Janeiro and Santos. What news is available here has been received largely from private sources. One message from Santos today said that the sender was not permitted to communicate events going on at Sao Paulo.

A veiled private message from Rio Janeiro received by the Associated Press indicated an effort to communicate that occurrences had been taking place comparable in seriousness with the revolutionary outbreak in Rio Janeiro in 1922.

SOCIALISTS MAY ENDORSE LAFOLLETTE'S NOMINATION

Cleveland, July 6—(By the A. P.)—The attitude to be taken by the socialist party of America toward the presidential candidacy of the United States Senator Robert M. LaFollette and the relations of this party to the conference for progressive political action, came sharply to the front at the start here today of the party's national convention.

A committee, consisting of 15 of the leading socialists of the party was appointed and instructed to report by 9 o'clock tomorrow morning in order that the question could be made a special order of business and cleared away before the other activities of the convention are taken up. Upon the decision on this question will depend whether the socialists will have a national ticket of their own in the field for the November election.

The committee tonight decided a vote of 13 to 2 to recommend the convention that it endorse the candidacy of LaFollette. Close cooperation with the progressive conference in the national campaign was also recommended.

WILL LAUNCH NATIONAL NON-PARTISAN CAMPAIGN

Washington, July 6.—A national "non-partisan campaign" to induce the United States "to abandon its policy of isolation" and introduce one of cooperation in world affairs for the elimination of wars will be launched by the National Council for Prevention of War on July 26, it was announced today.

The campaign will be carried on concurrently with the political campaign through the summer and autumn. All nominees for president, vice president and senate will be asked to state their views on world cooperation for world peace. Setting out with a program of "progressive world organization, worldwide reduction of armaments and worldwide education for peace" the council will hold demonstrations in all states and 150,000 ministers of all denominations have been asked to devote the Sunday service of July 27 to "World Cooperation."

PREMIER HERRIOT DEFENDS HIS POLICY

Tryoes, France, July 6—(By the A. P.)—Premier Herriot today defended his policy of frankness and good will in dealing with the British prime minister, Ramsay MacDonald, at Chequers court, and questioned the wisdom of those among the French who thought that the British premier had taken advantage of the French premier's inexperience. He reassured the country as to the government's programme, declaring that his socialistic ideals must necessarily be erected on the solid foundation of a balanced budget.

"We republicans," he added, "need no lesson in patriotism."

The government's platform, continued the premier, will be based on the rehabilitation of French credit and efforts for European peace.

M. Herriot spoke before the national socialist organizations in Tryoes.

THIRD PARTY ENDORSES SENATOR LA FOLLETTE

Cleveland, O., July 6 (By the A. P.)—After endorsing Robert M. La Follette as a presidential candidate and providing for the reorganization of a new political party next January, the conference for progressive political action wound up its convention early last night.

The conference empowered its national committee to select a vice presidential candidate after conference with the "La Follette for president committee."

La Follette was endorsed as a candidate on his own platform. The convention then adopted for itself a platform embodying the ideas contained in the Wisconsin document and in the statement of principles issued at the St. Louis session of the conference last February.

Two other men and a woman, all of whom were injured by the explosion, were reported as recovering, although Ernest Gagnon, aged 20, received internal injuries, is still in a serious condition.

Washington, July 6—A total net income of $21,336,212,530—an amount equivalent to the gross debt of the nation, was reported subject to federal taxes by citizens of the United States for the calendar year 1922, it was disclosed in statistics of incomes for that year made public tonight by the treasury.

On this income, the federal government received $861,057,308 from the 6,787,431 persons who admitted tax liability. This shows an increase over 1921, of $141,670,202, or 19.69 per cent. in tax paid, of 125,305 in the number of returns filed, and of $1,759,000,000 in total income subject to taxation.

The average net income per return for 1922 was $3,143.46 per taxpayer while each theoretically paid $126.86 toward the upkeep of the government and their taxes were at the rate of 4.04 per cent. of their net incomes.

Based on the 1920 census, 6.2 per cent. of the total population paid taxes and by the basis of calculation, each American citizen, whether man, woman or child, had a net income for 1922 of $194.72, just ten dollars higher than in 1921. The per capita tax by the federal government amounted to $7.86, almost one dollar more than in the previous year in which, however, a different schedule of tax levies was in effect.

The year 1922 produced returns for 67 net incomes of one million dollars and over, the highest for this class since 1918 when a similar number was reported. There were 21 such incomes reported in 1921. In the class between five hundred thousand and one million dollar incomes, there were 161 returns, as compared with sixty three for 1921. There were fewer returns showing net income between four hundred thousand and five hundred thousand dollars than between half a million and one million dollars. One hundred and four returns in that class were reported, or forty more than in the preceding year.

There were twelve thousand persons reporting net incomes between fifty and one hundred thousand dollars, a gain of four thousand over 1921, 2,171 with incomes between one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and 762 with incomes between one hundred and fifty and two hundred thousand dollars.

In the lower brackets, the statistics show that 2,471,181 persons paid taxes on net incomes between one thousand and two thousand dollars, and 2,129.89 filed returns of incomes between two and three thousand dollars. There were 785,267 returns in the class from three to four thousand dollars, 404,848 between four and five thousand dollars, 391,373 between five and ten thousand dollars and 90,278 between ten and fifteen thousand dollars.

In the classes between one and ten thousand dollars, the number filing tax returns was substantially the same as for previous years. In each case however, the number was slightly larger in 1922 than in 1921, from this the conclusion was drawn that the income of some five millions of tax payers remained relatively constant, the change in the average number over a period of four years being less than six per cent.

New York with a net income reported of $4,110,558,989 and a total tax of $373,960,079 ranked all states in contributing to expenses of the federal government. That state, in 1922, paid 43.52 per cent. of the total.

Next in order were Pennsylvania with net income of $2,005,576,020 and tax of $93,573,559; Illinois with taxes of $77,196,407 on a net income of $1,827,637,451.

NEW HAVEN COUNTY'S SHERIFF IS DEAD

New Haven, July 6.—County Sheriff Thomas L. Reilly died at his home here at 2.45 o'clock this afternoon.

Thomas L. Reilly, sheriff of New Haven county, a newspaperman by choice, an officer of the law through his liking for politics, and a follower of the best in sports through a busy life, was a son of Connecticut. He was born in New Britain on September 20, 1858 but had lived most of his years in Meriden. He was the son of John and Catherine (Fagan) Reilly, was graduated from the state normal school in New Britain in 1876 and went into newspaper work there. Later he went to Meriden and was connected at various times with the Meriden Press-Recorder, the Meriden Republican, the Hartford Sunday Globe, all of which have disappeared in the evolution of newspapers in that city, and for a time, with the New Haven Register. In 1876, with Francis Atwater, F. E. Sands, and the late Lew Allen he organized the Meriden Journal and the years he spent on that newspaper were those in which he made his remarkable circle of friends. In those years, also he went into democratic party politics until he became one of the most popular leaders with a political acquaintance which was of great breadth. To every one in politics and sports he was "Tom" Reilly. He was a baseball fan and intimately connected with the old Connecticut League and later with its successors. He knew basheball as well as he did politics.

Sheriff Reilly was mayor of Meriden for three terms, 1906 to 1911 and a member of the board of education six years.

He retired from the Journal in 1910 when he went to congress, having been elected from the old second district and serving two terms, until 1915. He was elected high sheriff in 1918 and re-elected in 1922 and his term would have expired at the end of 1926.

Mr. Reilly was married January 1, 1884 to Maria E. Rowen, at Blackstone, Mass. Seven children were born to the union, and all are living. Mrs. Reilly died November 30, 1906, and Mr. Reilly remarried Mary E. S. Downs, in February, 1909.

FOUND MAN'S BODY IN CLUMP OF BUSHES

New Haven, July 6—The body of Mike Pulats, 51 years old, a farm hand employed by Philip Yarousk in Orange, was found today in a clump of thick bushes near the entrance to a field on the Orange-Milford road some distance from Orange's Center. The body was bruised and lacerated, Medical Examiner Scurborough is not of the opinion that the man died as the result of foul play but believes that he was struck by a passing automobile and hurled into the bushes. It was pointed out that the man had no money in his pockets when he left the farm where he is employed. Pulats left the farm on the morning of July 4 and had not been seen since.

POULTRYMEN TO FORM MARKET ASSOCIATION

Hartford, July 6.—To better meet competition from the west in the Connecticut market and to stabilize the market, leading poultrymen of the state have laid plans for the formation of a cooperative marketing association to be known as the Connecticut Poultry Producers, Inc.

The proposed organization is to include producers in every county except Windham and New London which are represented in a similar organization known as the Eastern Connecticut Poultry Producers, Inc. The plans of the state organization committee contemplate the enrollment of poultrymen owning at least 100,000 birds for the projected association's marketing agreement by August 15. It is said that there are 1,000 producers, owning an aggregate of 300,000 birds, who might enroll.

With the formation of the organization, which it is said is practically certain to be effected, candling stations will be established where the eggs sent by producers will be tested, graded and packed in uniform cartons.

Main offices will be opened either in New Haven or Hartford, depending on which county is represented by the most birds, with a general manager who will direct the operation of the cooperative selling machinery.

FIND BODIES OF FIVE BOYS ON BURNED HULK

Baltimore, July 6.—The bodies of five boys, members of the Baltimore Evening Sun's newsboy band, and that of a negro, were found on the hulk of the bay steamer Three Rivers today when the remains of the vessel which was burned to the water line in Chesapeake bay early Saturday morning, were towed into Baltimore.

This brings the total number of victims of the fire up to ten and accounts for all those known to be missing.

The boys were Nelson A. Miles, 17; Lester Seligman, 15; Ashby Pilker; Vernon Jefferson, 15; and Walter Millikin, 13.

The body of a white man, believed to be James Truitt, of Baltimore, was found floating in the bay off Cove Point late yesterday, and shortly before the body of a negro, around which was strapped a life preserver of the Three Rivers, was washed ashore on Hooper's Island.

The bodies of two others negroes had been found shortly after the disaster.

WILLIMANTIC

Bertha Young, alias Julia Ogden, a character well known in local police circles was arrested on charges of resistation of selling liquor and keeping a disorderly house and five local young men were apprehended on charges of frequenting a disorderly house, when the old "Nigger Williams Place," just over the Scotland town line, on the back road district leading from Windham Center was raided about 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The raiding crew was led by County Investigator William E. Jackson and included Federal Prohibition Enforcement Officers William R. Congdon and Stanton L. Briggs and Deputy Sheriff George Hoxie of Lebanon. The frequenters were Philip Dion, Charles Dorman, Joseph LaFrance, John Morate and William H. Robreio. The proprietress and the five men will be presented before Justice of the Peace A. H. Gallup of the Scotland town court this (Monday) afternoon at 1 o'clock. Prosecutor Clark will act for the state. The house had been under observation by the officers for some time and the week of the Fourth was taken as an opportunity to conduct the successful raid.

Alfred Chalifoux, chauffeur for Dr. G. E. Wilcox of this city sustained a broken nose, cuts on the head, lacerations about the face and shoulders and a slight concussion of the brain, when he ran a Buick coupe into a telegraph pole on the North Windham Road, 150 feet south of the Phelp's overhead crossing Friday evening, shortly before nine o'clock. His companions, Ovila Chalifoux and John Lussier were also injured but only to the extent of head and body bruises and cuts. The coupe was owned by Dr. Wilcoxx and while the latter was attending to office calls the chauffeur took his brother and Lussier for a ride. He was returning to this city when the accident happened at the curve and according to those who had seen the machine on the highway said it was being driven at a fast rate of speed. The machine was a mass of twisted steel and splintered wood and shattered glass, after the collision. The force of the impact threw the car completely around and twelve lines of telephone and telegraph wires on the cross arms of the pole were loosened from the glass insulators and hung down. Those who viewed the wrecked machine marveled at the apparent miracle which spared the lives of the three occupants. The machine was hauled to Leonard Brothers' garage; the collision was investigated by Motorcycle Officer Bombria.

Dynamic liquor said to have been taken in large quantities was responsible for the arrest of Fred Lizwick, of 49 Ives street late Saturday night, by Motorcycle Officer Bombria, after the man had thrown his mother-in-law and sister-in-law downstairs from the bedrooms, causing severe injury to both, and had punched his wife in the mouth and eye. Lizwick is a powerful man, standing over six feet in his stocking feet. He had been working out of town and he came home Saturday night in a celebrative mood. A few more drinks and he was a frenzied maniac. He went up to the bedrooms and picked his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Marceux out of her bed and threw her down the stairs. She sustained two broken ribs and a punctured lung. He then repeated the stunt with his sister-in-law, Miss Delia Marceux, dislocating one shoulder and causing possible internal injuries. He completed his fiendish work by punching his wife, Ida Lizwick. Dr. Samuel J. Turcotte was summoned and he found the first two women in intense pain. Lizwick was being held Sunday by the police in lieu of heavy bonds to await possible developments for the worst in the condition of the women. The charges preferred against him were of intoxication, breach of the peace and assault. His case will be taken up in police court this (Monday) morning.

The third and most serious automobile accident to take place at the railroad underpass at Andover, Sunday forenoon, resulted in Arvid R. Nelson of New York City sustaining painful lacerations and in the wrecking of two machines. A Buick six sport roadster driven by Walter H. Campbell of 2290 University Avenue, N. Y., and in which Nelson rode was headed toward Hartford from this city and collided head-on with a Nash sedan driven by James Fatta of 433 Knickerbocker avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., at the underpass. Nelson was partly thrown through the windshield and was severely cut about the head and arms by the broken glass. First aid treatment was given him at the home of Julia Perkins nearby and later in the day he and Campbell boarded a train from this city to New York. The Buick was badly damaged and was hauled to the Jordan Buick garage here. The Nash was placed in a garage at Hop River for repairs. Deputy Sheriff Allyn L. Frink, of Andover, investigated the accident and as the parties could not come to terms as to fixing the blame, both waived the right of legality to trial on Sunday and were taken Before Justice of the Peace Faulkner of the town court. Campbell pleaded guilty to reckless driving and was fined $25 and costs of $14.85 which he paid. He then turned his car over as security for settlement of the damages to the Nash. Campbell admitted that he was wrong when he drove his machine to the left of the road at the sharp turn in attempting to avoid a collision with the Fatta car. James Fatta, two other men and three women all escaped without injury. They were on their way from Brooklyn, N. Y., to Connecticut Agricultural College at Storrs, when the accident happened.

Disputes, arising from the crowding off the road of a Ford car owned and driven by Frances Boucher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Delphis Boucher of this city, by a Studebaker driven by Philip Chorna of New York, Sunday morning, will be settled in police court this (Monday) morning. Boucher complained that he was left only two feet of the road near Park Spring on upper Jackson street when he met the Studebaker. The New York man claims that Boucher's companion, Lawrence Sorreron of Holyoke, Mass., attacked him during an argument which followed the meeting of the cars.

Miss Mary Rourke of this city was knocked down on Windham Road near the Willimantic Camp Ground entrance about 8.30 o'clock, Saturday night, by a Hupmobile touring car owned and driven by Albert Kelley of 27 Temple street, Willimantic. Miss Rourke was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital where it was found that she suffered more from fright than actual injuries. Kelley reported the matter to the police and said that the bright lights from an oncoming machine blinded him and he could not see the woman who was walking well toward the center of the road.

Deputy Sheriff Allison L. Frink, of Andover, might well consider the advisability of establishing himself in a camp on the roadside near the Andover railroad underpass. With a summer average of nearly one accident a day the number of Sunday collisions at the underpass is increasing to an alarming extent. Before the noon hour had tolled Sunday a bushel basket full of broken glass and small automobile parts littered the road, as evidence of three collisions since daybreak.

Louis Lachappelle, 43, was instantly killed early Saturday morning when he fell headlong down a flight of stairs at his home, 1061 Main street and fractured his neck. Lachapelle was last seen alive by a member of the local police department about eleven o'clock at night, when he was intoxicated and was warned that he had better go home. Members of the family discovered the body in the morning. The deceased was born in Manchester, June 2, 1881, a son of Moses and Elizabeth (Desmarais) Lachapelle. He leaves his wife; seven children, Rosanna, Lillian, Charles, Leo, Micthell and Louis; two brothers, Paul and Joseph of this city and three sisters, Mrs. May Gladue, Mrs. Pierre Pelltier of this city and Mrs. Rose Bessette of Troy, N. Y.

She wore white voile and carried pink roses. Joseph H. Bullock, Jr., of Willimantic was best man. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. G. Johnson of South Coventry, the double ring service being used. The bridal party entered the room down an aisle formed of the floral decorations as the bridal chorus from "Lohengren" was played by Mrs. Warren I. Hoff, of Willimantic, at the piano. The rooms were adorned with birches, daisies, white roses and yellow and white decorations, an arch being formed of birches and white bells. The bride received many beautiful gifts. Her going away gown was of Elizabeth powder blue crepe. The groom is assistant overseer of the warehouse and shipping department of the American Thread Company.

In police court Saturday morning Arthur Boutin, driver of the car which collided with that owned by Rural Mail Carrier Arthur P. Ellsworth, on Hoxie Hill near South Windham, early Friday morning, was held on a charge of reckless driving. His attorney, Harry S. Gaucher, entered a demurrer to the complaint which was overruled by Deputy Judge Curtis Dean, who found Boutin guilty and imposed a fine of $25 and costs, making a total of $32.15. Boutin took an appeal to the superior court and bonds were fixed at $500.

A fine of $5 and costs on a charge of breach of the peace, amounting to $12.15 was imposed on Andrew Silva of the Yellow Row, by Deputy Judge Curtis Dean in the police court Saturday morning. Mrs. Katie Bednord, a neighbor was the complainant in the case. Lieutenant McLean made the arrest.

Michael Cozak of 15 Main street who already has a case for violating the liquor law pending in the superior court, having taken an appeal from the local court a few months ago, was again presented on the same charge in court Saturday morning. The man was charged with making a sale on July 2. He pleaded not guilty and was released under bonds of $500 for his appearance in court this (Monday) morning when the witnesses for the state will be present. Cozak's place is the one raided on Independence Day by Chief MacArthur, Captain Grady, Lieutenant McLean of the police department and County Investigator William E. Jackson.

While playing with matches on the veranda of his home, William, seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Grady of 28 Adelbert St., set fire to his clothing and was burned about the chest, abdomen and arms. Mrs. Haskel Rosen, a neighbor pulled the burning clothing off the child's body.

A former popular and able school superintendent of Willimantic, Frank H. Beebe, had part at New Haven in a remarkable display of devotion for Sister Celestine Hall, retiring principal, which marked the graduating exercises of the class of 1924 of the Hamilton Street School, New Haven, last week. Sister Celestine resigns this year after serving as head of the school for 57 years. Superintendent Beebe extolled her 57 years of educational endeavor in the school and it was with deepest feeling that Mr. Beebe announced that the children had petitioned the privilege of commemorating Sister Celestine's service and that the idea of a gold scholarship medal to be awarded every year to the pupil of highest standing, reflected their loving appreciation and would perpetuate the memory of a noble woman and their excellent principal.

Other honors to be bestowed upon Sister Celestine are in the making. A bronze tablet is to be erected in the school with an inscription in which her efforts and service will be recorded. This is a gift from the superintendent, assistant superintendents, supervisors and principals of New Haven. The teachers of New Haven also sent a cards to Sister Celestine. A diploma, shower of congratulatory letters and from the board of education was also awarded to her.

He claims that although the parties are holding out well in the tug-of-war the delegates are looking forward to a definite break early this week.

Albert Krug of New York City, a summer guest at Village Hill, was painfully burned on his left hand Friday while firing off a blank cartridge revolver.

JEWETT CITY

The children's afternoon at Chautauqua Saturday was greatly enjoyed by both children and grown-ups. It is remarkable the amount of work accomplished with the children in a few hours, for three or four days, by the two superintendents, Misses Kelly and Sullivan. The junior town officers conducted a business session presided over by the mayor, Alston Eagan. Mother Goose songs were dramatized by Mildred Gilbert, Marguerite Shea, Catherine Jodoin, Eunice Webster, Helen Glowacki, Catherine Stafford and Helen Kalko. English, Danish and French folk dances which date back to 1805 were executed by the girls. The Danish dance was done by Janet Mathewson, Lois Gill, Annie Anthony, Grace Jeffers, Barbara Whitford and Irene Jackiewicz. The French dance was by Margaret Mort, Helen Dawley, Olga Zegeer, Margery Webster, Janet Wilcox, Gloriana Gill, Margery Stafford, Lucille McCluggage, Adeline Jackiewicz and Stella Glowacki. The English dance was given by Myrtle Stetson, Sara Gill, Pricilla Sullivan and Claire Shea. The children made their own customs of crepe paper and then kept them as souvenirs of a happy week during their vacation. The superintendents were assisted by Lillian Barber, Ellen Prior, Christine Burdick, Ruby Gray and Grace Gardiner.

The boys did several kinds of stunts under the direction of R. Thompson of Mulligan college. They had a leap frog relay, elephant walk, wheelbarrow parade, anvil and hammer chorus and through the tunel. The slow motion ball game was especially good, when one boy made a home run, when the ball was lost. The boys were Faure Rainville, Donald Buckingham, Russel Carpenter, Lowell Shorey, Fred Kusek, John Orapello, William Cadieux, Alston Eagan, Rollin Tripp, Arthur Gray, Witaldo Bakanowsky, Lawrence Peterson, Michael Solenski, Joseph Perry, Dora Barry, John Dumbrowsky, Edmund and Frank Arasin, Lewis Skoczylas and William Darnley.

Both afternoon and evening Andrew Vissochi delighted the audiences with a varied selection of accordion numbers. He was a master of his concert accordion. It was made for his use and has 166 keys. He played grand numbers besides southern melodies opera, patriotic, sacred and popular and folk songh.

In the evening Dr. Frederick Poole gave a vivdly described and illustrated lecture of the campaign of General Allenby and Colonel Lawrence in Palestine and in Arabia respectively. Sunday evening he gave a talk on China, also illustrated and exhibited curios. This closed the best Chautauqua ever held in Jewett City, every session being a treat, and everyone different in characteristics. Over half the number of guarantors for another year, the list being headed by Rev. J. J. McCabe, has already been secured.

Important meeting of K. of C. tonight 8 (d. s. t.)—adv.

E. H. Miscox with a party of postal men, was over to Hazelhurst field on July 3d to see the transcontinental mail start on its long fly to the Pacific coast.

Postmaster William T. Crumb has received the schedule showing what it is possible to do as applied to a letter from Jewett City. If a letter marked Air Mail, bearing 24 cents postage were mailed here so as to leave at 8.21 p. m. on train 771 it would connect at New London with train 171, the Federal express, for New York. The letter would find its way into one of the Air mail pouches made up by the Grand Central branch of the New York post office, and leave Hazelhurst field at 10 a. m. and in 24 hours and 45 minutes would be in San Francisco ready for delivery. Dr. G. H. Jennings has received a letter from his daughter Mary, from California, via Air Mail.

In the good old Main street days in Jewett City, there used to be a regular established trade in charcoal. In the fall, every week, one or two of the big, high-sided carts would come in from down below Voluntown, where a dozen or more fo the great charcoal-burning pits were in operation. One of the men who came here was named Treat, his wife would come along, and on such occasions would lend a hand in carrying the big bushel baskets, often down rickety stairs into the bins in the cellar. Mr. Treat often explained that now and then there were short spells when he was boss, but there never was any certainty about it.

The old man was over the other day, and declares that all one has to do now to determine who is boss is to see whether or not the female of the species has her hair bobbed.

Fungral services for Mrs. John E. Murtha were held at St. Mary's church, Jewett City, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock with a requiem mass, Rev. James J. Taylor being celebrant.

They made their home at Jewett City, later moving to Hallville where her husband was employed at the power plant. She left to work at Dr. Wadsworth's private sanatorium, at South Norwalk. From there she went to New York. She was hurt in an accident Thursday, June 26th, receiving injuries from which she died Tuesday morning at 3 o'clock. NEW LONDON WOMAN'S HUSBAND MAY HAVE THROWN HER FROM CAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, July 8.—The condition of Julia Kliemah Glidden, 19, wife of Richard Glidden, Groton carpenter, who was found unconscious on Montauk avenue, between Thames street and Gardner avenue, late Friday night and suffering from injuries believed to have been sustained by the young woman either having been thrown or having fallen from an automobile, is reported today at Lawrence hospital as somewhat improved. The woman, who was unconscious when admitted to the hospital, was believed to have sustained concussion of the brain, but Saturday morning the patient regained consciousness although her mind has not cleared to such an extent that she can talk intelligently for more than a very brief time.

In an endeavor by the police to determine in just what manner Mrs. Glidden sustained her injuries, the husband was arrested Saturday morning in this city, charged technically with violation of the automobile law in using improper markers. Glidden is held for a hearing in the police court Monday morning and is at liberty on bonds of $100. Glidden was interrogated the entire day in an endeavor to determine whether he was in any way responsible for his wife being found unconscious in the highway. He told the police conflicting stories and it is believed that he knows more of the incidents that led up to the woman being found in the highway. The husband first declared that he went to Dancehand, Ocean Beach, and found his wife dancing with a sailor. After a few minutes Mrs. Glidden joined her husband outside the dance hall and they started in Glidden's machine for Groton. At the corner of Neptune and Ocean avenues, Glidden declares he and his wife quarrelled because the husband upbraided the wife for consorting with sailors. Mrs. Glidden became angered and alighted from the machine, telling her husband to "go to hell," and that she "would get someone else to bring me home." Glidden declared that he then drove home and did not have further knowledge of the movements of his wife. Later Glidden asserted that he quarrelled with his wife on Ocean avenue and that the girl jumped from the machine. His description of the location is close to where the unconscious girl was found. Mrs. Glidden, it is understood, has been injured before as the result of automobile rides and it is claimed that she has on two or three occasions leaped from moving cars, one time being in Norwich, at which time she sustained numerable bruises and scratches.

Mrs. Ralph Fiotaro and infant son of Connecticut avenue, Mrs. Frederick Schmidt, Waterford, Howard Chesebro, of the U. S. army transport General Nathan Greene and Arvand Johnsen, of the U. S. S. Fequet, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Mrs. Daisy Brown Monroe, 50, widow of John Monroe, who died Thursday night at the residence of her son-in-law, Lester C. Fowler, 12 Fowler court, was a native of Wallingford. She had been ill a long time.

Two more prisoners, who were convicted at the criminal session of the superior court recently concluded in New London, were taken to Wethersfield Saturday by Sheriff Sidney A. Brown and started serving their indeterminate sentences. One was Eugene J. Adams, New Haven, sentenced to not less than three nor more than five years for highway robbery. Adams waylaid Earl Burns, a sailor stationed at the United States Coast Guard academy on the Fort Neck bridge of the New Haven railroad, several weeks ago. Burns being attacked with an iron pipe and badly beaten. Adams did not obtain any plunder from Burns' person and after the attack pretended that he desired to assist Burns and accompanied the sailor to the coast guard reservation. Adams was later arrested a short distance from where the holdup occurred. The other prisoner was Lawrence W. Eastman, of New London, sentenced to not less than one, nor more than three years for forgery. Eastman was employed by the Structure Oil Co., a Delaware corporation with offices in this city. He forged several checks of the aggregate amount of $700. Eastman was arrested in New York and brought back to this city for trial.

Jessie Duthrie, moulder, in the employ of the Whiton Machine company, is a much arrested man, for within 12 or 15 hours, he has been taken into custody three times. He was released on bail for his first two apprehensions, but he is now held a prisoner at the police station awaiting the convening of the police court Monday morning.

Duthrie and his wife have been estranged some time and Saturday afternoon following Mrs. Duthrie's complaint that her husband failed to support her, Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin issued a warrant for Duthrie's arrest. Duthrie could not be located, but last night, following his having heard that the police had been seeking him, Duthrie went to the police station to ascertain what was wanted of him. There the warrant was served upon him, but he obtained his release upon furnishing a surety on his bond of $50 for court appearance in Joseph Silva Jr. While walking along Bank street a short time after leaving the station house Duthrie encountered his father-in-law, William McClure, 126 Shaw street. Duthrie is alleged to have abused McClure, then attacking him. McClure being struck several blows about the face and head and marked up. Duthrie was again arrested and Silva again became his bondsman. This noon Duthrie went to the residence of his father-in-law and forced his way in and refused to leave. Another complaint was lodged against Duthrie and he was arrested the third time by Motorcycle Officer William Babcock, on complaint of both his father-in-law and Mrs. Duthrie.

John Hamlin, a tailor, made his first appearance in the police court Saturday. He said he is a Finlander and that he was celebrating the Fourth of July and drank a little too much. As he was found helpless on North Bank street it was assumed by the court that he drank a great deal too much. Still he is a reputable man, a good worker and the father of several children. Taking his commendable qualities into consideration judgment was suspended and he was sent to his work.

Anna Kennedy Erickson had a "hang-over" from the Fourth, when she was haled to court to answer a charge of keeping a disorderly house. Though she obtained a bond for appearance Monday she was too intoxicated to be allowed at liberty. She was fined for her indiscretion and paid something more than $18 into the court treasury. Anna didn't have the cash, but she sent out and obtained it.

Fortunata Rengona was to have been prosecuted for reckless operation of an automobile, but the complainant against him is a lieutenant in the navy and was compelled to leave port on the ship to which he is attached so could not be in court. The case was continued until such time as the officer shall be able to appear.

Three cases were nolled. Robert Arundell, charged with the theft of clothing from a chief petty officer at the submarine base, escaped punishment because the stolen clothing had been recovered and the fellow who lost the apparel did not wish to impose more hardship on Arundell. The case was dropped for that reason. Crist Xingas, a fruit dealer, when he was brought into court a few days ago for failing to comply with a city ordinance regarding the location of fruit stands on the sidewalk, declared that he had sought the privilege he wanted and had been told the he could do as he desired to, though he did not receive the license in writing. That case was also nolled. A boy accused of theft and who is in the custody of the probation officer, is doing so well since arrested that his case was disposed of by nolle. James Reagan of West Coit street was charged with parking in the section restricted to the parking of public service cars. Heretofore the police have not enforced an ordinance governing the matter and private cars have been parked there. Now the police have discovered that it is expected they will make operators of cars conform to the ordinance as Reagan was brought to court. His case was nolled.

Shrewd and conservative business men see in the land formerly the estate of James D. Lynch on Ocean avenue sites for some of the best located residences in the city. L. An automobile owned and operated by Leonard T. Danner, 27 West Coit street and a machine, owned and driven by Harry Labinger, 47 Park street, Hartford, were in collision this evening, corner of Jefferson avenue and West Coit street. A pedestrian, in passing along Blackhall street, shortly after 2 o'clock this morning, observed a small chicken coop ablaze on West Coit street and rung in an alarm from Box 343, corner of Connecticut avenue and Prest street, a considerable distance from the incipient blaze. The blaze was quickly extinguished with a small amount of chemicals.

An automobile bearing Connecticut registration 83790, collided with a wagon driven by Leonard Gardner, 435 Jefferson avenue, on that thoroughfare this evening, causing Gardner to be thrown from the seat to the rear of the wagon. Gardner's back and body was considerably bruised and he reported the collision at the police station. The identity of the driver of the automobile was not ascertained.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BROADWAY THEATRE

If there ever was anything different in motion pictures, it's Icebound, the William de Mille production for Paramount which opened at the Broadway theatre last night for a four days run. If we hadn't seen the Owen Davis stage play, we might have expected to find just another picture of the frozen north, Canadian Royal Mounted and all that sort of thing. Icebound is a story about plain country people, presented in a far more interesting fashion than the legitimate play and in which many of the scenes and characters, merely referred to in the stage success, become realities.

Lois Wilson and Richard Dix are the featured players. Vera Reynolds, Ethel Wales, Edna May Oliver, Alice Chapin and others play in support.

It's all a good picture should be.

The events take place in New England, and the settings are authentic.

It's a Paramount.

Jack Dempsey in the Fight and Win pictures was nothing short of a sensation at this theatre yesterday. See the world's greatest fighter in the world's greatest picture event! Millions have cheered him—millions have wanted to see him!

AT THE BREED.

A melodramatic photoplay of first rate quality is Goldwyn's picturization of Owen Davis' popular old melodrama, Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model, which had its first screening in Norwich at the Breed theatre, last night.

The action is rapid and melodramatically thrilling throughout. It rushes from one climax to another with the speed of an express train. It cannot fail to hold the interest of anyone who cares for really human characters in a series of big dramatic situations. The spirit of the Davis melodrama has been maintained throughout and the story itself followed with a good deal of faithfulness. H. A. Van Loan, one of the best scenarists, made the adaption which was put into continuity form by Carney Wilson.

The production was directed by Emmet Flynn, whose previous high achievements in The Palace of the King, Monte Cristo, and The Connecticut Yankee, place him among the greatest American directors.

The scene in which Nellie is bound to the tracks of the elevated railway in New York was photographed on a spur of the New York elevated system and is most realistic, as well as abounding in thrills that make the shivers run continously up and down one's spine. The fire scene in the modiste shop is another thrilling spectacular sequence as is that of the fight between Walter Perry the villain, and Jack Carroll, Nellie's sweetheart, in the underground rendeavous of New York's criminal element.

Palace Review

For a story of exquisite charm told against an enchantingly beautiful background, the screen has seldom equalled, never surpassed, the preferred picture, Maytime, which was presented for the first time last night at the Palace theatre and a stay of four days until Wednesday.

Adapted from Rida Johnson Young's play that has been a conspicuous success on the stage from half a dozen consecutive seasons, this Cosmier production tells a love story at once plaintive and dramatic. It carries the spectator back to the days of old New York when Columbus Circle was farm lands and Washington Square was the neighborhood of an old and substantial aristocracy. We see the homestead presided over by Colonel Van Zandt, a gentleman rich and of respected lineage, who feels that disgrace has fallen upon his house when he discovers his daughter Ottilie in love with Dick Wayne, the young gardener on the place, while he has already made his choice for her in the person of Claude, her wealthy but dissolute cousin.

Added attractions, Stan Laurel in his latest and best two reel comedy Postage Due, Pathe News and Palace supreme orchestra.

Starting Thursday, Special week end double feature program. Poisoned Paradise the forbidden story of Monte Carlo; the most exciting city in the world, made from the novel that is banned by continental police because it tells too much and The Tie That Binds an amazing mystery drama that will surprise and delight you. Excitement, mystery, suspense and thrills all will be in store for you the last half of this week. Be sure to see this extraordinary bill. No advance in prices.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Danielson's new parking rules are in effect. They were introduced Saturday morning. Shortly thereafter, as mornings go, one car tried to park astride another car at the corner of Main and Academy streets, but that's a story by itself.

Chief John McFarland, reviewing Monday morning his first day's experience in enforcing the new regulations, showed that the obstacles he had encountered in getting a fair observance of the new rules was not great. His summary of the enforcement showed that the only one car that had to be tagged, and the driver of that machine later admitted that he was both careless and wrong in driving his machine up Main street to corner and leaving it parked within four feet of the junction of the streets and with the rear end about four feet out from the sidewalk. He was politely warned and allowed to go.

A careful checkup was maintained to establish that no driver exceeded the 60 minute parking limitation allowed in certain sections. Few cars were shoved any inclination to violate the rule.

One effect of the new regulations appeared to be additional congestion south of the Main street crossing and between the crossing and Water streets. Capacity rows of cars, the parking space each side of the street considered, were there through the afternoon and evening hours. This was a condition that attracted the attention of a number of persons who have been quietly making a study of how the new parking regulations would work out.

On the whole it may be said that the rules were introduced and made effective without great inconvenience to anyone, without any controversy and without friction. They worked well, a fact that is a source of gratification to all who have been trying to do something practical to ease off the congestion in the business center of the town.

Appropriate to this hot weather season of the year, Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., said some pertinent things to the congregations at the masses at St. James' church Sunday. Having admonished parents particularly and children especially that there is a joint responsibility between them for the use of unclean speech by the young people, he urged parents to see that their children do not use indecent language, admonishing them that they are responsible before God for such intemperance of language. Delinquency from church services during the vacation also received the attention of Father Richards, who touched the high lights of his compact when he stressed the fact that women of the congregation should come to church properly gowned.

Expressing his regret that such a subject should require comment from the pulpit, Father Richards emphasized the fact that improperly gowned women would be passed at the communion rail. Maintaining the position of the church that attendance at service by low-necked gowns held up only by shoulder straps is a contravention of good taste, utterly out of touch with that modesty which the church teaches as an essential to Christian life, Father Richards urged all who need to be talked to on the subject to be forewarned as to the attitude of the church and its clergy on this point. "We are not narrow-minded," Father Richards asserted, "but the church is no place for such methods of dressing. It is a source of temptation. It is a source of other sins. I am sure such a lack of proper covering is not due to the expense attached. It is done to attract attention. Any young man who is attracted by such exhibitions of immodesty cannot be proportionately more worth while than those who attract him. I am happy to say that only a few women dress immodestly in church, possibly not more than four or five to the hundred, but number as many as they may, they have their warning."

And as to all of this, it may be commented incidentally, that it is strange that a woman may have from four to a dozen ball gowns, but not one suitable for attendance at divine service under such restrictions as the fashionable church prescribes.

Walter L. Hoyle, with a place of business in Academy street, has a lettered and numbered tag taken from the leg of a pigeon that fluttered down opposite his store in such an exhausted condition as to attract his attention. When Mr. Hoyle went out to look at the pigeon it faltered along to a haven of safety underneath his parked machine and remained there for some time until he finally was able to capture the bird and ascertain that it had been wounded and was in such a bad way that it was on the point of expiring, which it did within a few hours—after being put in a safe place and given every opportunity to regain its strength and stamina.

From the right leg of the dead pigeon Mr. Hoyle removed an aluminum ring bearing the following inscription: 1924 W—3053 A. J. Mr. Hoyle has planned to notify a publication widely read by pigeon fanciers of the death of the bird and of the ring he holds, that some interested person may see them and know of the end to which the feathered flyer came.

John M. Johnson, who gave Killingly as his address, was ordered Saturday morning by Chief John McFarland to appear in the town court this (Monday) morning at 10 o'clock to answer to charges that will be preferred against him as the result of a collision between the car he was driving, a small closed machine—and a Cadillac car operated by Timothy Corcoran of Goodyear, when at the corner of Main and Academy streets.

Johnson swung his machine off Main street, through which he was making south-bound, for a short turn into Academy street as the Corcoran machine was coming out of Academy into Main. The cars crashed almost head on. No one was injured and the machines were not materially damaged. Johnson, however, will have to face a charge of cutting in for the turn on the left hand side of the street to which the Corcoran car, heading on what for it was the right hand side, was proceeding.

Regardless of what the deadlocked democratic convention in New York may now do, having shown that it has no inclination to do other than wrong things, it has infuriated the average democrat in Killingly to the point where he is willing to vote for Lodge, Coolidge or any other candidate that may present himself for an alternative choice rather than support any democratic nominee who is out of touch and out of sympathy with the major part of the democratic constituency in these eastern states. Having been cowardly in its platform about several things in which the average man who hereabouts votes the democratic ticket is interested, and having voted to emasculate the great bulk of the democrats in the east, Killingly democrats in large numbers want no more of the organization. If a man cannot have the nomination because of his race or creed, he in every other way being equal to any other candidate considered, then the democratic party cannot have the votes of those who, under normal conditions, would like to see it triumphant. That's the way the majority of democrats in Killingly appear to feel about New York convention and that's about the way they will vote. And they are not at all backward in telling the world about it. This comment has to do with national politics as the reaction of them is felt—party-wise—in Killingly. It has little to do with local politics or local candidates.

What the country needs, particularly in this section, just now is not a good five-cent cigar, but about 36 hours of steady rain.

The forthcoming report of the Connecticut Mills covering the first six months activities of 1924, will be satisfactory. The business outlook, however, is not as promising as officials of the organization would like, though they hope that after the convention epidemic prospects will be brighter.

Mr. and Mrs. Dow Marble of Cleveland, who are touring the east have been visitors with Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Judson. Mr. and Mrs. Marble are friends of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Young of Cleveland, formerly of Danielson.

Over the week end, Chautauqua furnished some splendid entertainment for the patrons of this year's program.

Without serious damage to either passengers or cars a touring car bearing a Connecticut registration and a car with New Hampshire license were in collision Sunday morning at the corner of Dyer and Franklin streets.

Mr. and Mrs. Ashley P. Mills of Boston are at their summer home on the West Side for a stay of a number of weeks.

Miss Florence Gingras, a student nurse at St. Francis' hospital in Hartford, is visiting at her home here.

Louis Brown of Central Falls, R. I., formerly of this town, was a week-end visitor in Danielson.

PUTNAM

The headquarters company of the Forty-third division, recently organized in Putnam, is having its first experience of camp life at the National Guard camp, Niantic. For most of the members of the company it is an entirely new experience; for a small number who saw service in the World war it is nothing new. A few members of the company saw service both in this country and overseas. To them the duties now being performed are a matter of routine. To the rookies it is a novel experience from which they will derive a great deal of benefit, as well as instruction in the duties of a soldier.

The company left its headquarters on Livery street shortly after 9 o'clock, Saturday morning, marching through Main street to Union square and countermarching to Union street and through this street to the railroad station. The company attracted a great deal of attention and the walks were lined with people who expressed approval of the fine showing the new company made.

The members were in full marching equipment, from the backs of each man glistening a new pair of tan shoes strapped to the heavy army roll, the only bit of the equipment not apparent were the army revolvers with which the men are supposed to be furnished. Being a headquarters company, guns are not carried and it is expected that soon the men will be assigned to the various departments which includes the duties of such a company. Among these are messengers, mechanics, horseshoers, wireless operators, telegraph operators and the like. There is also opportunity for a better rating and better pay in such a company.

The men will return from camp, Saturday, July 19th, and will doubtless show the benefits of camp life when they detrain and march back to headquarters.

The town school committee has adopted some new text books for next year among which are: Practical chemistry, practical physics, general mathematics, book 1; Junior Business Training, and Business English and Correspondence.

Attorney Samuel B. Harvey of Willimantic was in Putnam on business, Saturday afternoon.

From present appearances passengers on the Putnam line of the Connecticut company will ride in closed cars again this summer. It is some years since open cars have been run by the company on this division.

Delegates to the democratic convention in New York days ago became tired of delegating and wished to go home. Some of them did go home. There are radio delegates in Putnam who are also tired of attending by wireless but refuse to desert their sets until the garden is cleared and the nominations are made. Many a radio fan will be glad to again tune in on KDKA or WZB or any other station and listen once again to a little jazz or a male quartette. But the regular radio bug, especially if he belongs to the party now conventioning, will continue to lose hours of sleep unless there is a break and a majority vote in Tex Rickard's sanctum in Madison square.

Mrs. Sophia Johnson, 70, of North Grosvenordale, was brought to Putnam, to the Day Kimball hospital, about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, following a fall down stairs. Examination disclosed that her left leg was broken. After the accident happened the hospital ambulance was summoned and made a quick run to the Johnson home and return.

A. F. Ralston, city editor of the Patriot, and family, left this (Monday) morning for Lord's Point, where they will occupy the Delano cottage for two weeks.

With nearly all the factories in the city closed Saturday to give employes a double holiday Putnam had a semi-holiday appearance again on Saturday. Following the Fourth there was little business in the stores.

Camp Woodstock, the Y. M. C. A. camp on the shores of Black pond, West Woodstock, is sheltering a hundred boys. About half of the boys come from Hartford county, while the other half is about equally divided between Windham and Tolland counties. There were special athletic events arranged for the Fourth and there were a good many visitors at camp, mostly relatives and friends of the boys.

The program each day includes reveille at 6.45, followed by setting-up exercises, a morning's dip in the pond, colors, tent devotions and breakfast. Following breakfast there is a period devoted to physical training and a period devoted to educational training.

The woodcraft group is in charge of Frank Congdon, of Rockville; track practice, Harvey Delorme, Putnam; art, in charge of Peter Ricci of Stafford Springs; first aid, Mr. Carpenter, Providence; nature study, Truman Woodward of Wapping; work on camp paper is supervised by Sherwood Mercer of Hartford.

Later comes group athletics and games, swimming instruction, tent inspection and dinner. This is followed by a rest hour during which the camp bank and store are open; then another athletic period is followed by a swim and supper. In the early evening there are mass games followed by camp fire or exercises in the barn, if the night is wet and stormy.

Thursday, July 17th, will be Governor's day when Governor C. A. Templeton will be present and relatives and friends of the campers will attend. There are now six Putnam boys at the camp.

Roy E. Syophax, U. S. navy, stationed at the Portsmouth navy yard, and Mr. and Mrs. Alferie Cordier of New Bedford, were holiday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Cordier, of Green street. Saturday Frank Cordier took the visitors by automobile to Ocean beach, New London, where they spent Sunday.

The Methodist Sunday school united with the Sunday school of the North Grosvenordale Methodist church on a picnic at Green's grove, Quadic pond. There were athletic sports, boating and bathing and at noon a basket lunch.

The hours for masses at St. Mary's church Sundays during the summer months are: 7, 8, 9.15 and 10.30 o'clock.

In white flannel trousers, black or blue coats, wearing purple ties and carrying canes attached to which will be banners, Putnam Lodge of Elks will leave by special train for Boston next Thursday morning and will participate in the Elks' parade in that city during the day. Putnam lodge will take the Wauregan band as their escort in the big parade.

The Elks' special will leave Putnam at 8 a. m. and returning will leave the South Station, Boston, at 11 p. m. (standard time). An attractive rate has been secured for the round trip and already a large number of members have signified their intention of going on the trip. Past Exalted Ruler Archibald Macdonald Jr., is the delegate from Putnam lodge to the national convention.

MYSTIC

The small brick building across the railroad track, next to the transformer house of the Mystic Power Co., which belonged to Tom Frusher and which was ordered sold by the superior court, was sold last week at auction and was bid in by the New London bank which hold the mortgage on the property. It is said that the property brought $3,500. The structure was built about five or six years ago by Mr. Frusher and was used for a time for the manufacture of dyes. More recently it has been occupied by the Mystic Chemical Co., by whom it is used in the manufacture of soap.

He is a member of the Boston Art club, Saimagundi club of New York, Gloucester Art association, New Haven Paint and Clay club, and the Connecticut Academy of Fine Arts, Hartford, Conn. His work has been exhibited in the principal art exhibitions of this country." Mr. Enneking has spent a number of summers in Mystic and has many friends in the village.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

BLUEBIRD

When the woods were glad with April
And life was quickening,
I heard a bird on a bramble sing,
A bird with tiny flames for wing—
A wee bird daft with spring.

From the bramble-bush he bounded
To a tall white alder tree,
And my heart stood still, dumfounded
At his shrill sweet ecstasy—
At his April melody.

Drunk with joy, drunk with laughter,
Running riot down the wind;
Rhyming, chiming—he was dafter
Than are fays and fairy-kind—
Fays and fairies in the wind.
—Verne Bright in Our Own Dumb Animals.

HYMN TO THE NORTH STAR

The sad and solemn night
Has yet her multitude of cheerful fires;
The glorious host of light
Walk the dark hemisphere till she retires:
All through her silent watches, gliding slow,
Her constellations come, and climb the heavens, and go.

Day, too, hath many a star
To grace his gorgeous reign, as bright as they:
Through the blue fields afar,
Unseen, they follow in his flaming way:
Many a bright lingerer, as the eye grows dim,
Tells what a radiant troop arose and set with him.

And thou dost see them rise,
Star of the Pole! and thou dost see them set.
Alone, in thy cold skies,
Thou keep'st thy old unmoving station yet,
Nor join'st the dances of that glittering train,
For dipp'st thy virgin orb in the blue western main.

There, at morn's rosy birth,
Thou lookest meekly through the kindling air,
And eve, that round the earth
Chases the day, beholds thee watching there:
There noontide finds thee, and the hour that calls
The shapes of polar flames to scale heaven's azure walls.

Alike, beneath thine eye
The deeds of darkness and of light are done:
High towards the start-lit sky
Towns blaze—the smoke of battle blots the sun—
The night-storm on a thousand hills is loud—
And the strong wind of day doth mingle sea and cloud.

On thy unaltering blaze
The half-wrecked mariner, his compass lost,
Fixes his steady gaze,
And steers, undoubting, to the friendly coast;
And they who stray in perilous wastes, by night,
Are glad when thou dost shine to guide their footsteps right.

And therefore, bards of old,
Sages, and hermits of the solemn wood,
Did in thy beams behold
A beauteous type of that unchanging good,
That bright, eternal beacon, by whose ray
The voyager of time should shape his heedful way.
—William Cullen Bryant.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Every member of the Wide Awakes will remember, how, during the winters just passed, many lovers of birds have asked boys and girls in the cities and in country towns, to feed birds and help them in every way to live through the cold months of the year, when it is hard for them to find food for themselves because snow covers the food on the ground.

This is a wonderful thing and I'm sure many Wide Awakes answered this call and had lots of fun doing it too. Now in the summer time there isn't the need of feeding the birds to keep them alive, but there is a need just now to help the mother and father birds keep their little feathered babies alive.

Every boy and girl knows that when the little birds become old enough they are taken out and taught to fly by the parent birds. Sometimes before the little birds can fly they fall from the nests and we find them on the ground crying for their mothers. Most boys and girls love birds and above all, little helpless birds and it is natural that they should want to pick the little birds up and try to get them back into the nests.

However right this may seem it is sometimes wiser not to pick the little birds up, for the mother bird usually is able to find them and get them safely home. If, however, you should pick the little bird up and take it away, the broken-hearted mother bird is likely to fly away and not come back, for fear she might meet with some harm.

If you find a little bird on the ground and can put it back into the nest easily it's a fine thing to do, after you have done this don't stand around the nest or go near it too often, or the parent birds will be likely to leave it.

I'm sure that the Wide Awakes are going to protect the little birds this year and not see them harmed by cats and dogs. If you cannot help the little birds ask some older person to do it, or put it where it is not likely to be killed.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

HOW I SAVED MY BROTHER

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write a letter to you and the Wide Awakes. It is about saving my brother from drowning. One day my brother and I went crabbing. He was going to pull up the net and hit his back against the bridge and he fell in the river. I jumped in after him. He was going down the last time. I grabbed him by the arm and swam to shore with him.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF CLAYS

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought the Wide Awakes would be interested to hear about clays. Clay consists of the finer waste of the surface rock which is derived from the rocks by weathering and mechanical lakes, seas and rivers. When the water is let off and the place is dried up, and some of the earth is dug away sometimes. Clay is found in great areas, often with metals.

There are four different kinds of clays, the Kaolins, ancient, marine, brick and alluvial clay. Clay is used to make drain tile, pottery, paints, sewer pipes and for building bricks and fire bricks and it is also used as a constituent of some papers.

Koalin is a pure clay and it is produced by the wasting of ancient crystalline rock. It is worked chiefly in Pennsylvania and North Carolina and it is employed in the making of pottery.

A great deal of clay is found around the Hudson river and is chiefly made into bricks and floated down the river in scows to New York City. The lower grades of clays are made into stove ware.

From New Jersey southward the clay is ancient, marine clay. Around the Great Lakes is the alluvian clay, which is commonly made into bricks. New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Illinois are the leading states in the United States for clay production.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Dear Uncle Jed: I didn't decide to write to you before so I said, "I might as well be Uncle Jed's piece so I composed a little story. We started to take the Norwich Bulletin last Tuesday and other little girls told me about the Wide Awake circle so I wrote this little story, about a boy who was saved during a thunderstorm.

High upon a mountain a boy was taking care of animals. A big thunderstorm arose, and it began to rain heavily. He ran for protection under a tree. During the rain, thunder and lightning, he heard someone call him by name. Thinking it was his father who called, he ran through the storm down the mountain to his father. The father said he did not call him but scolded him for leaving the animals in such danger. The boy hastily ran back to his flock. But what was his astonishment at beholding the tree under which he had sought protection was torn off by the lightning.

FORESTS OF THE UNITED STATES

Dear Uncle Jed: The forests of this country are very important to men. In the early times the forests were often considered objectionable as it took a great deal of hard work to clear the fields for cultivation. Often great piles of logs were burned for there was not much demand for wood. Wood at that time was mostly used for fuel. Now it is used for numerous purposes.

We have been guilty of wasting large quantities of our very valuable timber. Many times, when the trees were cut, high stumps were left. Many trees that have been blown down have been left in the forests and many small ones have been taken for lumber. Each tree should be allowed to grow to a certain size before it is cut down.

There are several ways in which we can preserve our forests. Here are a few ways.

Burned over areas should be reforested. All forests should be carefully guarded, so that fires could be prevented. Substitutes for wood should be used when possible. Matches should not be carelessly thrown away in underbrush near the forests.

GLAD VACATION IS HERE

Dear Uncle Jed: It is now vacation time and we have laid our books away for the summer months. I like to go to school very well but am glad to see vacation time come around so I can help mother. She says I am a great help to her and I am always glad to do what I can for her and keep learning more all of the time. Mother has a lot of chickens and she lets me feed them for her and gather the eggs every day.

A SCHOOL PICNIC

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell the Wide Awakes about the picnic my school had the last day of school. We were going to start early but somehow we didn't get started till ten o'clock. We had a fine ride to where the picnic was going to be. We had two trucks to take us there. We all went boat riding. As I wasn't used to rowing I got blisters on my hands. We had all we wanted to eat, even pickles and ice cream. When the time came to go home we were having such a good time we didn't want to go but we went just the same. By the time we arrived home we were pretty well tired out but we were all satisfied.

SAVED FOUR BIRDS

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first attempt at story writing to The Bulletin. One day my brother went out in the orchard to plough. I thought I would follow him around, as I like to see the plough go through the soil. After he had gone around the field a number of times he stopped to let the horse rest.

I walked ahead a little way and there right in front of the horse was a dear little bird's nest with four little birds in it. I picked up the nest and put it in another place so the little birds were saved.

MY PET RABBITS

Dear Uncle Jed: I must write and tell you about my two pet rabbits that my papa got for me a little while ago. This spring I would sometimes let them run loose in the yard and they would come to me when I called them but now I keep them caged up, so they wont get into our garden. Every day I go out in the field and get fresh grass and clover for them. Now that school is out I expect to have a good time playing in the fields.

JOLLY TIMES IN THE BARNYARD

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first letter I have written to you. We've got some chicks which are very funny. One day about noontime, a feather flew over the fence and made them run into the coop. They thought it was a hawk which was going to carry them away. Now they have grown and are very strong.

Last week a crow came near the chicken coop. He flew round and round. Whenever he hopped from limb to limb, the chicks would all rush to one corner and stretch their necks.

I don't believe you ever have seen such funny chicks.

AN ENJOYABLE PICNIC

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write about our picnic at our school. We invited all the parents and friends to come at one o'clock. It began with pieces and songs. Later three girls started to pass the refreshments to all. We had cake, cookies, sandwiches, ice cream and candy.

Every child brought something. We enjoyed ourselves very much.

JENNIE IDZKOWSKI, Age 8.

THE COMMUNITY AND CITIZENSHIP

Dear Uncle Jed: A community is a body of people assembling together and having a common interest. These people are called the citizens of the community. Every citizen should take part in boosting his or her community. It does not always mean by contributing money, but by first making your your property look respectable. This is one of the best ways to help a community. If every citizen would do this, every home would be neat and the result would be a good community.

In every town there are found properties occupied by tenants or property owners. These people often think it is not their place to keep up the property. To a certain extent it isn't, but in other respects it is. No sensible person will expect a tenant to paint a house, build more rooms or porches, to mow the grass, keep paths neat, and not to distribute garbage around. These things are the duties of the tenants, and it shows their attitude toward the community when they fail to do their duty.

In passing from town to town you can see many different properties. You can also see at once whether they are neat or disorderly. The citizen who owns that house or lives in it is having his character judged by the passersby according to the outside appearance of the property.

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the Declaration of Independence. Congress which was made up of representatives from the thirteen colonies appointed a committee to draw the Declaration of Independence. It was written by Thomas Jefferson, and on July 4, 1776 it was adopted by Congress.

NORMAN WARNER, Age 10.

AMERICANISM

Dear Uncle Jed: What is Americanism? It is not the cheering and fireworks, Fourth of July kind of patriotism. Nor is it the pompous pride in our land; the politicians loud "from the rockbound coast of Maine to the sunkissed waters of the Pacific." It is something deeper, hidden in the heart of every true American.

Americanism is that feeling that makes one remain a loyal citizen even through he remains away for many years. It is the spirit that sends millions of men to defence of their country. To the real American, this is his country, and he backs it, right or wrong. He will fight to preserve its integrity and honor even though he is opposed to war. As a citizen he realizes his duty and tries to do his part in every way he can.

When immigrants land here from other shores, we immediately start to Americanize them. We tell them what a wonderful land this is. We teach them all outward symbols and glamour of being Americans. But how often do they get the real meaning, the deep feeling of Americanism? It takes time and years must pass before they can fully realize its meaning. It is something hidden. It is present in all of us and in a critical time it will show itself.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

A Visit to Uncle Lucky

"Where are you hopping, bunny boy rover?
Tarry a while amid the sweet clover.
The meadow lark's singing,
The blue bells a ringing,
Happy days coming all the world over."

sang dear Mother Nature one morning. Oh, so early, as the dew lay on the grass and the Mill Pond lay so still and calm it seemed a looking glass.

"I can't stop a minute," replied Little Jack Rabbit. "My kind bunny uncle, Mr. Lucky Lefthindfoot has just telephoned me to visit him."

"What makes him so late?" asked the Bunny Boy.

"Do as Uncle Lucky wishes," answered Mother Nature. "The clover tops won't fade for many a day."

Pretty soon, not so very far, the little rabbit came to his nice old uncle's house on the corner of Lettuce avenue and Carrot street, Rabbitville. Hopping through the gateway in the white picket fence, and around to the kitchen, he tapped on the door, one, two, rapperty rap!

"Come in," squeeked Little Miss Mousie, the old gentleman bunny's tiny housekeeper. "Uncle Lucky will be down in a minute or three for his carrot cake and turnip tea."

"What makes him so late?" asked the bunny boy, looking wistfully at the lettuce marmalade in the big cut glass bowl.

"He has a little touch of the rheumatis in his left hind toe. He rode too long in his little tin lis. And so has the bothery rheumatiz," answered Little Miss Mousie.

"Who's telling tales out of school?" all of a sudden, just like that, asked the dear old gentleman rabbit, having tiptoed to the kitchen in his flowered carpet slippers. "Didn't take you long to hop over," he went on, tucking the napkin under his chin. "Want some lettuce marmalade?"

Well, you can bet your last carrot cent the little rabbit didn't answer no. He said yes as quick as a wink, and maybe quicker.

"Ha, ha," laughed dear Uncle Lucky. "Eat all you wish, — there's plenty more. Eh, Little Miss Mousie?"

"I guess so," replied his tiny mouse housekeeper with a toss of her bobbed hair. "I made two big crocks full last week."

"I'll pick more lettuce before Little Jack Rabbit and I go out for a ride.

Heigh ho, heigh he!
Dearie me, Oh
How the rheumatix bothers
My little hind toe."

sang the old gentleman rabbit.

Then in a few minutes, out he hopped to the vegetable garden, while his bunny nephew skiptoed to the barn to talk to the Old Red Rooster. And in the next story, dear little reader, you shall hear what the two little bunnies did when they went Luckymobiling.

WESTERLY

Tony Diange of Pawcatuck was before Judge William A. Wilcox in a special session of Stonington Town court Saturday morning, for a too strenuous celebration with fireworks the night before the Fourth. Dr. Charles Erichson of New Britain, accompanied by his wife, and family were passing through Pawcatuck when he saw a man firing a roman candle in the direction of passing automobiles. The fire just missed a auto ahead of him but one of the lighted balls entered his machine, setting fire to a newspaper and burning his wife's dress near her shoulder. Bringing his car to a stop he pursued the man, who got away. Turning around his machine he found Pawcatuck Patrolman Charles W. Connors, who did excellent work in locating the man, whom he arrested and who later was released in bonds of $500 furnished by Joshua Pallazzo.

Diange pleaded guilty to a warrant sworn out by Town Solicitor George R. McKenna, which was brought under new automobile statute, Article 7, Section 63, "Throwing objects at motor vehicles." Dr. Erichson, who remained in Westerly, appeared in court against Diange. Diange produced in court the burned roman candle, which figured in the case. Judge Wilcox fined him $10 and costs of $14.72, amounting to $24.72 in all. This was paid by defendant.

The July meeting of Westerly Town Council will be held this (Monday) morning in the council chambers. One of the matters is to be brought up is said to concern police affairs, which are usually cared for by the police committee, Councilmen Farquhar Smith, George B. Utter and Louis Rossi. It is reported that there will be a majority and a minority report on the naming of a sergeant of police, of Westerly, a vacancy having been caused by the recent death of Police Sergeant Donald McL. Ferguson.

Friends in Westerly of Captain and Mrs. Charles P. Maxson of Mystic were the former's guests at the week end. They report that Mystic is to be honored by having Capt. Maxson's daughter, Miss Dorothy, sponsor at the launching of the new Southern Pacific Steamship Company's new craft, the "Bienville" at Portland, Oregon, Tuesday, July 15th, Capt. Maxson is the senior captain of the S. P. fleet captains and as such has the command of the new steamship, which was named for a former governor of Louisiana. Capt. and Mrs. Charles P. Maxson and daughters, Miss Dorothy and Miss Katherine left Mystic Saturday for New York, where they will take the private car of the president of the Southern Pacific Company to the Pacific coast.

One of the day after the Fourth accidents resulting from experiment with left over fireworks occurred at Weekapaug Saturday morning. Robert Munson, Jr., 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Munson of Hartford, who are at the Rogers cottage, received serious burns in the eyes, which may result in the complete loss of vision.

Finding a flower pot on the grounds where burned fireworks were left over from the night before, the child applied a match with the result that the flames flashed into his face. His screams attracted the attention of the members of his family and he was taken into the automobile of his father to the office of Dr. John Helfrich in Westerly and later to the Rhode Island hospital in Providence for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Carpenter and daughter Ruth were at Camp Hoffman, Kingston, R. I., Sunday guests of their daughter Miss Edith, a corporal at the girl scout camp there and Miss Barbara Kenyon, of Ashaway.

Lawrence S. Purtill returned Sunday to his home in Philadelphia, after a holiday visit with relatives and friends on the West Side.

Mr. and Mrs. William Willis of Providence were week end guests of relatives and friends in Westerly.

Charles E. Champlin of Bridgeport was the week end guest of his mother, Sarah Champlin.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Thorp and daughter of Pawcatuck and Miss Mary Thorp of Westerly returned Saturday night from a holiday trip over the Mohawk trail.

William Murphy has left his home in Westerly for New Rochelle, N. Y., where he will be employed.

Amos Brown and daughter Harriet of New Haven were visitors Saturday with relatives and friends in Westerly.

Harold Burdick of the torpedo station, Newport, was the week end guest of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Burdick in Westerly.

Mrs. H. N. Campbell arrived Sunday at the Aborigines cottage, Wauwinnet avenue, Watch Hill, where she will be visited by her daughter, Mrs. Philip Cheney of Hartford.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hughes of Westerly and Mr. and Mrs. James Laughlin and children were automobile visitors Sunday with William Laughlin and family in Providence.

Westerly friends were guests of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Franklin on the Fourth of July and enjoyed an old fashioned Rhode Island clambake, at Coventry, R. I. Games were played during the afternoon, and selections were read by Miss Louise Bonney.

Thursday evening next, president of the department of Rhode Island, Woman's Relief Corps, Mrs. Mabel D. Lockwood, and her staff will visit Budlong Relief Corps in Westerly. Preparations are being made for the national convention in Boston in August.

In the Fourth of July races at Watch Hill, the winner of the one design class (Hereshoff) for which Mrs. C. Bai Lihme, a summer cottager at "Norman Hall" and a member of the house committee of the club, offered a cup was Robert Barri.

The winner of the handicap race with prize offered by the Watch Hill Yacht club was Gutterson, who sailed the Heron.

"Commodore" Clark, sailing the Sweet Marie, came in second. The wind died out at the end of the race and the finish proved a drifting match.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Clapham of Westerly sailed from New York Saturday afternoon for two months' visit in England.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Martin of Brattleboro, were guests over the Fourth of Miss Jessie Burdick at Quonochontaug.

STATE'S FINANCIAL SHOWING.

Following a period of taxes, taxes and more taxes, nothing can be more gratifying to the people of Connecticut than to be informed that with the close of the fiscal year June 30 there was a balance of $3,164,996 in the treasury.

First: there will be cause for satisfaction to the people of this state that their officials have so carefully administered the financial affairs of the commonwealth as to bring about this excellent showing, and that sufficient consideration was shown by the last general assembly to make possible such a showing. It indicates the handling of state affairs in a way to please the overburdened taxpayers, both direct and indirect.

Secondly there will be interest in the effect of this showing, for if it is applied as might be expected it means a reduction of the indebtedness and the interest thereon, and it indicates the possibility of another lowering of the state tax.

This year the towns of the state have experienced a reduction in the state tax. A half million dollars less in taxes have been collected, and even with that decrease there is piled up a sizable surplus.

When a surplus is faced there is always a temptation to spend it. It is a fact when a state has plenty of money that there is an inclination to extravagance. Application of a substantial part of such a surplus to debt reduction means the lowering of the interest account and tends to tax cutting, though taxes may also be cut by lowering the revenue colected from towns.

Connecticut has a debt at the present time running over $16,000,000. It likewise has a sinking fund account of over $11,000,000. If the sinking fund is devoted to the wiping out of the debt it should easily meet the maturing bonds. Thus the outlook is highly gratifying provided there is adherence to present policies. The prospects of getting further away from the high taxation of war days never fails to interest the fellow who has to pay.

1860 AND 1924.

Before the democratic convention opened there were indications which supported the contention that there would be many ballots taken before any choice as to presidential candidate would be made. That didn't necessarily mean that records would be equalled and new ones established, but such is the case, and the end is not yet. The famous contest of 1860 has been a conspicuous mark in democratic political history but it has been so overshadowed already by the New York contest that it takes a back seat. All things henceforth must be judged by the 1924 struggle, which may be the cause of abandoning that long standing two-thirds rule which creates so much trouble every four years.

Back in 1860 there was a serious division on the question of slavery. The candidates before the convention were Douglas, Guthrie, Hunter and Lane and at that time there were 303 delegates. Douglas was the one getting the most votes, just barely escaping a majority when on the last ballots he received 151. But a two-thirds vote was required then as now and he was far from the necessary 202. Guthrie received 65, Hunter of Virginia 16 and Lane of Oregon 14. The southern delegates withdrew and organized a separate convention after which the regular convention adjourned to Baltimore to which city the other delegates also adjourned. There on the second ballot Douglas received the regular democratic nomination on the second ballot and Breckenridge was named on the first ballot by the southern delegates, meaning the breaking of the party and a division of the votes.

There is as much determination at the New York convention not to yield to another as there was in 1860 at Charleston, S. C. Whether the leaders can overcome the situation during the week-end recess remains to be seen. The issues are not the same but there is much sectional feeling over the candidates, enough perhaps to eliminate the leaders entirely and to agree upon some compromise candidate who can get the needed two-thirds of the delegates.

FIGHTING THE WEEDS.

Out in Indianapolis there is a city ordinance which prohibits property owners from letting crops of weeds grow until they go to seed, and it is interesting to note that at this time the street commissioner of that city is notifying the owners of all vacant lots that unless they comply with the law and dispose of the weed crop he will have the work done at a charge of $3, or resort to the alternative of bringing them into court and having them fined for the violation.

Now there may be many who would prefer that the city should do the weeding. Possibly they may figure that it would be the cheapest way out of the situation and might prefer to pay rather than to weed. But the outstanding fact is that Indianapolis has such an ordinance and from the action of the street commissioner it isn't permitted to become a back number.

Connecticut it will be remembered has a law against wild carrot. But how many are there, either out of respect for the law or the improvement of their grass land, ever give any consideration thereto? Possibly in most towns it is figured that there is too much to be done to devote efforts to this object. The wild carrot, to say nothing of other weeds which do no end of harm by going to seed and multiplying, is a nuisance to a countryside. There are a few who make a practice of fighting it for their own good, regardless of the requirements of the law. Occasionally there are those who cut over fields thick with wild carrots, dry and burn it all, but the instances are few, so few in fact as to attract special attention.

Out in Indianapolis there is apparently a disposition to look upon the weed ordinance as something to be forgotten instead of respected. And yet there is sufficient civic pride to push the street commissioner to the necessary effort to see that its terms are carried out. If all the city ordinances in Indianapolis are enforced in such a manner it must be a city in which its residents are standing enthusiastically back of its laws and those who are put into office to carry them out.

UNITY PREVAILS.

A further boost to the get-together movement was given by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, when it voted by a four to one vote for union with the same church in the north. It was in keeping with the view expressed by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, North, where there were but 13 votes in opposition out of over 800.

The union of these two branches of the same church appeals at last as a sensible thing to those who are directly concerned. It is not the first time that it has been undertaken but the first time it has obtained a favorable vote. From the action of the representatives of the various conferences it is to be expected that the conferences themselves will ratify the action of the general conference and thus put the seal of approval to the two large gatherings.

Various questions have been raised to block such unity in the past, including such as might be expected in view of the sectional feeling, but these have been found to be of too little consequence to prevent the joining of forces and bringing the work of the denomination under one organization instead of dividing the country along the Mason and Dixon, or some other line.

Unity is the purpose which has actuated many other similar organizations. It is readily understood that it can accomplish its objects much better without a division within its own camp, and whether it concerns work at home or abroad that aid which comes from standing and working together for a common purpose is invited and seems likely to be obtained. Division hasn't meant downfall but unity should mean improvement.

THE LA FOLLETTE MOVE.

No one has imagined for a minute that there would be any other nomination for the presidency made at the conference for progressive political action at Cleveland than that of Robert M. LaFollette. It was a La Follette convention in conception and in action. It seems a bit wasteful of time to have waited to ask the Wisconsin senator if he would accept a nomination from that gathering. It was a convention arranged to provide a vehicle to carry La Follette into the campaign as the head of a separate movement in which he plans to draw upon both parties.

When he made the statement that he was prepared to push his aspirations if neither party showed itself progressive enough it was a foregone conclusion that he could not restrain himself. He plans to make a bid for a certain radical element, a certain labor vote and a certain farmer vote. It will be a personally conducted campaign, on a personally written platform following a personally influenced convention which is not even to name the vice president.

LaFollette is too shrewd a politician to believe that he can be elected. His purpose is to endeavor to get such a group of votes in the electoral college that he can prevent an election by the people and throw the choice of a president and vice president into congress, that body which recently adjourned and in which bloc influence played such a highly unsatisfactory part.

How much La Follette hopes to profit from the New York situation depends upon the results. It is unwise to minimize the effect of his efforts but it is a time to so act that there may be no chance for him to put his man into operation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Something to worry about: A mining expert declares the coal supply of this country will be gone in 2000 years.

Perhaps the democrats feel that if it is going to take all summer it might as well be continued in New York.

The fellow who paid the government $40,000 as a penalty for evading his income tax believes the government is alert.

Those who defy the warnings and become maimed by reckless Fourth of July celebrations cannot be rated as the most patriotic.

The willingness to accept as stated by La Follette is not surprising. It appears the ambition of a lifetime to be nominated for president.

The British and French are talking about tunneling the English channel. It is an old story that has never gotten beyond the talk stage.

The bandmaster at the New York convention had the right idea when he opened up one session with, "It May Be For Years, and It May Be Forever."

Cannibal bones 6,000 years old are reported found. Something must be done, of course, to keep the interest up now that King Tut is being allowed to rest peacefully.

When Washington terms the flag insident at Tokio to be that of irresponsible parties, it is unquestionally the right view and the proper one till something develops to the contrary.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Always press a pattern smooth before using it. Use a warm, not a hot iron.

Old felt hats can be turned into iron holders, kettle holders, rubbing pads for waxed floors and rounds to go upon chair and table legs.

Upholstered furniture should be dusted with a brush and wiped with an old silk duster. The woodwork must be rubbed with a soft cloth.

To remove old stains of chocolate, cocoa, coffee or tea moisten the stain with cold water, then cover with borax and let stand a few minutes. Rinse with boiling water.

When washing spinach, greens, brussels sprouts or vegetables of that sort, put a handful of salt in the second water and the sand and sediment will sink to the bottom of the pan.

You can make very good coat hangers by cutting the hoops of a small barrel in two parts, winding folds of cotton or cambric on them and tying a cord to the middle of each frame.

Keep a small, clean bag hanging in the kitchen. Into this put any small strips of clean white cloth you have and see how handy and useful it is when there is a cut finger. It saves time hunting for a bandage.

A very efficient clothes sprinkler may be made by punching holes in the cover of a tin can; fill can with water, replace cover and sprinkle clothes evenly.

A novel use for your hot flat-iron is to make it serve the purpose of a can opener. Simply put the hot iron on the top of the cover of the can, leave it a few minutes and the can will open easily.

To keep linoleum in the ordinary way is simply scattering the dust. Slightly moisten a square of flannel, tie over the broom, and then sweep, and you will be surprised at the amount of dust that is taken up.

To clean coral beads dissolve a teaspoonful of borax in a pint of warm water. Dip the color and when clean pass through tepid water. Dry by rolling in a soft towel.

WHEN SEASONING FOOD

Have a large salt shaker filled with both salt and pepper—about quarter as much pepper as salt—to use in dishes requiring both seasonings. Another shaker beside it of sugar dusts the cookies. Little funnels made of the corner of an envelope in both the pepper and salt jars avoids spilling and untidiness.

WORN LINOLEUM

If the floor is linoleum covered, and the linoleum is beginning to show wear, scrub it with soda, and, when thoroughly dry, give it a thin coat of ground color paint. Then paint it one coat of dark oak color, and when this is dry, varnish it. The result will be well worth the minimum of labor and cost. The paint will last, and the floor will be very easy to clean.

TO GET RID OF ANTS

So often this time of the year ants will infest our pantry or refrigerator. Put a little sweetened water in a flat dish and stir into it a very little tartar emetic, (a poison.) Place where ants are troublesome.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Foot comfort adds infinitely to a woman's appearance and the grace of her movements. Without it free, natural movements are impossible and there is sure to be a strained expression on the face that is fatal to beauty.

Having chosen the right shoes and slippers, the next step is to keep them in good shape. Never wear run-over heels. Not only are they ugly to look at, but they also throw the delicate balance of your body out of place and this means awkward movement, an awkward walk and sooner or later irritated nerves.

Green soap is itself antiseptic, so that it is particularly recommended for use after one has been exposed to the dust of travel of a shopping tour in the city. Very sensitive skins sometimes smart and burn when this soap is used pure on them. In such cases the soap may be mixed with an equal quantity of liquid castile soap. The latter is prepared by shaving the cake finely into boiling water.

THE SUNBURN SEASON

Sunburn season is here. Many folks we know go out with the intention of getting a coat of tan — sunburn. In order to let others of us know they like outdoor life. That is fine, but it is usually like an ostrich who sees us coming, hides his head in the sand and because he does not see us thinks we cannot see him.

For those who like to enjoy the great outdoors—golfing, fishing, bathing, walking and so on—and do not want to adopt a case of sunburn, we suggest a few plans.

First accustom your skin to a little heat from the sun, not too much exposure at one time.

If you must expose your arms and face and other parts of your body in a sudden game of golf, yachting or a ride in an open car on a hot day you should apply a good coating of zinc ointment, which can be purchased in any drug store. This will help protect you against sunburn. If you are unfortunate and receive a case of sunburn, boric acid ointment of a lotion which any druggist will prepare for you should you be applied locally.

FOR THE SMALL BOY

Mothers who are skilful with their fingers will find a new model for the small boy of great interest. The suits consist of little trousers of linen in green, blue or violet to be worn with dimity blouses. A front panel on the blouse is smocked in color, the design running up and down instead of crosswise. On the edge of each side of the panel is a narrow piping of the linen. Collar and turn-back cuffs are finished with Irish picot.

SERVING MERINGUE

Meringue is at its best when first taken from the oven, but it cannot be served from the oven on a cold dessert unless one employs this method, which has proved satisfactory. Brown the meringue on a separate plate which has been dampened before the meringue was put on it. After browning, the meringue can be slipped into the cold pudding or portions of it arranged on the individual helpings.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Peta pink, a perfect June shade, is the latest color for crepe de chine blouses.

The woman who is anxious to conceal a few extra pounds will be careful to select materials for her gowns that hang straight without billowy folds, and she will see that it is made on straight lines without any elaborate trimmings.

Some of the newest sleeves are trimmed, not at the hand where we expect it, but just below the elbow.

Glass buttons are used on some of the most tailored of frocks. They are particularly effective on black.

Turbans are wound very closely and tightly about the heads these days and give the effect of having no crinoline foundation anywhere.

Of rare beauty is a a service consisting of plates, fruit cocktail glasses and finger bowls of clear glass which has a wide border of etched silver.

A favorite fur for trimming summer frocks and wraps at present is sheared coney, in white. Coney is of course rabbit, and the sheared fur has a certain appealing lightness of quality.

Tweed coats in rich colors and the softest of textures rival the capes on the cooler days. These are frequently seen in gray, fawn, nut brown and light blue.

The smartest checked and plaid frocks are made without any trimming except for narrow leather belts carrying out one of the important colors in the cloth.

Very giddy gloves are in vogue today. They come not only in pastel shades of yellow, green and pink to match the summer gowns, but also in purple, red and orange to contrast with them.

Burned peacock is a delightful new trimming which has taken its place today with burned goosefeathers. It forms the heart of many two-colored satin and taffeta flowers, with which evening costumes are decorated.

BROWN PREDOMINATES

In the worsted range, as in the range of materials for coating suitings and dresses, brown also predominates, ranging from the darker shades to cordovan and mulberry and two medium shades, rosewood and resin, through the copper shades of aventurine, cayenne and cedarwood. The worsteds are also shown in soft green, in true grays and in sepahi, a new bright French gray-blue.

FASHION IN WRAPS

Since far more women watch sporting events than take part in them, the wrap this year has taken on particular importance. The cape of three-quarter length is one of the outstanding features of the season, with the shawl cape, the newest development. This resembles a shawl loosely thrown about the shoulders but usually it is attached to the dress itself at the neck line.

WHEN PACKING COAT

To pack a coat lay it on a flat surface with the outside up. Fold the sleeves back at the elbows and draw them straight down at the sides. Turn the fronts back over the sleeves. Lay tissue paper and then take up the coat at the armholes and fold in the wrong side out lengthwise. Lay the coat in the trunk flat.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Irons must be stored in a very dry place. If you are putting them away for any length of time rub with a little mutton fat (or any fat that contains no salt) and wrap them in brown paper.

For starching muslins and lingham dissolve a piece of alum the size of a filbert for every pint of starch. This will preserve the bright colors of the fabric a long time.

Before washing your sweater sew the buttonholes shut. This will keep them from stretching.

To clean a navy serge dress or suit, brush the dust out thoroughly, then dip a fairly stiff brush in hot water and rub well into the serge. Iron on the wrong side, and the suit or dress will look like new.

To renovate a black silk dress sponge it with clear, strong tea, shake it out and hang up to dry. Have your irons ready, but do not let the dress get too dry to press out smoothly, as that would compel you to responge it.

TYPES OF WALLPAPER

The beautiful new wallpapers now offered afford the interior decorator a very wide latitude, not only of colors and designs, but of types as well. There are rough textured papers to make a fitting background for the craftsman type of furniture, rich satiny papers that look for all the world like real brocade, to go into rooms where the furniture is of elegant period design and there are dozens of kinds of quaint papers, copied from very old designs to make a harmony as background for antique furniture.

For smart, painted furniture, so popular just now, nothing is better than smart stripes with gay flowered borders, in which are repeated the colors of the designs on the furniture.

THE LOVER OF FLOWERS

For the summer bedroom, sitting room or sun parlor, nothing could be nicer than the small window boxes of flat reed painted delicate pastel colors that have a hint of silver through them and are further ornamented with garlands of flat flowers. To match these flower boxes are scrap baskets of the same material.

Besides acting as buyer for five large department stores in the South, Mrs. Joseph E. Ehrich actively manages a store in Savannah.

WHEN COOKING MEAT

In making soups always put the meat in cold water. Corned beef and ham should be put in boiling water. A tablespoonful of vinegar in the pot will make tough meat or chicken tender.

RECIPES

Spaghetti Steak: Place in a granite saucepan two cups of canned tomatoes, half a cup of onion sliced and chopped fine, and allow to simmer until the vegetables are tender. Season. Have half a pound of spaghetti cooked in rapidly boiling salted water until tender, which will be about twenty minutes. Sear the steak in a broiler or frying pan, and when seared on both sides season with salt and pepper and dredge slightly with flour. Place in a fireless cooker. Place on top the blanched spaghetti and pour over all the vegetables. Cook in the fireless cooker for one hour.

Apple Custard Pie: Mix together the well beaten yolks and a scant half cup of sugar. Pare, core and cut into small disks two ripe, tart apples and stir into the custard. Flavored with nutmeg, add bits of butter and bake this mixture in a crust that has been previously cooked. When cold cover with meringue made of the beaten whites of two eggs and two tablespoons of powdered sugar. Brown in the oven.

INSULL, THE POOR STENOGRAPHER

So poor that he had to leave school when he was 14 years old, Samuel Insull went to work as an office boy and learned stenography alone at night.

He was born in London, England, attended public schools and did odd jobs after hours. As office boy he earned $1.25 a week, so did extra work at night and studied. He became a stenographer, at $7 a week, and had to earn additional money at night.

His employer got a clerk who would work for nothing, and through a newspaper want advertisement he secured a place as stenographer with the British representative of Thomas A. Edison. The pay was small, he did secretarial work at night, and studied electricity.

Edison called for some special reports. Insull devoted every night for two months to them, then sent weekly ones. Edison sent for the youth, now 21, and Insull left home and friends, and sailed. As Edison's secretary he looked after the business during the day, and spent the nights in the laboratory.

Edison was starting the electric lighting business and the road was rough. Funds were exhausted, there were no funds for salary and Insull had to borrow money to buy meals. And he, as financial man, had many tilts with creditors. At one time the outlook was so blue that Edison considered going back to telegraphing and Insull to shorthand work.

The first plant was opened in New York. Success finally came. Insull then started and developed the business that became the Edison general Electrical Company of which he was vice-president in charge of manufacturing and sales.

Three years later he became president of the Chicago Edison Company. Then 33, he began enthusiastically and developed it into the present strong Commonwealth Edison Company.

Today, at 64, he still is active in it and in two score other organizations, is rich and has been honored by educational and technical bodies of the world.

Tomorrow—Dawes Changed His Vocation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

More Light Needed

Mr. Editor: What has become of the committee looking into the Gas and Electric situation? Is it going to be a star chamber session and are we going to have no more action than that silly letter that was read at the meeting? A school boy could write a more sensible statement than that—a contradictory array of facts and figures laughing at each other.

Give us something sensible or disband and have a new committee appointed. If our friend Winchester is to advise on municipal enterprises he better first inform himself on his own plant and then, investigate ours. Who ever heard of municipal enterprises being anything but a mess of incompetence and extravagance? Take our own plant. When we took it over we owed practically $800,000. Today we owe practically $1,800,000 and still they tell about profits we make. They have figured out a profit every year and still we may have to pay a dollar tax rate when we took the plant over. No wonder we are paying a 50 mill tax rate, and if we keep the plant a little longer we may have to pay a dollar tax rate. A statement printed in this paper shows $180,000 profit for a number of years operation. Why, the loss the city has suffered by loss in taxes which could be charged to the plant and the city would have received would knock that fictitious profit into a cocked hat. They say figures don't lie. But how about figurers? We are paying to make our electricity for 3 times what we can buy it for. Good business! I should say so!

How long must we tolerate it? Only the indifferent and the gullible fall for this line. Do you think if this plant were run by any one other than the city that we would have had that trouble with the help which occurred last year? You can bet your last cent it would not. Treatment accorded the help under municipal enterprises has always been of this type. An example of the way soviet Russia treats her help. Get to work or take the lash. How long are we to be hoodwinked by this extravagance?

The people are entitled to be heard on this matter. The citizens should pass on this matter before the credit of our city is ruined. It is bad enough now but what will it be if we allow these business methods to continue?

The public wants no star chamber sessions. We want the fullest information and no deceiving figures or nonsense. This is of vital interest to everyone who buys light or pays rent or taxes. Let us clean up the situation and get our taxes and rents back to where they belong.

SLASHED MAN WITH KNIFE IN FIGHT AT ASSAILANT'S HOME.

William (Duke) Johnson, 54, is in a cell at police headquarters and John Tennant, 48, of North Main street, is in the Backus hospital with deep wounds in his forehead and shoulder from a bread knife in the hands of Johnson in a fight Saturday night at Johnson's home at the northerly end of Baltic street near Mohegan park.

Tennant, covered with blood and weak from the loss of it, made his way to police headquarters after the fight and was at once sent to the Backus hospital by Dr. Louis T. Cassidy, who was summoned by Capt. D. J. Twomey. Sunday night Tennant's condition was reported as satisfactory. A long gash across his forehead required eight stitches and a deep cut in his left shoulder was closed with ten stitches while there was a small cut on the back of his neck.

From what could be learned of the fight, the trouble started when Tennant arrived at the Johnson home, having walked there with Mrs. Johnson. According to one of the children in the family, Johnson started to abuse his wife, whose part was taken by Tennant, and Johnson seized a bread knife that he had been sharpening, slashing Tennant three times before he was able to break away and get out of the house.

A neighbor who heard the racket telephoned in to police headquarters that there was trouble at the Johnson house and a few minutes later sent in a second message that there was a man in the street, covered with blood.

Captain Twomey got the motor patrol wagon there as quickly as possible, with Sergeant Thomas Murphy and Officer P. Murphy, who found Johnson had left the house. After a little search they discovered him asleep near a stone wall in a lot nearby, still having the bread knife with which he had made the murderous assault upon the other man. He was brought to police headquarters and locked up on a charge of breach of the peace and assault.

Johnson, who has never had a reputation for fighting, although he has been before the city court on intoxication charges, told the police he knew he was no match for Tennant in a fight and he used the knife to protect himself from the beating that he knew he would receive without it.

PLAINFIELD YOUTH IS DROWNED AT PACKERVILLE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Plainfield, July 6—George H. Hentshel, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Hentshel of Plainfield was drowned this afternoon while bathing in the Quinebaug River at Packerville. He was out in a boat with some friends, and all were jumping off the boat into the water when Hentshel jumped in and did not appear again his friends began to look for him. The boys looked around and one of them saw the body about 3 feet under the surface. They went directly to the spot but the body had disappeared. The children became frightened and went to the village to secure aid. Grappling irons were used but without success. Archie Tetreault and Christopher Wellinghouse, two of the boys who were with Hentshel, dove in a great many times but could not find the body. Francis Fountaine a passer-by joined the rescuers and in a few minutes discovered the body which was brought to the surface with grappling irons.

The spot where Hentshel was drowned was about fifteen feet deep and about fifteen feet from the bank. There was no marks on the body and it was supposed that Hentshel was entangled in some branches at the bottom of the stream. Frank Hentshel, father of the boy, said that it was probably due to a cramp as the water under the surface was very cold.

Dr. Chase and Dr. Bouvier, after working on the body for four hours were unable to revive the boy, although at the end of two hours the heart beat faintly for a few seconds, but then stopped abruptly.

Hentshel was employed in the Lawton Mills at Plainfield and besides his parents leaves two brothers and two sisters.

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, July 6—Pietro Vallone, 46, of 13 Jackson place was severely injured this evening about 9.30, when he was struck by the South Coventry-Willimantic trolley, a branch of the Connecticut Company, nearly opposite Brown avenue at the Ridges while the trolley was making a return trip from Coventry. The trolley was in charge of Joseph Dukoski of Norwich.

Vallone who is the father of a family of small children was rushed to St Joseph's hospital and placed in the care of Dr. M. D. Riordan who found him suffering from concussion of the brain and a badly lacerated right leg

It is thought that Vallone is a man concerning whom the local police received a complaint shortly before the accident to the effect that he was intoxicated and lying beside the road at the Flats district of the Ridges. Following the accident and the removal of Vallone the intoxicated person could not be found.

Morcin Catdak will be before the police court this (Monday) morning to answer to a charge of breach of the peace. Catdak filled up on holiday liquor and broke up considerable furniture at his home before he was placed under arrest.

REAR ADMIRAL STANTON DIES AT NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, July 6—Rear Admiral Oscar F. Stanton, 99, U. S. N., retired, died this morning at his home, 36 Granite street. The news of death of Rear Admiral Stanton was received with expressions of surprise, for while it had been known that his health had been failing because of infirmities attending his advanced years, it was not believed that the end was near. However, within the past few days his condition had failed considerably and Saturday his decline was rapid until the end. Had he survived until the 18th inst., he would have celebrated his 99th birthday. He is survived by two daughters.

Admiral Stanton entered the naval academy at Annapolis in 1843 and was graduated in 1854, at which time he was assigned to duty as a midshipman aboard the U. S. S. Susquehanna, one of the ships of the East India squadron, which on July 8th, 1853, arrived in Yeddo Bay, Japan, with treaties from President Fillmore. From the Susquehanna Admiral Stanton was transferred to the Saratoga. He became a master in 1855 and was made a lieutenant in 1856.

On the Paraguay expedition in 1858, he served aboard the Memphis, and later to the west coast of Africa on the Supply. During the civil war his services was on board the famous old St. Mary's the Marion, and during the Union naval activities on the James river on the Tioga, then as lieutenant commander.

Few of the officers who fought with Farragut on the West Coast blockade squadron are now living. Admiral Stanton was then in command of the U. S. Pinola in the memorable battle of Mobile Bay.

From the period of the civil war until his retirement in 1894, Admiral Stanton's duties were many and varied. In 1865 he was ordnance officer at the navy yard, New York; in 1867 he was an instructor at the naval academy, and later taught navigation on board the Santee. He became commander in 1867 and served successively as navigator of the Tahoma and of the Purveyor. He commanded the Vandalia in 1874-1875, to Monocacy and the Yantic of the Asiatic station from 1872 to 1874.

As senior aid to the commandant he served at the Norfolk navy yard from 1874 to 1876. He attained the rank of captain in 1879, was executive officer of the naval home, Philadelphia, from 1881 to 1884, commanded the U. S. F. S. Tennessee from 1884 to 1886 and the naval station, as it was then called, at New London from 1887 to 1889.

From 1890-1891 he was commandant of the training station at Newport, R. I., and became a commodore. He then served successively as governor of the naval home, in command of the South Atlantic squadron, during which he was wrecked on Boncador Reef with his flagship, the Kearsage. He transferred his flag to the San Francisco In July 1894 he was retired with the rank of rear admiral, but later, during the Spanish American war again commanded the naval station at New London.

Rear Admiral Stanton has made his home in New London ever since his retirement 30 years ago. He was a member of the Thames club and the flag on that building was set at half staff on the announcement of his death.

Smiddy, representative of the Irish Free State in Washington, in making public a cablegram from his government. At present this new passport arrangement will apply only to travelers sailing from New York, and in the case of those departing from the port of Boston an English visa will be sufficient. Ultimately, however, Irish Free State consular agencies will be established in Boston and Philadelphia and similar regulations apply there.

GARDNER LAKE FOREWORKS MADE FINE DISPLAY

The best display of Fourth of July fireworks that has been shown at Gardner Lake was given Saturday evening and was witnessed by many who motored to the lake to view the display from vantage points on the shore, but the pleasure of the evening was considerably marred because a heavy fog hung in the upper strata of air over the lake.

The display was set off from the island and consisted of a fine assortment of sky rockets, bombs, mines and set pieces that closed with the American flag that was greeted by the singing of the Star Spangled Banner by a party of girl campers. Plans for the celebration were made by C. V. Pendleton and contributions were received from many of those having cothages and camps at the lake.

After an illness of about two years, which took a more serious turn about six months ago, the life of Olin F. Boynton, formerly of Norwich, came to a close at 11 o'clock Friday night at his home in East Providence.

Mr. Boynton was born in South Coventry, April 7, 1857 the son of Rev. George D. and Ellen Vipond Boynton. DONOHUE TO FIND OUT WHY GREB ALLOWED TO FIGHT

New London, July 6.—The monthly meeting of the state boxing commission which was scheduled to be held at Hartford Saturday was deferred until next week Saturday. The secretary of the commission not aware of Chairman Thomas E. Donohue's return from his month's trip abroad, cancelled the meeting of the Connecticut boxing moguls.

The meeting which was to take place Saturday and which was deferred until next week is an important one. Licenses to clubs and managers will be issued in this meeting and several important matters that have arisen since the departure of Chairman Donohue for abroad will be taken up. All business ending in the past fiscal year which ended July 1, and the report handed in to the secretary of the commission by retiring chairman Mosey King will be acted on. Several suspensions which have grown out of the refusal of boxers and managers to abide by the ruling of the Commission will also be acted on.

The place vacated by Chairman Mosey King, Yale instructor, who has acted in the capacity of chairman of the commission since its inauguration by Governor Templeton, will be filled by Thomas E. Donohue of this city. Mr. Donohue was the choice of the boxing board when it was announced several months ago that Mosey King would not be reappointed a member of the board. The new chairman will presided over the first meeting next Saturday at the state capitol.

There is a rumor afloat that the new chairman is somewhat displeased with the granting of the prerogative to Harry Greb to box in Waterbury recently. Greb fought in Boston before he came to this state. It is contrary to the rules and regulations of the board to permit a boxer to fight in a star bout if he appeared in the ring within seven days before the scheduled bout in Connecticut.

This rule protects the boxing fan who, in paying his admission, does so in the belief that he will see the boxers at their best. The commission reasoned that should a boxer engage in a bout within seven days previous to his scheduled bout that he was not in a condition physically to give the best that is in him. This is true and there is enough logic in this rule to make it one of the strong points in the rules governing boxing shown in the state. It seems that the boxing board disregarded this rule and permitted Greb to fight in this state two days after his bout in Boston. Whether this was an exception to the rule, which it appears to be, the new commissioner is anxious to find out.

ARGENTINA WINS POLO TITLE FROM AMERICANS

St. Cloud, France, July 6.—(By The A. P.)—Argentina today emerged victorious from a terrific duel with the United States for supremacy in the world's polo, winning from the North American team by the narrow margin of 6 to 5.

In a heart-breaking finish, with the score tied 5 and 5 one minute from the final bell, Jack Nelson, the Argentine star, brought the spectators to their feet cheering and applauding wildly by scoring the goal which meant victory for South America.

The battle today was bitterly fought throughout and, until the injury to Hitchcock, it appeared as though the match might run into extra periods. While the Argentine team was better balanced, there was no shining star like Hitchcock in the quartet. Every man on the South American team, however, played with desperation from the start. The Argentine aggregation, consisting of players that are rated just better than the average, defeated a team composed of probably the best polo players in the world.

In what will go down in the history of 1924 Olympics as the greatest polo match contested, the victory went to the team which showed the greatest persistency and stamina during the last quarter hour of play. The Argentine team deserved its victory. It showed superior science and clever combination work, although its driving, smashing and checking were not up to that of the United States players.

Hitchcock was undoubtedly the best man on the field until he was injured. The other forwards were rather ordinary, while Rodman Wanamaker played below his usual form. Arthur Kenney of Argentina completely covered the Philadelphian.

No one actually starred in today's competition, especially among the Argentines. Critics of the match declare that was why the South American won.

DUWELLS SLAUGHTER BALTIC IN IN FIRST GAME OF THE SERIES

Before a very small crowd, Sunday afternoon at the Duwell field, the local team handed the Baltic A. A. team a terrible beating which read 23 to 5 at the end of the game. From the very first inning the Duwells started socking the ball around the lot and by the fifth inning had Papin, a star Baltic twirler, ready for the showers and kept right after Ridgeway who succeeded him, piling up runs at will which aided by errors, sent plenty of runs across the old platter for the local boys.

Daniels, the 18-year-old high school wonder, kept the Baltic boys well in hand and for the last four innings tossed the ball to them, which accounted for four of their five runs. Although the Baltic lads put up a terrible exhibition of baseball they played hard and it was really an off day for them. Belair and McInnis led the local boys with four hits apiece and were closely followed by Shefbit, Coughlin and Smith with three each.

Rossie Wins From Mohawk A. C.

The Rossie A. A. won from the Mohawk A. C. of South Manchester on the grounds of the former at Mystic by a score of 8 to 6 on Saturday.

Mystic took the lead in the third when they scored 2 runs on two doubles a sacrifice and an error; added four in the seventh, on three singles, two errors, a wild pitch, and two in the next on two triples and a fielder's choice.

Chappell pitched a fine game of ball and it looked like a no hit game until L. Phillips, in the seventh, hit for one base, the only hit by the visitors. No one got beyond second base and he also struck out 16 men. Score:

TAFTVILLE A. A. SPLITS EVEN IN WEEK END PROGRAM

Taftville A. A. got an even break in the week-end program, winning from the Corbin Red Sox, 11 to 6, on Saturday afternoon at Taftville, and losing the final game with Moosup, 2 to 2, after a thrilling twelve inning battle at Moosup on Sunday.

Saturday's game was rather uninteresting after the first inning and Taftville pounded three pitchers hard until Hubert was sent in for the Red Sox. He showed up well and held the Taftville hitters to a few well scattered hits. Chip Dugas led the Taftville attack with three smashing singles. All his hits were good for extra bases but Chip's old shanks wont move as fast as they used to. Bill Liberty ran Dugas a close second. Bill hit one ball to left field that struck about three inches foul but Bill circled the bases before the ball was returned just to show Dugas that it could be done.

The Red Sox hit Wills freely but his support was good and saved him several times.

Sunday's game was a pitching duel between "Chick" Davis and Lefty Hurrell in which Davis lost the game himself in the twelfth inning by a wild pitch after he had thrown wild to first base to Burns who had bunted. The end came as the result of poor baseball and was not a fitting ending to such a tense diamond struggle. Taftville scored in the first inning through errors by Moore. In the sixth inning they scored another run on three hits and an error.

Moosup was helpless before Davis until the seventh inning when they bunched hits for two runs tying the score. The score remained deadlocked until the twelfth when Moore the first man up singled past first and was advanced when Burns laid down a bunt that Davis fielded but threw wild to first. Moore went to second on the overthrow. On the next ball pitched Davis threw wild and Moore trotted over the plate with the winning tally. The score of Saturday's game:

SUB BASE CAPTURES GAME WITH STAMFORD

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, July 6.—With warrant officer Hawes in command, the Submarine Base after getting off to a belated start, began an offensive drive that netted them a single capture in the tenth inning of the St. Mary's-Sub Base game here Saturday and the sailors going at full steam ahead cruised out in front of the visiting outfit from Stamford by a 5 to 4 score. The Stamford aggregation coming by land almost surprised the gobs, who after recovering from their shock were able to thwart the attempted invasion of their opponents from terra firma, but not until ten attacks had been made by the gobs.

After four innings of lazy man's baseball, both teams gathered their forces together for final assaults upon the rival pitchers. Meanwhile the only thing interesting about the conflict was the closeness of the score. St. Mary's captured two submarines in the opening four innings of sham play. Here the Base after a little dilly dally, sneaked upon the unsuspecting enemy and captured two chalkers, for themselves. It was an even break at that, and then the teams began to play something that resembled the national pastime.

Commander Hawes of the Base was getting ready to make a raid upon the opposition and had his fleet in battle formation. Hawes in person led the assault and shot a two bagger into left along the foul line. Two fielder's choices brought him over with the run that gave his contingent the lead. The attack was entirely too much for the visting helmsmen, Moger, and he was forced to remain among the missing when the final accounting was made. A recruit in his place by the name of Kuczo, a former Stamford High school artist took Moger's place. He was better than his predecessor and had the distinction of gaining a strike out victim for himself.

The strike outs by the way, were very few and far between—only two in fact. The rival players were smashing at the pill and the majority of the outs were in the infield. Here the Sub Base profited by mistakes which were devastated by fine baseball on their parts. Three doubles killings which were made with snap and precision, proved to be as effective as poison gas to an army without gas masks. The visitors were running around the bases as if they lost their leader, it was foolish base running, but then the Base players had to make throws to get their man who was attempting to steal a base.

The visitors made a successful raid in the eighth and hauled away two big runs. This gave them the lead, but the Base came right back to tie up in their half. Lefty Harrell who mans an eighth pounder, aimed the projectile that was supposed to go past his bat into a vacant spot in right field for two bases. Dinty Moore got a lucky single through second and the tie was there. The game was extended to the tenth and then the visiting defense, which had been spick and span up till then with the exception of first base, gave way to the concentrated attack again led by Hawes in person. His single to center and an error of omission by the second sacker on C. Moore's bunt brought Hawes to third. Harrell shot a slow roller to Richardson at first and he let the ball trickle through his legs, Hawes scoring the winning run. The score:

How It's Done In the Majors

By Frank Frisch
(Fordham Flash, New York Giants)

Is there any rule for a pitcher to follow in pitching to base hitters?

In leagues where pitchers study the different hitters, they learn that all batters are either low or high ball hitters. When this knowledge is gained, they always try to pitch the batter's weakness. Of course a batter will hit a low ball occasionally, if he is a high ball hitter and vice versa, so a pitcher is not sure of putting a man out, if he does pitch to his weakness, but the percentage is very much with him.

When a pitcher faces a team whose batters he does not know, he must mix them up, feeding them slow balls and curves, as such a mixture is considered the most difficult for a batter to handle, and big league pitchers also follow this plan.

DODGERS SHARE HONORS WITH THE BRAVES

Brooklyn, July 6.—Brooklyn and Boston divided a double-header today, the visitors taking the first 4 to 1 and Ruether pitching a 5 to 0 shut-out in the second. Vance fanned nine Braves in the opener, but they bunched hits at opportune times. An error by Smith followed by Brown's triple prevented the Braves from scoring a shut-out. Smith stole three bases. The Dodgers won the second game by bunching hits off Cooney and Stryker in the fifth inning.

RITOLA SETS NEW WORLD'S RECORD IN 10,000 METRE OLYMPIC EVENTS

Colombes Stadium, July 6.—(By The A. P.)—Racing over a muddy track to a world's record and athletic glory that will go down among the greatest of all times, Willie Ritola, sturdy, lean limbed Finnish product of America's running school, today brought the opening competition of the 1924 Olympic track and field championships to a climax with a sensational triumph in the 10,000 metre run.

Before a wildly cheering throng of 40,000, Ritola, fairly flying over a track that had been deluged by a downpour just a few minutes before the race, scored a smashing victory that gave his native country, Finland, a sure and certain start towards its bid for the Olympic crown in what now seems certain to be a battle with the United States.

Ritola's spectacular victory gave Finland a clean sweep in the first day's finals, for in the javelin throw, the only other event which was concluded, Jonnie Myrra, the veteran Olympic champion, successfully defended the spear tossing title by conquering the Americans and Swedes, his only real competitors.

These two first places, together with fourth place by Egvist in the javelin, and third and fourth places in the 10,000 metres by Berg and Sipila, the other Finnish distance stars, counted up for the little Scandinavian nation a total of 26 points—a commanding lead over its nearest rival, Sweden, which gathered 11 points. The United States, due to the unexpected good showing of its javelin throwers, E. Oberst, Notre Dame, and William Neuffeldt, University of California, who were third and fourth respectively, holds third place, with 6 points.

Ritola's marvelous victory was the climax of the day, in which the Americans showed best in the trials qualifying four men each for the semi-finals in the 100 metres dash and 800 metres run, and three each in the high jump and the 400 metres hurdles. Ritola covered the distance in 30 minutes 23 1-5 seconds, made a few weeks ago.

After shaking off his most dangerous rival, Wide, of Sweden, Ritola spurred-egged the field and finished nearly 200 yards ahead of Wide. Paavo Nurmi, greatest of all Finnish athletes, was unexpectedly withdrawn, but two other Finns, Berg and Sipila, captured third and fourth places, with two British runners, Harper and Britton, in fifth and sixth places.

All four American starters were lapped by Ritola, the first American to finish being Verne H. Booth, Johns Hopkins university, who was far in the ruck, a lap and a quarter behind the winner.

Myrra's winning throw of the javelin was 62.6 metres, equivalent to nearly 207 feet. Finland, however, failed in its expected cleanup, landing but one other place, fourth.

Although the chief glory of the colorful inaugural day, of nearly five hours of competition among the athletes of forty-five nations striving for Olympic laurels, went to Finland, the formidable forces of the United States built a groundwork for prospective triumphs in other events in which the elimination trials only were conducted this afternoon. The Americans qualified in all but two entries in the trials of four contests and are therefore in good position for further honors. The finals in the 100 metres; 400 metres hurdle and running high jump will be held tomorrow and the semi-finals of the 800 metres run.

America's total of 14 men qualifying in these preliminaries surpasses the showing of any of its rivals. Great Britain and France being next with seven each, while Canada has four and Finland only two.

The only Americans who failed to survive these qualifying tests were R. L. Juday, high jumper, who was eliminated when he failed to clear six feet in the competition, which required a height of 1.83 metres, or 6 feet 1 inch, and C. F. Coulter, who finished fourth, just outside the last qualifying place in the second semi-final heat of the 400 metres hurdles.

GIANTS END HOME STAY WITH WIN AND LOSS

Polo Grounds, New York, July 6.—The New York Giants ended their home stay today with the eastern clubs, dividing a double header with the Philadelphia club, winning the first game by a score of 5 to 1, and losing the second game 2 to 0. In the second contest Jimmy Ring shut out the Giants with five hits, it being the first time they were blanked this season.

The Phillies were saved from a shut out in the first game, by scoring one run in the ninth inning on three singles. Frank Frisch played six innings of the first game and retired in favor of Landstrom to rest his injured leg, but went back and played the entire second game.

Cy Williams' ninth home run of the season and Schultz's four-base drive were the only runs scored in the second game. The Giants won three and lost two of the five games played with the Phillies. The scores:

CARDS HIT HARD AND WIN EASILY FROM CUBS

St. Louis, July 6.—Blades' three base hit scoring three runs in the first, followed by Freigau's single scoring Blades, drove Jacobs from the box and tied up the game for the Cardinals in the fourth game of the series with Chicago today. The score was 13 to 4. The Cubs rally in the second brought in three runs and one in the third retired Haynes. Smith stole three bases, and the Cardinals worked three double plays, scoring freely in the final inning. Score:

THREADMAKERS WIN EASILY FROM MERIDEN CLUB

Willimantic had an easy time defeating Meriden in a Connecticut State game at Recreation park Saturday afternoon, the score reading 5 to 1. "Rube" Richards in the box for the home club was practically invincible, holding the Silver City national guardsmen to three scattered hits. These were the only visitors to reach first, one scoring, the second being run down between first and second while the third was left on base. The visitors' only tally came in the eighth when Millerich singled, went to third on a wild pitch by Richards and scored on an out at first.

The locals did their scoring by easy stages, the first one coming in the fourth on an error, a sacrifice and Flaherty's single to short. Another tally was added in the fifth without the semblance of a hit, three misplays by Meriden infielders doing the trick. A third run was registered in the sixth when Kamyk doubled to left and took third when Millerich let the ball go through his legs. Richards single through short brough the tally over.

The seventh inning did not see the usual tally but was made up in the eighth when ntwo were chalked

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

LITTLE CHANGE IN BUSINESS SITUATION.

New York, July 6.—(By The A. P.)—With a holiday breaking into the past week, reports received in industrial and financial circles indicated little change in the business situation. Money has remained easy, the markets have been steady and grain prices have been fairly well maintained. Flotation of the Hungarian reconstruction loan has drawn attention to cheerful views of the European situation.

The steel industry still has been exceremely quiet. Production amounting to only about 25 or 40 per cent. of capacity, and new buying perhaps 30, per cent. Pig iron remained weak without signs that a turn was imminent. Coke prices were lower, wage reductions in independent plants being a factor. As the mid-summer shut downs are at hand, no immediate increase in activity is anticipated. It was emphasized, however, that improvement in operations was bound to occur within a few months, as stocks were being liquidated and production was materially below consumption.

Car loadings on the railroads remained practically stationary at a level slightly above 900,000 cars a week.

WEEKLY BOND REVIEW.

New York, July 6.—(By The A. P.)—Temporary stiffening of money rates and intermittent profit taking held bond prices last week slightly below the year's record high levels previously attained. Relaxing activity was accompanied by waning interest in railroad securities, but a number of foreign, industrial and public utility liens developed independent strength.

Participation of New York bankers in the flotation of an international reconstruction loan for Hungary constituted an important step in foreign financing developments. While the American portion, $7,500,000, was relatively small in contrast with the $50,000,000 total, the offering coupled with the United States government's subordination of war claims to the loan, demonstrated the willingness of this country to aid European rehabilitation.

THE STOCK MARKET SATURDAY.

New York, July 6.—A brisk demand for the Northwestern railroad shares, apparently predicated on the belief that higher wheat prices will bring them increased prosperity, featured Saturday's half holiday session of the stock market. Trading was in good volume at the opening, but the market soon lapsed into a state of lethargy, the total sales being the smallest of any session since August 11, 1922. "Big Four" led the advance in the rails by jumping 4 points to a new 1924 top at 120, and was followed into new high ground by Northern Pacific, Great Northern preferred and Chicago Northwestern. Southern railway established a record high for all time at 65¾ and then cancelled the day's gain on profit taking.

NORWICH TOWN

At the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church the service was most impressive, including sermon, baptism, reception of members, and communion service. The very large congregation included many visitors, also several members who are located out of town, who have been passing their vacation here.

In his interesting sermon, Rev Gurdon P. Bailey preached from the Book of Acts.—8:36, and a part of the 31st verse. And Philip ran thither to Him, and heard Him read the prophet Esaias, and said: Understandest thou what Thou readest? And he said, how can I, except some man should guide me?

At the close of the sermon, Rev. Mr. Bailey administered the Rite Baptism to Harriet Estelle Ricker and Joyce Ricker, children of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ricker. Five candidates were received into the fellowship of this church, with Rev. Mr. Bailey officiating, also baptizing two of the candidates, Miss Ruth Jones Hyde and Mrs. Martha Anna Grant. The others received were—Mrs. Frank Chapman, Mrs. Harry Hyde, the latter by letter from St. Paul's church, New Haven, and Louis S. Vergason.

It was expected that these new members would be included in the large class which united with this church Easter Sunday, (at that time there being sixty-three taken in) but serious circumstances such as illness etc., prevented them so doing.

Immediately after Rev. Mr. Bailey extended the right hand of fellowship to the candidates, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed with an unusually large number of communicants. This concluded the morning services after the benediction by Rev. Mr. Bailey.

For the pleasure of the Backus Hospital patients on Fourth of July, this church contributed seven nice loaves of cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard LaField of Plainville returned home Sunday afternoon, after spending Independence Day and the week end as guests of Edwin R. Scott and his daughter Miss Mabelle Scott, of Town street.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb had as callers Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Golkowske and little son Bill, of Whitneyville, who have been visiting relatives in Norwich and Taftville over the week end. Returning with them was Mr. Golkowske's sister, Miss Alma Golkowske of Pratt street, who will spend several days in Whitneyville.

Mr. Golkowske who for the past five years has been a most efficient salesman for a large wholesale flour company in New York city since locating near New Haven has been New England representative for the company.

For fourteen months the Golkowske family occupied the lower apartment in Dr. Lamb's house at 15 Town street.

Having passed a month's vacation with his family on Upper Washington street, Woodbury O. Rogers, left Sunday afternoon for Boston, thence to Houlton, Maine, where he will resume his business interests.

Relatives and friends in Norwich are anticipating the home-coming of Rev. and Mrs. Edward Huntington Smith of Ing Hok, China, who with two of their children are on their way to spend a leave of absence of one and one-half years in this country. They reached Vancouver, B. C., Wednesday July 2nd on the Empress of Australia.

The Smith family upon arriving at Montreal on Sunday were expected to proceed to Saratoga Springs, New York, where they will be guests today (Monday) remaining over night at the home of Rev. Mr. Smith's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. T. Snowden Thomas.

Owen S. Smith of Huntington avenue, accompanied by his grand-daughter, Miss Helen Smith who since the closing of college has been visiting her grandparents, will motor to Hartford Tuesday to meet his son's family and convey them to Norwich Town that evening. They will spend much of their time while in the United States at the Smith home here. Miss smith who spent three years in study in this country being a student at Mount Holyoke college has not seen her parents during that period.

MOTOR VEHICLE DEPT. RECEIPTS INCREASE $831,141.50 IN YEAR

With the end of the fiscal year and the balancing of the accounts of the Motor Vehicle Department through June 30, 1924, it is discovered that the increase in collections from June 30, 1923, to June 30, 1924, inclusive, over the corresponding preceding fiscal year is $831,141.50. This is a gain of 19.6 per cent.

The increase is along normal lines of past years. In former years it has been the case, with but one exception that the increase in registrations and in the general activities of the department, as indicated by fees, has been approximately 20 per cent per year.

In view of the fact that early in the year it seemed that the increase in number of cars placed on the road during 1924 would be abnormal, it is interesting to note that such has not been the case but that the number has corresponded closely to the increases of other years.

A complete schedule of receipts for the fiscal year is as follows:

NORWICH FAIR PREMIUM LIST IS ISSUED

The premium list of the New London county agricultural society for the Norwich fair to be held September 1, 2, and 3, was released Saturday and is being sent to life members of the society and to last year's premium winners, as well as to others who apply. The 1924 list is somewhat different in detail from previous years things of the same general plan. The cover is an attractive golden rod yellow and is without advertising. A table of contents has been added, the program of former books eliminated, an announcement of the exclusive concessions added. There is also a tabulation of some of the principal advantages of the fair. The reading matter is restricted to the right hand page and in that portion dealing with fair regulation, side captions are used to advantage. Another interesting feature tried out this year is the grouping of all material concerning each department and class under its own heading. The class, its superintendents, its judge and the times of judging will be found together in every case throughout the book. New names appearing in the last include W. J. Koonz of Norwich who will act as superintendent of the flower show, which was one of the outstanding features of the 1923 fair. Phillip McNamara, well known among Norwich people, assumes the job of juvenile department superintendent.

On the whole the book is a credit to the society.

LIQUOR CHARGES MAKE MOST JAIL CASES

Registrations at the four county jails within the confines of the second congressional district totaled eighy-six Saturday. At the Windham county jail at Brooklyn Assistant Jailer Walter Tripp reports twenty-three prisoners, most of whom were sentenced for violations of the liquor law. He reports the farm is in fine shape and expects to harvest potatoes late this month.

... county jail at Tolland, now has a registration of nineteen, four of whom are women. The prisoners were entertained with a display of fireworks by Sheriff Fred O. Vinton of Eagleville and Jailer Erstein Clough.

Jailer Oscar O. Main of the New London county jail at Norwich reported that he had under his care thirty prisoners, practically all of whom were sentenced for violations of the liquor law.

At the Middlesex county jail at Haddam, there are fourteen inmates.

Glove making uses up a large quantity of eggs, one firm alone requiring 3,000 yolks a week in one process of preparing kid.

PROPOSES THAT TOWNS GIVE 100 FOOT RIGHT OF WAY

A recommendation that future additions of roads in Connecticut to the state trunk line system by the general assembly be contingent upon the willingness of towns directly benefitted to provide a 00 foot right of way is to be made by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald in his forthcoming report to the governor. It will be his first annual report. This suggestion, he points out, is based on the belief that the main line routes of travel through Connecticut of the future must be much wider than existing roadway to keep pace with the growth of motor truck and passenger auto transportation.

Under such an arrangement it would be unnecessary in years to come to buy property abutting the highways for widening purposes, and it would be possible for the highway commission to meet the demand for beautifying the highways by the planting of shade trees along the borders.

Commissioner Macdonald's plan contemplates no change in the present method of the legislature in adding certain sections of roadway to the established trunk line system. He would add, however, the provision that before the work of building the road be started, the towns concerned shall furnish the state with a right of way measuring 100 feet between fence lines. This would not mean that the resulting roadway would be 100 feet wide, but would permit the establishment of a hard-surfaced road in the center, with dirt roads adjoining, the planting of rows of shade trees and the systematic erection of telegraph, telephone and power lines.

In addition, within the 100-foot space, provisions would have to be made in some cases for sidewalks and trolley lines, together with sewers and water works in all cases. This plan has been decided upon by the highway department as a result of the need in this state of wider hard surfaced roads. Commissioner Macdonald and the engineering staff of the department feel that such an arrangement would be of great benefit to the entire state.

Made 3,669 Mile Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson R. Grover, Miss Viola Grover and J. Harlow Bogue returned home Thursday evening from an automobile trip of 3,669 miles covering Pottsdam, Montreal, Thousand Islands, Niagara Falls, Cleveland, Gettysburg battle fields and return via Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. The party left Norwich on June 17th and while on the trip attended the graduation exercises of Miss Grover at Crane Normal Institute of Music, Pottsdam, N. Y. At the Thousand Islands they met Walter E. Turner and enjoyed a fine visit with him.

SIMON PETER'S PLAINT PRIEST'S SERMON THEME

"Master, we have labored all the night, and have taken nothing," the cry to Simon Peter to the Saviour, from the gospel read in all the masses throughout the Catholic world, Sunday, the fourth after Pentecost Luke 5:1-11, the miracle of the draught of fishes, was the text from which Rev. Rocco J. Guerriero preached at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church to a congregation filling auditory and galleries. For how many must this be the cry when they reach their death bed, said the preacher—so many labor all their lives dazzled by the glitter of earthly ambitions and success, concerned with passions and luxuries, forgetful of matters spiritual, so that at the last they are forced to confess that, in spite of all their efforts, they have taken nothing.

"O, Lord, look down upon me, have pity upon me, for I am alone and poor." was the cry of David, who with all his riches realized that the time was coming when, in death, he would be of no more account that would be the poorest beggar. The lesson deduced in the brief instruction was the vital importance of accumulating, not worldly wealth, but good deeds, kind words, acts of charity, against that inevitable accounting time, when only those will attain eternal happiness of whom it can be said that their lives have entitled them to die in the Lord, to have true rest while their good deeds live after them.

In giving Holy Communion, Father Guerriero had the assistance of the rector, Rev. M. H. May.

CLOSED DOORS.

"And when thou hast shut the door—pray." Matt. vi. 5.

Deep in that mystery named thy Soul,
Where thoughts their origin conceal,
Fair cherubim their wings unfold
Above the ark where thou mayst kneel.

Priest of this Temple of thy Life
That mystic chamber God has wrought
Apart from all of noise and strife,
And oft its precinct should be sought.

That secret chamber host thou know—
Holy of Holies should it be—
Alone into its shadows go
Would'st hear thy Father whisper thee

But close the door when thou w'dst pray
Nor let world tumults enter there—,
Discordant voices shut awya,
Mind not the knock of vexing care

Nor leave the door to swing awide,
Keep tryst with thy Best Friend a while,
He'd have thee listen, should He chide
Or give His kind, rewarding smile.

Thy troubled heart may then find peace,
Turned in its lock the fastening key—
Though clamors outside fail to cease,
Heed not when thou with God w'dst be.

Calm 'dst thou know?? Wilt find it there
Mid'st the soft hush of that still place—
Sincere desires of soul gauge prayer.
Behind closed doors unveils God's face
—Rev. George G. Phipps, in Hartford Transcript.

JUNE NIGHT.

If that be silence there which here is song
What echoes shall prolong
These cadences?
Will those pure pauses be
Soft as this music—is
When time falls mute upon eternity?
Where all is fair forever, will white wreams
Lift like the lilies in some garden bed
The petals of perpetual flowers—
Untarnished gleams to shed
For those who plucked these roses and these hours
Pale peace instead?
There is no darkness on the destiny
Of yonder years I
They move
Lit by some far fidelity
Of some unimaginable love.
Will never any shadows fall like these
To break our hearts with memories
Who knew the tides of passion and the tears
Drawn by this moon's inconstancy?
—Anne Goodwin Winslow, in North American Review.

The increasing demand for platinum has led to the invention of a process of saving the fine powdery grains of this metal found in the gold placer deposits of southern Oregon and elsewhere. The platinum being in a state of very fine divisions, almost in the form of dust, will not settle in a placer sluice as long as the water is briskly stirred. After the metal-bearing has passed over a riffle table, on which nearly all the gold settles, it is drawn more slowly over a coco mat riffle, on which the platinum settles, and is then collected by rinsing the coco mats over tanks.

M'ADOO VOTE IS FORCED TO NEW LOW RECORD

Coalition Forces Launched Night Attack on the McAdoo Lines Battering Down His Ballot to 333 1-2 in 87th Ballot Lowest Point it Has Touched Since Opening of the Democratic Convention—Governor Smith Passed McAdoo in 86th Ballot and Latter Loses His One-Third Veto Power—Convention Adjourns for Night as Mark of Sympathy for President and Mrs. Coolidge on Death of Their Son.

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 7.—Charging down on the McAdoo lines with a new ferocity the coalition forces in the democratic national convention tonight swept the McAdoo votes down to their lowest point.

Governor Smith, for the first time, took the lead over Mr. McAdoo and reduced his opponent to a pont where he had lost his power of a one-third veto over the selection of a candidate.

Then when the coalition forces were riding on the crest of the wave they got an adjournment of the convention until tomorrow morning at 10.30 o'clock.

The convention actually adjourned as a mark of sympathy and respect for President and Mrs. Coolidge on the death of their son, but before the word of the president's son was received the managers of the coalition forces had planned the adjournment at high water mark.

The smashing attack on the McAdoo lines was accompanied with raids for Ralston and for Glass. The attackers took back trophies for each.

Between adjournment this afternoon and reassembling time tonight a conference was held in the office of Thomas Taggart, the Indiana leader and sponsor for Senator Ralston. Mr. Taggart denied its purpose was to discuss a move to center on Senator Ralston but a majority of those present favored concentrating on the Indiana candidate.

Out of this conference and various movements under the surface the Ralston boom emerged once more from the temporary eclipse of last week. At the same time in another sector of the anti-McAdoo forces plans were being made to give "a run" to Senator Glass of Virginia who had gathered considerable strength during the afternoon session. Some of the anti-McAdoo leaders were predicting that a nomination would be made before the convention ended the session begun tonight others were not so optimistic.

As the hot and tired delegates filed into the hall they discovered a new source of discouragement. A Hawaiian quartet was in place with ukeleles ready to sing. It was broiling hot in the Madison Square Garden. But the brass band apparently didn't mind. It blew itself clear through the overture from William Tell, with the score absolutely uncut.

At 8.43 o'clock eastern daylight time, Chairman Walsh began rapping for order. The Rev. E. L. Powell of Louisville, Ky., led in prayer.

The first slide of the evening was Indiana going back to Senator Ralston. Her thirty had been going twenty to McAdoo and ten to Smith. In addition to that Florida had given the Indiana senator two and Illinois had given him two.

Michigan then threw in twenty to Ralston and gave ten to Smith. The vote had hitherto been scattered.

Mississippi stuck with the twenty she had given Ralston during the day and that made Ralston's total so far seventy four votes. Missouri however, stayed with Carter Glass for her thirty six.

Nevada's whole six went solid for Smith. They had been held under the unit rule for McAdoo.

In the 85th ballot Michigan gave Ralston 19, Smith ten and one to McAdoo. In New Hampshire Newton D. Baker picked up six votes taking four of them from Smith. In North Carolina McAdoo lost two and a half and Davis gained two.

Further inroads were made on the McAdoo strength during the 85th ballot reducing it to a new low record. On that ballot the leaders stood:

McAdoo 380.5; Smith 363; Ralston 47; Davis 68; Glass 67.5. This was a loss of 8 for McAdoo and two for Smith. It was a gain of one for Ralston and a gain of two for Davis. It was a loss of five for Glass.

There having been no decision on the 85th ballot the clerk went again at the interminable job of calling the roll. This time he was on the 86th lap, the only calling clerk in the world who ever dialed an 86th roll call in the democratic national convention.

On this ballot Iowa deserted the McAdoo column and went to E. T. Meredith, her favorite son. Unless McAdoo gained from states yet to come he was scout to lose his one-third veto power.

The summary of the 86th ballot follows:

Smith 360; McAdoo 353.5; Ralston 62; Glass 72 1-2; Davis 65 1-2.

The result showed a loss of 27 for McAdoo, of three for Smith, two and a half for Davis and gains of five each for Ralston and Glass.

During the 86th ballot Nevada which had switched from McAdoo to Smith, switched to Governor Ritchie of Maryland.

On the 87th ballot the coalition forces battered down the McAdoo strength still further and the leaders in the contest stood this way:

Smith 361.5; McAdoo 332.5; Ralston 93; Glass 71; Davis 66.5.

This was a loss of twenty for McAdoo and a loss of one and a half for Glass. It was a gain of one and a half for Smith. A gain of one and a half for Davis and a gain of one for Ralston.

Just before adjournment Senator A. Jones of New Mexico, under unanimous consent introduced a resolution which he asked to have laid on the table until tomorrow, providing for a conference of the delegates, comparable to the conference of the representatives of the candidates Sunday.

It proposed that each delegation appoint one member to attend such a conference with the same representation in voting power as his delegation as in the convention. Senator James said it twould be possible for the committees to consider combinations of tickets and probably make recommendations for the nominations for president and vice president.

At the conclusion of Senator Jones' statement Chairman Walsh announced to the convention the death of Calvin Coolidge, Jr. A wave of expressions of sympathy and regret swept the floor and galleries as Chairman Walsh suggested an adjournment of the convention as a mark of respect and sympathy. The convention adjourned until 10.30 tomorrow morning in the greatest quiet and the most prefect order of any time it has been in session.

Fistic Encounter At Veterans' Bureau

Washington, July 7—Brigadier General Hines, director of the veterans' bureau, was involved in a fistic encounter with a former service man in his office at the bureau today, suffering a gash over the left eye and bruises which required medical attention.

According to witnesses, the veteran who engaged in the affair was Thomas B. Deaver, of Houston, Texas, who had called to protest that a medical examination made at San Antonio had injured his claim before the bureau. Deaver left immediately after the fray and officials said no charges would be filed against him.

When Deaver protested to General Hines against the report of three physicians who had examined him, it was said, the director called in Captain C. O. Shaw, chairman of the board of appeals, and the three were going over the case when the encounter developed. Shaw, it was added attempted to separate the two and was turned upon by Deaver but the affair finally was quelled by Shaw, a messenger, and P. E. Raidy, secretary to General Hines.

According to bureau officials, the director offered Deaver a new examination or hospitalization but the latter declined, unless the examination was made in the director's office. This, General Hines was said to have declined to accede to.

SOCIALISTS ENLIST UNDER THE LA FOLLETTE BANNER

Cleveland, July 7.—(By the A. P.)—The national convention of the socialist party of America tonight formally enlisted under the La Follette presidential banner. It adopted a report offered by a majority of a committee of 15, recommending that the convention concur in the action of the conference for progressive political action in endorsing the La Follette candidacy on his platform.

The vote on this report was 108 to 17.

The action came after a six hour debate in which 32 of the 157 delegates in the convention took part.

Eight of the speakers argued for a minority report which would have resulted in a separate socialist national ticket and platform and three spoke for a substitute which would have accepted the majority idea with reservations as to the vice presidency.

By adopting the majority report the convention concurred not only in La Follette's endorsement, but also in last week's conference decision to postpone a vice presidential nomination until after the democratic convention. It also pledged itself to cooperate with the conference in national elections and in such state and local elections as may be endorsed by the smaller units of the socialist party.

The convention asked increased representation on the national committee of the conference, agreed to send full representation to the new party organization convention next January and instructed its delegates to work for the formation of a complete new party based upon a platform containing as a minimum the planks adopted by the conference on July 5.

LA FOLLETTE CONFERS WITH THIRD PARTY LEADERS

Washington, July 7.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, endorsed as a presidential candidate at Cleveland by the progressive national conference, was in conference from time to time at his home today with leaders who attended the Cleveland gathering, but made no public statement.

There were several problems to be considered at the conferences, among them the type of the vice presidential candidate who, will be the running mate of the senator, and the method of getting electors upon tickets in various states.

The Cleveland convention authorized a committee to consult with Senator La Follette and name a vice presidential candidate with his approval. It is considered most likely that second place will be reserved for some individual who has been in the past more or less identified with the democratic party in national affairs.

Motion to Quash Doheny Indictments

Counsel For Defendants Claims Indictments Are Unlawful Because Department of Justice Representatives Were in Jury Room.

Washingotn, July 7—E. L. Doheny and E. L. Doheny, Jr., today attacked the indictments returned against them in the District of Columbia supreme court as a result of the senate oil disclosures.

Through their attorney, Frank J. Hogan, of Washington, a motion to quash the indictments was filed on the grounds that they were unlawful because department of justice representatives were present in the grand jury room.

The motion will not be argued until the court reconvenes in October for the fall term.

Hogan contended that the agent's presence was "contrary to law and subversive of the rights of his clients," because it was the intent of congress to take the prosecution of the cases out of the hands of the department of justice and to that end President Coolidge appointed Atlee Pomerene and Owen J. Roberts as special counsel.

The law provides, Hogan contended, that no person not connected with the case may appear before the grand jury and representatives of the department of justice had no more right to enter the grand jury room than any other outsider. The presence of a person not legally entitled to appear before the grand jury "vitiates the entire proceeding and nullifies any indictment I may render," he argued.

MAINE VILLAGE DOOMED BY RAGING FOREST FIRE

Portland, Me., July 7.—The village of Masardis, 16 miles from Ashland, in the northeastern corner of Maine, was said to be doomed to destruction tonight by a forest fire which has been sweeping toward the village since Sunday morning. With the fire driven by a high wind, out of control and spreading, the crew of several hundred fire fighters have abandoned the struggle, and were tonight fleeing for their lives before the flames, reports received here by telephone said. It was feared that the fire would reach the settlement before midnight.

While the men of the little town, which numbers a population of 1500, were working in a last effort to check the fire before it reached the village, the women and children were reported to be leaving the town, taking with them such of their possessions as they could carry. Those endeavoring to halt the flames, were handicapped by the lack of water and the fact that the forest, through which the fire was spreading, fan-like, reached directly into the outskirts of the village.

The settlement consists of approximately 300 buildings and several lumber mills. The fire, which has been threatening the place, started early Sunday morning near Garfield, 10 miles away, and has since swept over more than 5,000 acres of timberland.

The fire is but one of several now raging in the Aroostook county woods. One at Presque Isle has burned over a wide area on a three-mile front. Others were reported at Hanford siding, Stockholm, Houlton and near Caribou.

DENIES APPLICATION OF ACTORS' FIDELITY LEAGUE

New York, July 7.—Supreme Court Justice Platzek today denied the application of the Actors' Fidelity League, made through Miss Ruth Chatterton, its treasurer, for an injunction to prevent the Actors' Equity association and the Managers' Protective association from carrying out their contract providing that 50 per cent of every cast be equity members.

Miss Chatterton had contended that the agreement tended to drive fidelity members and independent actors off the stage.

Supreme Court Justice McCook upheld the legality of the equity contract when on May 28 he denied an application for a similar injunction made by the Producing Managers' association. His decision was affirmed by the appellate division of the supreme court on June 27.

RAILROAD SWITCH NOT PROPERLY CLOSED

Washington, July 7.—The wreck of a Wabash passenger train at Williamsport, Ind., on June 1, which resulted in the death of 13 persons and injury to 48, was caused by failure of a railroad employe properly to lock a switch, which opened as the train passed over it, Director Borland of the bureau of safety of the interstate commerce commission reported to the commission today.

The report said the switch had been last closed by Head Brakeman Torrance of the Wabash, who later, in response to the question, told Conductor Melson that it had been properly closed.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, JR., DIED LAST NIGHT AT 10.30 O'CLOCK

President and Mrs. Coolidge at Bedside of Youngest Son at Walter Reed Hospital When End Came After Five Day Battle Against Ravages of Disease which Sapped Reserve Strength of Boy's Frail Constitution—Collapse Began at 6:30 Last Night With Sinking Spell, the Fourth in 24 Hours—Young Sufferer Withstood Crisis After Crisis With Bravery and Fortitude.

Washington, July 7.—Calvin Coolidge, Jr., son of the president, died tonight at Walter Reed hospital of blood poisoning.

The end came after the boy had battled with the utmost bravery and fortitude for five days against a disease which had racked his body with pain and sapped the reserve strength of his frail constitution.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, who had maintained constant vigil at the hospital were at his bedside, hopeful, and cheering and comforting their son to the last.

A sinking spell, the fourth he had suffered in 24 hours, brought death. Notwithstanding the use of oxygen and other restoratives the courage which had withstood crisis after crisis and had beaten death off repeatedly, was unable to meet the final attack. The collapse began at 6.30 o'clock and he gradually sank into eternity. He died at 10.30 o'clock.

Every resource of medical science was brought into play in the vain effort to save young Calvin's life. An operation was performed on the left leg last Saturday night to drain off the poison and blood transfusions and oxygen were resorted to in the later days of his illness.

The natural strength of a boy of 16, however, which was counted on as the most resisting force to the creeping poison was unable to meet the issue, and after having fought a brave but always losing fight he succumbed.

One of the final complications and the one which the physicians were unable to meet was the formation of gas on the stomach. The organ was washed out repeatedly in an effort to put it in condition to retain nourishment, but the effort was unsuccesful.

Young Calvin was rushed to the hospital Saturday and an operation on the same night revealed inflammation of the bone marrow of the left leg, where the infection first localized in part. A slight rally followed, but on Sunday night his condition grew so serious that blood transfusion and oxygen administrations were resorted to.

Three sinking spells Sunday night brought him to the point of death. A slight rally Monday gave slight hope but soon thereafter he began again to lose ground and he never rallied again.

The infection developed from a broken blister on the right foot sustained during a tennis match with his brother, John, on the White House courts last Monday. At first paying no attention to it, the youth developed an alarming condition by Wednesday night and physicians were summoned.

The poison, however, once started, had spread so rapidly that medical skill was without avail. A number of specialists were called to act with White House physicians on the case and a desperate fight for life was made by the boy who struggled in great pain with high fever.

President and Mrs. Coolidge bore up bravely. Soon after the death they went to the White House, where the older brother, John, was awaiting them.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, JR., A TYPICAL AMERICAN BOY

Washington, July 7.—Calvin Coolidge, Jr., was a typical American boy, mischievous and full of vigor, but in public almost quiet and demure. He was always the first with a hearty laught however, at the slightest provocation.

"He has a remarkably sweet disposition for a boy," a close friend of the family remarked recently, "but make no mind about it, he's all boy."

Calvin was born April 13, 1908, at Northampton, Mass., and went through the grade schools of that city and then entered the high school, completing the first year after his father had come to Washington as vice president in 1921. Both he and his brother, John, who is 17 years of age, the next year entered Mercerberg Academy at Mercerberg, Pa., John being graduated last month while Calvin had another year before him. John is to enter Amherst, the president's alma mater this fall and Calvin was to have followed him.

An excellent student, usually ranking high in his class, Calvin was bright and studious but not a "crammer" in the school sense of studiousness. He also was a good debater and had qualified for the academy debating team. He was interested in athletics but his slight build kept him from making any records along that line, although he was an enthusiastic tennis and baseball player.

Summer vacation usually found Calvin with his brother, John, at their grandfather's home in Plymouth, Vermont, but last summer John attended the military training camp, at Camp Devens, Mass., while Calvin worked on a farm in the Connecticut valley of western Massachusetts. It was when at this work after his father had become president, his employer said to him excitedly, "so your father is president of the United States now," and the boy replied:

"Yes, sir, I suppose he is. What do you want me to tackle today?"

He had taken employment under contract and refused to break it to come to Washington in the interesting days of his father's assumption of the chief magistracy, preferring to complete the task to which he had set himself.

This summer vacation, however, the boys came to the White House but had planned to leave in a few days to attend the military training camp at Camp Devens.

As the sons of the president, John and Calvin had felt responsibility, but to a casual observer they would have appeared as any other American boys and this was the ideal for which their parents carefully trained them. It was the wish of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge that the boys be considered from an unofficial standpoint and as any other boys. For this reason they did not permit official bulletins to be issued by the physicians on the condition of Calvin and not until last Thursday when his case had taken a really serious turn did they make known his illness.

A frequent visitor at the White House has told how the president quite often was given to joshing the boys, but Calvin caught a joke usually in the making and side-tracked it with a laugh, finally leading the president to remark to the visitors it was no use trying his fun there.

The president, however, believed that the boys should be brought up in the good American way. A friend at the White House remarked recently that they showed no signs of "swell-headedness" to which another friend replied—"no, and they hadn't better."

GOV. COX ADDRESSES ELK'S OPENING SESSION

Boston, July 7—Addresses of welcome by Gov. Channing H. Cox, United States Senator David I. Walsh Mayor Curley and Grand Exalted Ruler James G. McFarland of Watertown, S. D., marked the formal opening here tonight of the 60th annual convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, which will continue throughout the week. The grand lodge of the order was scheduled to begin its executive session tomorrow.

As the delegates poured into the city today by train, boat and automobile they were greeted with the fraternal salutation—"Hello, Bill," flaunting on banners everywhere and displayed prominently in shop windows. The streets of downtown Boston were gay with flags, bunting and antlered insignia of the order. It was estimated tonight that 12,000 grand lodge members and more than 50,000 other Elks had arrived for the convention. These numbers, officials in charge of registration said, would be greatly augmented by Thursday, the day set for the annual parade.

Conspicuous among today's arrival was a large delegation from Dallas Lodge No. 71 of Dallas, Tex. This group, which was accompanied by a band and large drum corps, was uniformed in tan suits, with large sombreroes with metal studded hat bands. More than 600 members of the Philadelphia and Scranton, Pa., lodges, with their wives, arrived on the steamship Voltaire and will make the vessel their home throughout the convention.

A feature of the entertainment provided for visiting Elks on the opening day was a sham battle between sailors and marines at the navy yard and a bombing exhibition by airplanes.

AIMED AT DOWNFALL OF BRAZILIAN GOVERNMENT

Buenos Aires, July 7—(By the A. P.)—The situation in Sao Paulo, second largest city in Brazil, in the hands of insurrectionary forces which took possession of the government buildings Friday night and Saturday morning, remained vague this afternoon. The city which is the capital of Brazil's wealthiest state, was still cut off from communication and the censorship exerted in Rio Janeiro had not as yet been lifted.

The dispatch which passed the censor last night, saying that the insurrection had been suppressed and order restored, so far has not been confirmed from other sources. It is learned here from reliable sources that the outbreak was engineered by political opponents of President Bernardes, residing in Jilo, who, working through sympathizers in Sao Paulo, induced a contingent of persons there, supposedly supporters of Senor Bernardes, to join them. The plan was to seize political control of that state which would be used as a weapon to accomplish the downfall of the federal government.

TO LIQUIDATE NEW HAVEN CARRIAGE CO.

New Haven, July 7.—Directors of the New Haven Carriage company have decided to liquidate the business, it was made known today. This is one of the oldest industries here, having originally been started in Branford in 1838 and some forty years ago brought to this city. The slump in the carriage industry due to the encroachments then of automobile making, reduced demand and production but the company took on the making of automobile bodies as the demand for carriage bodies dwindled, and in recent years regained much of its prestige. It has a large plant in Water street, and the company's capitalization is $500,000. With the change in street transportation the company also went into electric motor cab building, and continued when gasoline burning vehicles replaced electric in general use.

The company will finish orders in hand and then liquidate. The company's president is Herbert Lloyd of Philadelphia.

WILLIMANTIC

In an attempt to save the reputation of Mike Kosek of No. 15 Main street on a charge of violating the liquor law, Edward Allbosek of No. 74 Ives street, local jitney driver, succeeded in apparently getting his friend out of trouble but got "in Dutch" himself. Following Monday morning's session of the police court Allbosek was placed under arrest on a charge of transporting liquor. The young man was considered in the light of a witness for the state in the case against Kosek. Another supposedly state witness, James Donohue of No. 13 Jackson Place also denied that he had told the officers that he had purchased liquor or home brew at Kosek's home. After these unexpected developments, the case against Kosek was nolled and he was ordered discharged.

The raid at Kosek's home was made at 6 o'clock on the afternoon of July Fourth by Chief of Police Allan MacArthur, Captain Thomas F. Grady, Lieut. Frank McLean and County Investigator William E. Jackson. Two cases of home brew were found in the pantry with an empty bottle on the kitchen table with a glass and two bottles with liquor dregs close by. Donohue who was sitting at the table. Chief MacArthur testified in regard to the raid and the contraband which was taken. He said that Donohue had told the officers that he had just paid for a bottle of the home brew.

When called to the stand, however, Donohue denied that he had told the officers that he had paid for any beer at Kosek's house. He said that he had offered the proprietor money but the latter would not take it. He said he had had drinks before at Kosek's place, but the latter would take no money. Donohue was closely cross-examined by Prosecuting Attorney Samuel B. Harvey in regard to telling the officers that he paid for the liquor, but stuck to his story.

He told the court that if he had said such a thing he did not recollect it. He admitted that he was "feeling pretty good" at the time but he did not believe he told the officers anything about paying for the liquor.

Allbosek denied that he purchased a pint of liquor either from the accused or at his home on the night of July 3. He said that Lieut. McLean came to his home and woke him up and talked to him in such a way that he became frightened and in order to get out of the difficulty, admitted that he secured the liquor at Kosek's home. Prosecuting Attorney Harvey then told Allbozek that he was facing a charge of perjury by not telling the truth. Some of the officers in the court room conferred with Attorney Harvey and Lieutenant McLean faced Allbozek when the latter was again asked if it was not true that he had told the officers that he had purchased the pint of liquor from Mike Kosek and paid $1.50 for it. The witness denied that it was true and said he told the officer what he did because the latter "razzed" him and made him afraid.
